Net Traps.

Important Notice.—To those catchers who require a cheaper class of clap net or spring net trap. Being actual manufacturers, and not dealers, we are in a position to supply any particular style, size, quality, and specification, at a cost of 10 per cent. less than can be obtained elsewhere. Fullest enquiries invited. —Young and Son.

THE NEATEST CAGE FRONTS,

12 by 12 3d., 14 by 12, 3½d., 16 by 12 4d., 18 by 12 4½d., 10 by 12 5d., 24 by 14 6d.; odd sizes 4d. foot, 6d. cheaper for a dozen; any size pierced bars, ½, 9-16ths, ⅝, ¾, 7d. dozen, 40 inch, 80 inch 1/2 dozen; tinned wire, 7 lbs. 1/8, 14 lbs. 3/2, 28 lbs. 6/-; wood bars, ½, ⅝, 7d. dozen. This is my 5th year of advertising, and never had a letter of complaint from the Editor; on the other hand, I have hundreds of testimonials testifying to the excellence of my workmanship and quality of my goods.—Pimm, 229, Icknield Port-rd., Birmingham.

BIRD LIME.

Ronda's new champion green Turkish, finest obtainable, not affected by sun. Birds caught come out quite clear of any trace of the lime; it can be removed from the sticks and used time after time. Try it, and accept no substitute. Post free 7½d. per tin.

Sole agent, A. G. DAVIS, Bird Specialist and Seed Merchant, 110 and 112, Tib Street, Manchester.

320 CHALLENGE BREEDING CAGES

were sold by me last season, and not one deposit was returned; for proof, write Editor of CAGE BIRDS. They are made from selected boards, mahogany stained outside, blue enamelled inside, with seed hoppers, sand trays, and loose wire fronts, 36in. long 4/6, 40in. 5/3, 46in. 6/-, 18in. high, 9in. from back to front; the back of these cages are made with one board, which is a great advantage, as there is nowhere for red mite to breed; cages of every description made to order.—Henry Morris, Cape Hill, Birmingham.

REMEMBER THIS.

When you buy catching appliances from me you get things that are of real service to you. For years past I have publicly invited anyone to have appliances on approval from me, test them side by side with others costing more money from other dealers, and if mine were not better value at less prices, to smash them up and I would refund their money in full. Could I afford to make this astounding offer unless I knew full well that it is impossible to get better articles than I sell? Clap nets, made from genuine ¼in. mesh thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½t. deep, 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-; ditto 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-, 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-, 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, are fitted complete with stave poles, pegs, and hemp lines, ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes stocked. Batfolding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/-; ditto on 19ft. poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 1¼in. mesh, 15 yards by 10ft., 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-: all geared and lined ready for use. Self-acting spring net traps, 24in. long 18in. wide, 1/-; ditto, 15in. long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to any others on the market, are by far the largest and can be baited for Hard and Softbills at same time. The only net traps used by Mr. Jeffreys, who is probably largest Nightingale catcher in England. Single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Registered Number 23927), 1/6 each. These traps are guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught. Round topped call cages, all wire tops, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; square topped ditto, all wire tops and every wire soldered, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Real Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely the strongest lime made, hold in all weathers, ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: This is the genuine Japanese lime, not merely name copied from others, and I give written guarantee that it will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, and at any time of year. Loose netting, made from genuine 60 S thread, ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. Lark netting, 1¼in. mash, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard post free. This netting is specially made for bird netting and must not be confused with the thick American cotton fishing netting often sold for bird netting for sake of extra profit. Every description of catching appliances in stock; send stamp for full printed list and hints on making bird nets; all nets sold by me are properly geared up so that they hang level and work true, not merely lines run through the netting, which allows wind to blow it all to one end. The men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. Nothing is spared to make nets as durable as possible, and every pair guaranteed to wear 20 years. (Imitators please copy, as usual.) All sent on approval and money refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. See following unsolicited testimonials: "Cooperage House, Riverside, Goole. July 17th.—Sir,—I want another pair nets. I had a pair from you three years ago and they gave every satisfaction.—Yours, C. Chesney." "2, Hollingdrake Yard, Doncaster. July 19th.—Sir,—Please send following. I had two pairs nets from you before and was perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Clayton." "6, Jockey-street, Swansea. July 26th.—Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime, same as last. I would not wish for better lime.—Yours, W. Rowe." "25, Cromwell-road, Rushden. July 27th.—Sir,—Please send following netting. A friend had some from you four years ago and it is as good as ever.—Yours, H. Kirby" "Ashover Rectory, nr. Chesterfield. July 31st. Sir,—Please send following. I have bought a good deal of birdlime and many birds from you, and always been satisfied.—Yours, F. Nodder." "24, Low Pleasance, Larkhall, July 31st. Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. I have used yours since I started, and never yet lost a bird.—Yours, Geo. Alexander." "32, Wormgate, Boston. Sir,—Received nets safe and am well satisfied. You give good value for money.—Yours, J. Dring." "13, Church Walk, Kempston. Sir,—Netting to hand and it is best I ever bought.—Yours, W. Fearn." "Hill-street, Raunds. Sir,—I have had nets out and they give every satisfaction.—Yours, E. Haxley." "12, Bantling Old-row, Annfield Plain. Sir,—I have tried the birdlime and find it best I ever had or have seen.—Yours, B. McKenna." "Rufford-road, Crossens. Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime. It is best I ever used, a certain catch every time. I only wish I had got it from you before instead of the rubbish I have used.—Yours, H. Jackson." "15, North-street, Exeter. Sir,—Clap nets I had from you are very satisfactory and work very well.—Yours, E. Bond." "Chancery-lane, Thrapston. Sir,—Please send another net trap. I set first one this morning and caught four birds.—Yours, A. Sutcliffe." "Clifton Cottage, Brownstown, Ireland. Sir,—I am delighted with clap nets. They are a very nice pair and work like the wind and are a pleasure to pull over.—Yours, F. Hales." I have thousands of similar letters to above, which prove to you who is the best man to supply catching appliances. I believe in giving everyone the utmost value at lowest prices, and serving them so well that not only will they buy from me again, but recommend their friends to do so also. Send stamp for full list and compare prices with others. See British bird column for other advert.

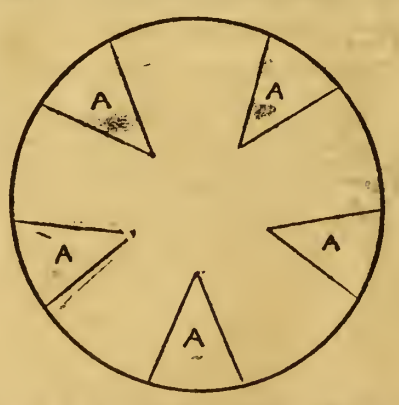
No. 338.
An Improved Red-mite Trap.
Sent by Mr. J. Denton, 40, Granville Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent.



I enclose you a sketch of an idea which I find very useful in the bird-room, and which costs but a trifle to make. It consists of an improved red-mite trap and perch which can be taken out to be cleaned in a short time. Get a piece of wood the size of perch for box or breeding cage; sharpen two pieces of wire about 2ins.

long; and drive these in the end for the back of perch; leave about ¼in. out and sharpen them so that they will fix in back of cage; cut two or three grooves in the perch from the wire about 1in. long, and then make a round hole, and fasten on the little brass plate. Put a little piece of cotton wool in the hole, and you will be surprised at the result. The plates you can buy at any ironmongers at 1½d. per doz.—J. Denton.

No. 339.
Home-made Nest Linings.
Sent by Mr. G. Morris, 50, Breckfield Road North, Liverpool.

To those of your readers who do not use the ready made nest linings, the enclosed sketch will be found very useful. Get a piece of old thick flannel, cut out a piece the size of the top of nest pan, and then cut out the pieces marked

A, when it will be found to fit the nest pan perfectly, without leaving any tucks, which would be otherwise the case. This is equal to any bought nest linings, and makes the nest very comfortable.—George Morris.

The Breeding, Rearing and Moulting of Yorkshire Canaries

By SAMUEL DEAN.

During the days of incubation the hen should be kept on as plain a diet as possible. I only allow, in addition to white seed, just a pinch of German summer rape about twice a week; then, on the day before the eggs are due to hatch, I place a small quantity of egg food in the cage in case the young hatch out somewhat before expected. You have no need to disturb the hen to get to know if the young are hatched; you can tell by listening with your ear near the nest-pan end of the cage, a faint chip, chip, denoting their arrival. On hearing this signal, egg food should be supplied, freshly made as often as possible; also a small pot of hemp seed and German rape should be kept in the cage.

If your hen will feed all right for a few days without green food, let her do so, the young will do better without it, say, up to when they are three days old; then a little could be given, and after they attain the grand old age of seven days, it can be given ad lib.

A Great Evil and its Cure.

One great evil during the breeding season, and one that causes great destruction, is diarrhœa in the nest. Should a hen get anything to give her this complaint, it is oftimes transferred to the young, and should they be under seven days' old, the old birds find it impossible to keep the nest clear or free from the droppings or excreta of the young, with the result that the nest gets foul and the young fade away and die. When this is observed to be the case, the young must be transferred to a clean nest daily, and treatment for the hen should be as follows: Add to egg food either a little powdered chalk or cuttlefish bone; give a little pinch of maw seed. Also prepare the following: Toast a good slice of bread until it is thoroughly brown—not burnt, grind it up nearly to a powder and give a spoonful in a separate vessel daily until the hen is recovered.

Baths should be given during the breeding season at least twice a week, but they should not be left on for hours at a time, and should never be given after dinner. Even on the longest days they should be removed by one or two o'clock at the latest. It is far better to put them in early in the morning and remove them as soon as the birds have had a splash. But be sure the day is bright and promising, as nothing does birds more harm than their being huddled up in a lump in a wet condition. On hot summer days the room floor can with advantage be sprayed with a disinfectant, and I can recommend camphor water particularly, as it makes the room quite cool and is very refreshing.

Leaving the Nest.

On the young birds reaching the age of about 17 to 18 days they should be nearly feathered, and will very likely be making up their minds to leave the nest at an early date, and will be very restless, especially when you approach the nest. So do not make much ado when feeding; keep your hands out of sight as much as possible. The longer they will stop in the nest the better they will be.

Nothing is much worse to deal with than a young bird that has "jumped the nest" at say 15 or 16 days. Such birds are always in the cage bottom, and are apt to get fouled, and maybe they will begin to pick some food from the cage bottom, with the result that diarrhœa sets in, and probably death follows. It is far better to get them out strong at 20 to 21 days' old; they will be more likely at that age to patronise the top perches more, and take to feeding themselves quite readily. I have personally often taken nests of young away on the same day as they left the nest, and have had no trouble whatever with them. Also, I like to have them away at 21 days if possible, and I never leave them with the parents after the twenty-fourth day.

It is advisable to remove young birds from their parents late in the evening. Should you be at home, feed them up as early as possible—at least an hour before dark; then just at dusk, when the old birds will be likely to have fed them up well for the night, remove them into a clean cage. Cover the cage floor with seed husks, fill up sced box about half full of plain Canary seed, sprinkle a little German summer rape on top, then pile up with crushed hemp; give also an egg glass full of food, made moderately good, then when they wake up in the early hours next morning, with a healthy appetite, they will in all likelihood make an onslaught on the soft food.

Should any, however, not appear to be eating, a little milk sop may be given, and the food placed in several places about the cage. They have only to learn once that food is to be had for the picking, and that they must go to the food, and that the food will not go to them; then in a day or two they will attack the crushed hemp. When they have eaten this layer off, refill once or twice until at about five weeks' old when they begin to crack the rape, and then gradually the white Canary seed. When this is noticed to be the case you can begin to wean them off egg food. Give slightly less each day up to seven weeks' old, after which it can be given in small quantities two or three times a week.

Beware of "Plucking."

As soon as the young are fit to leave their parents, you must look out for the hen wishing to go to nest again, and should she show signs of coming on for laying too early, beware of her plucking the young ones. Should she do so, it is best to take them away, and if they are not able to do for themselves, place them in either a bath cage or a show cage which hang on the front for the old birds to feed them through the wircs.

Do not take any risks in this matter, as should a hen, or a cock either, once start "plucking," it is very rarely they will leave the young alone before they are practically stripped of body feathers, or, at least, the tail feathers; and some hens will take these out and never touch the body feathers.

Should you be running one cock to two hens and before the young are ready for taking away you think the hen is coming forward again, you can just slip the cock bird in for a few minutes to make sure you don't have a nest of clear eggs. But keep your eye on him; see he doesn't maul the youngsters about or pull their feathers out.

Some cock birds are very keen and pugnacious towards youngsters, and in a very few minutes will make a complete mess of them. Others, again, will take very kindly to them, and assist the hen to rear them. Such, of course, can be left in with safety.

Diarrhœa and Over-drinking.

During the first few weeks the young birds are doing for themselves firstly look out for diarrhœa, and, secondly, keep your eye on the water-glass, to see they do not drink too much water. For the first-named, the following is a very useful mixture: Equal quantities of laudanum, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint, tincture of K.N. and spirits of camphor, ½oz. of each being a very useful quantity. Give about two or three drops in an ordinary drinking glass of water. The same will also act for the second complaint, as it keeps the birds from drinking too much.

A Long-Legged Plover.

The Stilt has legs longer in proportion to its body than any other bird. It looks quite out of proportion.

Tame Partridge.

Occasionally wild birds will allow themselves to be lifted off the nest. A case is recorded of a little schoolgirl finding a Partridge by the roadside, and carrying it home (about a mile) in her pinafore; she was unconscious of any offence. Her parents returned the captive, who immediately settled down upon the eggs and successfully hatched a brood of young ones.

Club Reports.

RUTHERGLEN AND DISTRICT O.A.

Monthly meeting took place on August 16th, in a side room of the Town Hall. In the absence of the President, Mr. Robert Livingstone presided. The secretary reported regarding First Feather Show. Mr. John Cowie was admitted as a new member. In view of the show to be held November 20th, Mr. Lappin was asked to get quotations regarding prices of catalogues and report at next meeting. The secretary impressed on the members the desirability of having a good attendance at the meetings, so that the next show might be a record one. This was all the business.—F. WILSON, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting, held August 21st, in the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding over a good attendance. A good deal of correspondence was placed before the members, amongst which was a notification from the secretary of the Yorkshire Canary Club to the effect that we had obtained their patronage for our annual show, November 19th and 20th, which was greatly appreciated by our members. This makes five specialist clubs up-to-date whose patronage we have had the pleasure of obtaining. It was decided that several important items be left over until we hear from the remaining specialist clubs, to whom we have applied for patronage. After the business was concluded, an animated discussion on various subject took place, and this kept the members greatly interested until time applied the closure to the meeting.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Adjourned committee meeting, held at Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, August 14th. Mr. F. Hammond in the chair. Decided "That value of prizes in novice section be stated in Year Book, selection of same to be decided at a future meeting"; "that contract for printing Year Book for 1909-10 be given to Messrs. Trewick and Woodhead." Also decided: "that block of Norwich Canary be accepted from the Editor of CAGE BIRDS, the same to be printed on front page of Year Book." Specials from the following gentlemen were accepted with thanks:—Messrs. Halliday and Chittenden, 5s.; Mr. J. Wilcock, 5s.; Mr. Sam Wilcock, electro-plated cruet, value 10s. List of prizes given for competitions—Open Competition: 1st, trophy value £3 3s.; 2nd, pair of oil paintings value £2; 3rd, trophy value £1; 4th, box of cigars value 10s. 6d.; 5th, goods to the value of 5s. Novice Competition: 1st, tea urn value £2 2s.; 2nd, special value £2; 3rd, special value 10s.; 4th, special value 5s.; 5th, special value 2s. 6d. Also a silver medal will be given by Messrs. Marlor Bros. for next most points in novice class. The full list of other prizes will be printed in Year book. —O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN B.B.M. AND F.B.C.

At a meeting held August 18th, in Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger-street, Newcastle, correspondence was read from the C.B.U., and after hearing same, it was agreed that we grant the club's patronage to Carlisle (B.C.) O.S. and Darlington C.B.S., which completes the number of societies' shows where our patronage is to be granted, they being as follows: Newcastle, Wallsend, South Shields, Blaydon, Gateshead, Carlisle, and Darlington. Mr. Birchley was then asked to speak a few words. In his opening remarks, he explained how the various species were gradually diminishing in number, and strongly urged northern fanciers to make a strong plea for the extension of the close season. A parent bird, for instance, was caught during the breeding season; what were the results? In all probability it was the parent bird of a nestful of young, which, of course, meant that the other parent bird would forsake them, and they would be left to die. Again, he said, young birds were just leaving the nest by about the end of July, and could hardly do for themselves. The speaker then spoke on the subject of Mammals, and was highly appreciated by all. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded the lecturer, and this brought a very interesting meeting to a close. The following resolution it was decided to send to the local authorities: "That the close season be extended one month from existing date, August 12st." Anyone desirous of becoming a member of the club (subscription, 2/6) should please communicate with me.—J. BERTRAM, Sec., 95, Gainsboro' Grove, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 5th at headquarters. Mr. Currah presided over a good attendance of members and fanciers who had come to hear Mr. Birchley's lecture on "The Romance of Bird Life." Letters from the secretaries of the following specialist clubs granting us their patronage for our forthcoming show were read: Open Norwich P.C., Border Fancy Club, Green Canary Association, North Yorkshire C.C., National British Bird and Mule Club. With these and the following which had already been given: Northern Crest Club, Northern British Bird, Mule, and F.B.C., and the Crested C.C. our members are looking forward to another grand record entry. The "Novice" question, which had been left over from the previous meeting, was settled, and it was decided that novice members be allowed to show both in the champion members' section and in the novice section, but that they only be allowed to transfer a bird once, and it must be from the members' classes into the open; and as soon as the novice member wins two firsts in novice members' classes, he becomes a champion as far as members' competition is concerned. The Chairman now asked Mr. Birchley to give his lecture. The main parts of Mr. Birchley's lecture were the colouration of eggs, the wonders of nest construction, the composition of feathers, the reason for long and short wings, the various species of birds, the various flights of birds, feeding of the young, and the manner of their schooling, the various trades represented by birds in the construction of their nests, and the manner in which Nature protects birds. After the lecturer had been speaking for over an hour and a half, several members expressed the pleasure it had given them to listen to what they considered one of the best lectures given in the North on the interesting hobby, and on the proposition of Mr. Thos. Taylor, seconded by Mr. J. Little, Mr. Birchley was given a hearty vote of thanks. The lecturer suitably replied, and said he hoped to be able to give us another lecture at some future date. This brought one of the most interesting and enjoyable meetings to a close.—CURRY AND HUTCHINSON, Secretaries.

WOLVERTON.

The Wolverton and Dis. F.S. held their 2nd annual show on Saturday, the 21st August. The day was beautifully fine, and the show, which was held in the Recreation Ground, was on the whole a thorough success. The exhibits were well staged in large tents. The entry in our section was not large, but the quality was grand. Everything passed off well, and Mr. Wallace Dale, the excellent secretary, and Mr. T. Bull, his capable assistant, are to be congratulated. Mr. A. de Winton judged and gave every satisfaction.

NOR.: 1,, spl., 3, 4, Lewin, winner large yellow, very nice type and shape, good colour, lovely feather, 3rd grand buff, good head and neck, short wings and tail, 4th good shaped bird, but more feathery; 2, Phillips, a real nice varieg. yell., little thinner than winner. HYBRID: 1, 2, 3, Andrews, winner fine large yell. varieg. Greenie, lovely quality feather and condition, with a good moult will do some winning. 2nd wing mkd. Goldie, grand size and style, will make a good one, 3rd young dark yell. Goldie, clinking blaze, grand size and colour; 4, Lewin Linnet-Bullfinch, real good bird, but beaten on condition to-day. FOREIGN: 1, Miss Anthony, lovely Amazon, in perfect feather and condition; 2, 4, res., Andrews, pair of White Javas, Blue Bullie, and Virginian Cardinal, all shown in perfect feather and condition, the Javas like wax; 3, Woodcock, very good Ring-necked Parrakeet in fine form, plumage perfect.—BRIT. HARDBILL: 1, spl., 3, 4, Andrews, Hawfinch leading, size, bib, head and colour all that could be desired, steady as a rock, grand bird; 3rd clinking Goldie, deep square-cut blaze, right size and colour, beautifully tanned, very steady, 4th lovely hen Yellowhammer, grand colour, size, and markings, can beat some of the cocks; 2, Eales, exceptionally good yell. Greenie, grand size and colour, shown in spotless condition, we heard was vhc at the last Palace Show. CANARY (Natural Colour): 1, Andrews, bouncing clear buff hen, grand bead and body, full of quality, wins well; 2, Blackburn, very nice varieg. yell.; 3, Eales, fine young buff, should make a good one.

NORWICH CANARIES

By C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

"Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London

By WILLIAM R. HARDIE.

Of all the birds that reside in or visit the British Islands there is, in my opinion, none that can come up to the Blackcap warbler for song, except the Nightingale, and by some persons it is more admired than even the latter bird. Its arrival in this country is generally about the first week in April, and the earliest that I ever saw one was on the 25th of March, 1907, They leave us again about the end of September, though sometimes a straggler may be seen in October; the latest I ever saw one in a wild state was about the middle of that month.

When it first arrives in this country its chief food is the early ripened berries of the ivy, and where those are, there the Blackcaps are first to be heard singing their melodious and varied song. By the time the ivy berries are over, the little green larva of the small moths will be getting plentiful, rolled up in the young shoots and leaves; these then form their chief food until the strawberries and cherries become ripe. After that there is no want of fruit or berries, and there is no sort of fruit or berry that is eatable or wholesome that the Blackcap will refuse. After they have cleared away the elderberries in autumn they immediately leave us.

In Scotland and in a great many places in England the bird is called the Mock-Nightingale, and, indeed, like the Nightingale, it continues its song far into the night. I have paid a great deal of attention to the songs of birds, and I am of the opinion that it rivals the Nightingale. If it has less volume, strength and expression, it is more pure, easy and flute-like in its tones, and its song is perhaps more smooth and delicate.

The male Blackcap is nearly 6ins. in length. Upper part of the head black; back of the neck, ashy brown; upper parts of the body gray, with a greenish tinge; quills and tail dusky, edged with dull green; breast and belly light ash colour, legs and feet lead colour; bill, brown; trides, dark hazel. The hen that I possessed was of a larger size; the crown of the head was of an amber brown, or rust colour, and the plumage generally darker and more inclined to greenish than that of the male. The plumage of the young when they leave the nest resembles that of the female.

Gardens, orchards, and thick hedges are the favourite haunts of the Blackcap, and there, among brambles and nettles, or in some low bush, its nest is built. Dry stalks of goose-grass and a little wool are used, lined with fibrous roots, and frequently with a few long hairs, with now and then a little moss on the outside; these form the structure. Four or five (sometimes six) eggs of a reddish-brown mottled with a darker colour, and sometimes dotted with a few ashy specks, are then deposited.

The Blackcap in a state of nature is with difficulty seen when singing, at which time it seems to take pains to secrete itself. I have seen it in the act, and while warbling the throat is wonderfully distended.

In captivity it is a great favourite, not only for its song, but its many other attractive qualities. Even in a state of nature it is a mocking bird, and when caged it soon learns the notes of the Nightingale and Canary. The female is also a songstor, but only to a limited degree.

The male shows a striking affection for his mistress. He utters a particular sound—a more tender note—to welcome her. At her approach he darts against the wires of his cage, and by a continued fluttering, accompanied with little cries, he seems to express his eagerness and gratitude.

The young male bird that I had in my bird-room was accustomed to receive a meal-worm from my hand every time I entered. This took place so regularly that immediately on my arrival he placed himself near the little jar where I kept the meal-worms. If I pretended not to notice this signal, he would take flight, and, passing close under my nose, would resume his post. This he repeated, sometimes even striking me with his wing, till I satisfied his desires.

*A Sparrow Hawk & Weasel.

Recently my father and I saw a Sparrow-Hawk hovering high in the air, and notioed him swoop to the ground. Not seeing him rise again we went over and found him struggling with one leg fast in the grip of a weasel. As we could not decide which was the bigger culprit, we gave them their liberty with caution. —Sent by Idris Williams, Cirwee, Kilgerran, Pembrokeshire.

*A Sparrow Hospital.

One morning when going into our backyard I saw a House Sparrow hopping about. It was lame, and I succeeded in catching it, and found out that it had a broken leg. My little brother and I spliced the leg up, and put the bird in a spare cage of father's. We hung it up and fed it, and gave it fresh water. When it got alright again, we let it off with a little piece of cloth round the leg. To our surprise about a week after the same Sparrow came back again with another Sparrow, which also had a broken leg. We put it under the same treatment.—Sent by Annie McIntosh (age 13), 71, Bentinck Street, Belfast, Co. Antrim, Ireland.

The Magpie's Holiday.

An aunt who lives in Doncaster has a nice Magpie, Mag is usually kept in a large cage in the garden. Owing to some cold weather he was put in a smaller cage in the kitchen. One afternoon auntie went out and left Mag in the cage in the kitchen, and on a table in the next room was a dish of mince-pies. When auntie came back she found pieces of pies all over the room, and on going into the kitchen she found the rest on the floor. Mag was not in his cage, and the cage-door was wide open. After looking round auntie heard a noise in the cupboard, and going there she found Mag among the cups and saucers. The sugar basin was overturned, and he was very comfortably helping himself to the sugar. Mag did not relish being put back in his cage.—Sent by H. Gallop (age 15), 234, Bentley Road, Doncaster.

Twitterings.

Kindly note, writes Mr. George Baldwin, that I have removed from Marroway Street, to The Aviaries, 7, Hingeston Street, Birmingham.

I am compelled to withhold my British bird advertisement in CAGE BIRDS for a week on account of the great "rush" of orders.—W. GORE (Birmingham).

I am pleased to inform you that Mr. W. H. Shackleton has decided to judge at our Open Show on October 23rd next, writes Mr. H. Martin, hon. secretary of the Shipley O.S.

I am having splendid results from my last two advertisements in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. Brown (Wood Green, London, N.), and I am having applications for birds from all over the globe.

Haddington Show will, we are informed, be held on Saturday, October 30th. The judges elected are Mr. J. Neil (Kelso), for Border Fancies, and Mr. T. Kean (Edinburgh), for the remainder.

Will show secretaries and my fancier friends please note that I have removed to 5, Balaclava Road, Carnarvon, North Wales, writes Mr. R. E. Griffith, the noted Yorkshire and Goldfinch exhibitor. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

We shall be pleased to welcome fanciers to hear Mr. H. J. Hawes most interesting lecture on "Bird Catching," demonstrated with all the different devices used for the purpose, at the Montpelier, Peckham, on September 2nd, writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. secretary of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement re a clarionette in CAGE BIRDS of August 14th, writes Mr. Robert Ward (Durham). If I had answered them all singly it would have cost me a good trifle, as only one applicant sent a stamped envelope for reply. I wish CAGE BIRDS all success.

We have removed our headquarters to the "Fleece Hotel," Market Street, Wigan, where our meetings will be held in the future on the first Saturday in every month, writes Mr. W. Ridge, hon. secretary of the Wigan and Dis. C.B.S. To these meetings all cage bird fanciers are cordially invited.

A public meeting of fancier and non-fancier friends of the late George McPhail, Springburn, will be held in Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow, on Saturday, August 28th, at 8 p.m., to consider means of disposing of his stock of Crest, Crestbred, and Plainhead Canaries. All are invited.—(ADVT.)

Through the Bristol fanciers holding their show on October 28th, which was the date decided upon for the holding of our show, writes Mr. W. Minty, hon. secretary of the Frome C.B.S., we have decided to hold ours on November 11th. It will be held under C.B.U. rules, and Mr. Thos. Heath will judge.

I advertised a dog for sale in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, last week, writes Mr. J. A. Thurston (S. Shields), and I have received 40 inquiries to date. Will you kindly thank the numerous applicants, as I could only answer those who sent a stamp for reply. I sold the dog to a local gentleman as soon as the advertisement appeared.

The under-noted well-known Scotch judges have been appointed for our annual show, which is to be held on October 30th, writes Mr. J. S. Napier, secretary of the Arbroath Scotch Fancy C.B.S.: for Norwich and Borders Classes, Mr. J. Winter (Edinburgh); for British and foreign bird classes, Mr. W. Sharp (Bathgate).

Bird-keepers who have not as yet seen that most wonderful sixpennyworth of birdy literature, CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1909, have a splendid chance of acquiring a bargain, and probably their last chance. All the ordinary issue has been sold right out, with the exception of a few score copies which have the covers either soiled or a little torn (condition otherwise good), and those we offer to readers of CAGE BIRDS at the reduced price of 5d. per copy, post free. Orders should be sent at once to our Manager, at 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., as, of course, they can only be filled so long as the limited supply lasts. The ANNUAL contains a lovely coloured plate of an exhibition Linnet, which alone is worth the cost, and much grand information on bird-keeping and breeding (both Canaries, Hybrids, and Foreign). Send your fivepence at once, or we cannot guarantee to fill your order.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

Published in two parts.

PART 1: "HARDBILLS," and PART 2: "SOFTBILLS."

Either Part, PRICE, 1/1 POST FREE. Or 2/3 complete, cloth bound.

Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations of birds and cages. Written and illustrated by that practical fancier, Mr. H. Norman, these books contain full and up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; and all Fanciers, whether Novices or Old Hands, will find in them extremely valuable hints and instructions.

A postal order for 1/1 for one part, 2/- for the complete manual, or 2/3 bound in cloth, will bring them to you by return of post. Send to

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Will you kindly say, writes Mr. F. Wyse, I shall be here (Heatherwood, Ascot, Berks), for six months, and shall be delighted to see any fanciers who may be this way. There is a nice lot of ripe rowan berries here, and my Bullfinches are very fond of them. I shall be very pleased to send some to anyone forwarding stamps to cover postage.

In consequence of my having to take up duties at Abergavenny on September 1st, I am reluctantly compelled to resign the secretaryship of the Cardiff and Dis. Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. W. S. Negus. Another secretary will be appointed in my place at the next meeting. I shall be taking my stock of Yorkshires with me, and I will advise you of my new address later on.

Mr. Colton, the celebrated Mule breeder, writes: "Am pleased to say that the reports from fanciers using Ramsden's Puro Peppers are simply grand. I am convinced it is the best on the market this year. My Mules and Hybrids are a better colour than last year even." And so say hundreds of others. Use Ramsden's Puro Peppers, and know you are using the best the world produces.—(ADVT.)

Having received several letters asking me to judge Linnet Singing Contests, writes Mr. George Reed (Brandon, Co. Durham), would you please notify that I have given up judging, as I am really tired of it. I have always found the fanciers in the county of Durham a fine lot of men, and I have now judged 81 contests. Some say make the 100 up, but I think that I have had a fair innings, and I hope that someone will step in and do a little more than I have been able to do. My heart is still with the Fancy, for I should not like to be without a Linnet or two. My best wishes are given to every fancier for the coming season, and I hope they will still keep increasing in numbers and have some pleasant times together.

May I be permitted, writes Mr. H. E. Tringham, honorary secretary, London and Provincial O.S., to remind Metropolitan fanciers of the treat we have in store for them at our September meeting. At great expense we have engaged Richard Kearton, Esq., of world-wide fame, to give us one of his wonderful lectures, which will be illustrated by his not less wonderful series of moving pictures, showing birds in their wild state, feeding their young, nest building, courting, etc. To secure this fixture, with the necessary operators and paraphernalia, is a very large item, but no charge will be made for admission. We are negotiating for a suitable hall for this occasion, upon the completion of which further notice will be sent. For the Great Combined Show, the committee have voted £9 to provide new cups, and £5 for special prizes, to be competed for by L.P.O.S. members. The Mayor of Lambeth has personally signified his intention to open the show, and will be accompanied by the Mayoress.

In Search of a Wife.

After being at liberty for ten days a Canary belonging to Mr. T. Kirk, of Tiverton, has returned to its cage, bringing with it, it is reported, another bird of the same species.

How Like Papa!

Mr. R. Bosworth Smith in his book "Bird Life and Bird Lore" recalls the old story of the Eagle Owls which used to be kept in the ancient keep of Arundel Castle. It runs:—"The finest of the whole assemblage was known by the strange name of 'Lord Eldon.' One of the daughters of the famous Lord Chancellor, entering one day the keep, in ignorance of what was there, and catching sight of the venerable bird sitting in its post of state, and blinking its eyes with all the sleepy majesty of the law, exclaimed, 'Dear me, how like papa!' The name thence-forward stuck to it, and years afterwards the butler, whose business it was to see after the Eagle Owls, and who was not a little proud of his charge, rushed up in a state of pleased excitement and of domestic importance into the Duke of Norfolk's study. 'What is the matter?' asked the Duke. 'Please, your Grace,' was the reply, 'Lord Eldon has laid an egg.'"

Lost—and Found.

A valuable Black Cockatoo recently escaped from the studio of Sir Charles Lawes-Wittewronge in Chelsea Gardens, London, and a reward of £10 was offered. Sir Charles keeps twenty Cockatoos in a large garden, which is entirely enclosed by wire netting. The bird that escaped was being transferred from the garden to its night quarters. Sir Charles recovered the lost Cockatoo some few days afterwards. In the aviary behind the famous sculptor's studio in Chelsea the rare bird is once again among his friends, rather bewildered and, truth, to tell, a little sulky. "He has no brains," said Sir Charles, telling the story of the bird's adventures. "Probably he thought that by flying across the river he could reach his home some thousands of miles away. A man from Stoke Newington found him sitting on a telegraph pole in Battersea the day after he disappeared. The man borrowed a sack, climbed the pole, and carried off the Cockatoo without the slightest difficulty. At Stoke Newington the man put the bird in a chicken-coop. When the 'Daily Mail' very kindly announced the loss of the bird I received letters from all over London. There must be enough stray Parrots in London to stock a 'zoo.' In spite of the fact that I was seeking a Black Cockatoo I received letters describing the common Grey Parrot, worth about half a crown, the writers of which were convinced that they had the right bird. The actual finder seemed to doubt his good fortune, but his letter described the bird so well that I sent my man over at once with the cage and the £10 reward. The Cockatoo returned looking very well, but in a bad temper."

Whitethroat Using Old Nest.

A writer to the "Scotsman" records the nesting in exactly the same spot year after year of the Whitethroat, the old nest of each year being repaired and utilized again. The nest of this Warbler is a very flimsy affair, and is generally scattered by the winter winds; but this one is in a sheltered position and well preserved.

High Fliers.

On calm, still days birds are sometimes seen away up in the blue, like tiny flies. These are generally Martins, occasionally accompanied by Swifts. But the Swallows do not fly at these great heights; they keep to their usual hawking grounds, close to the earth. Upon still summer evenings Swifts mount so high that they are lost to view.

OBITUARY.

Mr. GEORGE McPHAIL (Glasgow).

It is with much regret I have to inform you of the death of Mr. George McPhail, of Springburn, Glasgow, our esteemed show manager, writes Mr. R. A. Brown, the secretary of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Norwich, Mule, British and Foreign Bird Club. Mr. McPhail was out at work on Monday, August 16th, till midday, but on Tuesday night he passed away. As the sad news spread to his friends they could hardly comprehend their loss. He was among us on Saturday evening, and then only three short days after comes the news of his death. Mr. McPhail was barely fifty years of age, and leaves a widow and a family of six, the youngest about six years old. For the last twelve years he had been an ardent fancier and successful breeder of Crests and Plainheads, and was well known in the Fancy all over Scotland. Show secretaries and committees in particular knew that if Mr. McPhail could help them they had but to say the word and his services were at their disposal; and among novices and young beginners there was no man in Glasgow more esteemed than he. All the year round he was here, there and everywhere in the bird-rooms of his fellow fanciers, advising, helping, and teaching. Many a fancier owes his success to the helping hand of George McPhail in preparing his birds for the show bench. It was a treat to see him handling a Crest—the variety he loved best—and I have known him sacrifice his own chances through preparing and staging perfectly a bird which was to compete against his own, just to help a less experienced fancier; but this was characteristic of the man. Washing and finishing off the birds of our novice members, he had to neglect his own birds at our club shows, but he found his pleasure and reward in seeing well-staged classes and happy and enthusiastic members cheered with their success. He was a member of the Scottish Crest Club, the City of Glasgow O.S., and the Glasgow and West of Scotland Club, and all three will miss him sorely. Bluff, hearty, sincere, and not a bit touchy, you could depend on him for hard, earnest work, and his enthusiasm carried others with him. King in his own family, the favourite of his workmates, respected and esteemed in all his wider associations, a good citizen, and a true friend—we have lost a force and we feel it keenly. Our sincerest sympathy goes out to his sorrowing widow and family.

Legend of the Kingfisher.

The Kingfisher has been the subject of a variety of legends. One of the most curious of these is that, having been a grey bird it acquired its present bright colours by flying towards the sun on its liberation from Noah's ark. Then its upper surface assumed the huo of the sky above it, and its lower plumage was scorched by the heat of the setting sun to the tint it now bears.

The Migration of Thrushes.

It is said that nearly all the young Thrushes reared in the British Islands emigrate as soon as they are fit to journey, followed later by their parents, so that many of the northern parts are quite bereft of this species from October to January. Hundreds of these birds are snared upon the Continent and are used for the table. In some years the influx from the north is exceedingly heavy.

Our "Ladder of Progress" Competition.

Will Messrs. Lewis, Craig, Houghton, Bimmer, Roberts, and Gardiner, who competed in our recent "Ladder of Progress" Competition, please communicate at once with the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, when, as the legal profession are fond of putting it, they "may hear of something to their advantage."

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post Free. 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

CANARY QUERIES.

Multum in Parvo.

"D. W. T."—To go fully into details of all your queries would require much space, which cannot be spared here. Moreover, the chief part of the information would be quite out of date now, being more applicable to the early part of the breeding season. In these circumstances I would advise you to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our Manager, and digest its contents in readiness for next season. I think you will find all you wish to know fully dealt with in its pages, and will therefore only briefly reply to your questions. The diet for moulting was given only last week, so you may refer to that issue (and also the present) for the best diet. Except in special cases hens need not have nigs after the first rounds. In hot, sultry weather baths should certainly be provided during incubation; in cold, chilly weather they are best withheld. How to feed the young has been fully detailed several times in quite recent issues, with all the necessary information as to giving green food, egg food, baths, and so forth. Next season, should you still be in doubt on any point after perusing the book advised, write at once, and I shall be only too pleased to assist you.

Medium for Colour Food.

"Runquam."—No, I do not think it is possible to colour feed Canaries by using ground corn or seed as a medium, instead of the usual soft food. I know nothing in that line which would be anything like so effective as the usual tasteless pepper. If, however, it is only a different vehicle to egg food that you wish to give the colour food in then anything in the way of plain biscuit food crushed to powder, stale bread crumbs, with a sprinkling of sugar added, to tempt the birds to eat it more freely, or crushed sponge cake or madeira cake, in short, any wholesome cake or biscuit food, which the birds will eat readily, will do just as well as egg food. It is the colour food you want the birds to eat; the vehicle in which it is given would be quite immaterial were it not that the birds have their likes and dislikes, and if a vehicle is employed which they do not like the food will be simply ignored, or the birds will have to be starved into eating it, either of which circumstances is undesirable. In cases I have experimented with I have found it quite possible to dispense with any vehicle at all by simply mixing an eighth or twelfth part of soft brown sugar with pure, tasteless pepper, and giving this in the egg drawers without any addition whatever. In every case in which this was tried the birds eat it quite freely and with relish, in spite of what is sometimes said to the contrary.

Imperfect Feathers.

"Ruffle."—The age of this bird certainly is against him, notwithstanding the fact that you have an older bird not so troubled. Birds, like humans, are not all precisely alike in health and vitality. Still, I have little doubt if you succeed in bringing about a good rapid moult, keeping the bird fairly warm, and not in too dry an atmosphere, and persevere with the dietary and treatment given below, the bird will show a considerable improvement after the moult. Prior to that time no improvement can be expected. Allow frequent opportunities for bathing, which, with the warmth in which it should be kept whilst moulting, will provide the necessary moisture to encourage rapid growth of feather. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape twice a week until the moult is well advanced, give separately a good pinch of maw seed, and towards the end of the moult substitute a few grains of linseed for this. On two other days each week give either half a teaspoonful of egg food, or a small piece of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and add to this each time a slight dusting of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chloride of potash. Continue to give a supply of green food daily, as previously advised. In the drinking water give a piece of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea every third day for a fortnight, and afterwards during the moult give ten drops each of port wine and malt extract in the water twice a week. You might also slightly anoint the base of the knotted feathers once a week with sulphur ointment.

Diarrhœa and Position.

"War."—You ought to have given at least some little idea how you were feeding the birds, and what green food you were giving, if any. Put the hen on a staple of two parts Canary to one part summer rape for a week, and give half a teaspoonful of hemp every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed plain biscuit with a pinch of maw seed mixed in it, and given dry. Give no green food, and withhold any other articles of diet you may have been giving for the time being. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and after this add half a teaspoonful of ordinary chalk mixture, which you may get from any chemist, in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water for another two days, then miss one day, and give it again, if necessary, every second day until the looseness is stopped. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean. See the drinking water and all foods are pure and untainted. If any doubt exists about the water, boil all before use. If there is no other door or window in your room besides those shown in your sketch, the position of the cage is correct, and probably the best you could have selected. Unless your birds have already been accustomed to a warm room there should be no necessity whatever for keeping a fire in the room. When the birds are deep in moult, if there should come a sudden snap of very cold weather, it will be advisable to have a little just to prevent any extreme drop indoors, but avoid raising the temperature much above the normal unless you intend keeping it so.

A Poor Start.

G. Hayes.—Your surmise as to the cause of your birds producing nothing but "addled" eggs is probably correct. I say "probably," because there is a possibility of the cause of the cock's condition and the addled eggs being one and the same, and not the latter arising out of the former. If the condition of the cock was the cause there is a very strong probability the eggs would have been "clear" instead of addled, but as these terms are frequently confused, perhaps, after all, the eggs were really "clear." The fact of the cock constantly casting a few feathers is quite sufficient proof that he was exposed either to draughts, or great variations of temperature, and either of these would also have been likely to cause addled eggs if the hen was not a very good sitter. See that draughts and great fluctuations are quite avoided. Keep them in as equable a temperature as possible, and the cock that has been casting feathers so long keep rather on the warm side, in order to encourage a complete moult now, and to remove the cold give twenty drops of whisky, five each of syrup of squills, and spirit of sweet nitre, and two of eucalyptus oil in the drinking water, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight. It is quite usual for them to go off song whilst moulting. See reply to "Fluffy" for details of feeding, but in your case omit the nigs and linseed. Being last year's birds they will moult all their feathers, both large and small ones. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" from this office, 7d. post free, in readiness for next season.

Aviary Breeding for Song.

W.S., jun.—Your outdoor aviary seems to be very nicely arranged and suitable for your purpose, and there is no reason why you should not be quite successful in carrying out your object. Either Border Fancies or Germans would thrive well there, and would agree with the Zebras all right, but as some cock Zebras are rather inclined to be combative when breeding and the accommodation of your aviary is limited to about fifty birds, you would be well advised to reduce the three pairs to one. Remember they sometimes breed very rapidly; and thus there is a probability of the aviary being largely stocked with Zebras when you want all the available space for Canaries. With the whole of the space devoted to Canaries, you might put in six or eight hens and three cocks, but with the Zebras, four or five hens and two cocks will be quite sufficient. As regards colour and markings, the Borders would be the most attractive, but the German or Rollers—whichever you prefer to call them—would undoubtedly produce the best and most varied singers. Still, the Border is by no means a bad performer, and there would probably be little to choose between the song of aviary-bred and untrained Germans and Borders bred under similar conditions. Seifert, Hartz Mountain, and St. Andreasburg are, in this connection, simply meaningless terms for one and the same variety—the German Canary. The low sweet singing qualities you admire and wish to produce are as much, nay, more, the result of good training of the young than a merely fantastic name which the birds may be called by.

Moult and Mites.

Fluffy.—(1) Very full details for feeding during the moult have been given in the last two issues, both in this column and on other pages; better look up these issues. There is really nothing wrong with the staple diet, but you might also give a pinch of maw seed every second day during the early part of the moult, and twice a week on other days a small pinch of a mixture of hemp, inga and linseed. Twice a week also give a small piece of bread sopped in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar. You need not be at all afraid of his shedding his feathers too quickly and suddenly provided you protect him from draughts during the process. This is invariably an indication of a good moult. Beyond ordinary care in the direction indicated, I do not think any further treatment is necessary. You may, however, add four drops each of syrup of rhubarb and tincture of gentian to his water for a day or two if his appetite does not improve on the above diet. (2) If the wire cage is not a fancy painted one, nothing is easier than to thoroughly exterminate red mites by simply putting it bodily into a copper of boiling water and boiling it a few minutes, meanwhile thoroughly cleansing the hook or nail, ceiling, or wall, where cage has hung, from any trace of the pest. If the decorations of cage render this treatment inadmissible, remove bird for a few days and saturate the cage with paraffin, working it well in all the crevices and wire supports with a small paint brush. Place it in the sun to dry and repeat the operation next day, and again the day following. After this you may polish up the cage and return the bird. The swell will have disappeared in the drying process. Red mites do not live upon the bird, so all you need do with him is to give him a bath daily whilst in the temporary cage, in which a few quassia chips have been soaked overnight—say, a teaspoonful of chips in half-pint of water.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

J. T. G.—I think this is a good deal the cause of your trouble. Am glad to know that by acting upon advice given, you have succeeded in rearing 40 young, though it is regrettable that you should have lost 26 in the last round simply through lack of good accommodation. Seven, even if weaklings, dying in the moult so far, is certainly a high proportion, and I am inclined to think the overcrowding may have something to do with it, though your feeding now is also faulty, and helps to account for it. Alter diet to plain Canary only for one week, with just a pinch of summer rape per bird every other day, given separately, and on the alternate days give a little bread sopped in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with maw seed. Of this last, allow about the equivalent of a small teaspoonful per bird. Give only half ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's purse, or seedy sprays of chickweed, for green food. Limit the dietary strictly to this for a week, and during the first three days dissolve a small teaspoonful of salts and senna—such as you get in penny packets at any chemist—in each half-pint of their drinking water, and every second day for the remainder of the week give half a teaspoonful each of syrup of rhubarb and tincture of gentian in each half-pint of drinking water. This should pull them round to a normal condition again, when you may add a fourth part of summer rape to the Canary as a staple; give a little hemp and maw, and dry biscuit food or egg food, or bread and milk each twice a week on different days. The last three, egg, biscuit, and bread and milk, are for choice or variety, one or another to be used, but not all of them given in one week. Stop all other seeds and do not give soaked rape now. A very little linseed may be given at the end of the moult, but do not give it regularly. Perhaps you give groundsel too rank and moist. At this season, only just the flower heads should be given.

Brevities.

What Is It? ("Novelitz").—I cannot tell from your description what class the bird properly belongs to. If what you call reddish is a kind of fawn or light brown colour, the bird is undoubtedly Cinnamon marked or variegated. As you have bred the bird from Greens, this adds much to the probability of its being Cinnamon, and also shows that Cinnamon blood runs in your Greens. Before deciding to enter it, get some more experienced fanciers to look at it, and tell you to what class it belongs. If the colour is Cinnamon, its proper class would be the "Cinnamon-marked (or variegated) Norwich," where such a class is provided; otherwise the "any variety Norwich" or "any other variety," but not in the pure Cinnamon classes. Certainly, you should colour feed it if you wish to show it, and the colour feed you name, with two ounces of paprika, or one of hot natal, added to a pound, will do nicely.

A Question of Colour ("Amateur").—Pure tasteless red pepper of itself will, I believe, produce all the colour necessary. In fact, I consider it capable of producing any shade, from so-called "natural" colour to the hottest red, by judicious administration. Of course, I am aware a certain proportion of hot pepper is by many still considered essential to produce a good lasting orange, or "hot" colour, but that's a matter of opinion. Get a pure brand of good, tasteless red, thoroughly blend in each pound of it two ounces of soft sugar, and you will have a useful and good colour food, which practically every bird—at least, every bird I ever offered it—will eat voluntarily and with relish. You may if you wish add also one or two ounces of hot natal if you doubt the utility of the simpler mixture. I do not think this amount is at all harmful, even if it is an unnecessary adjunct.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Moulting Puzzle.

Boyd.—Possibly you have nothing to be alarmed at. Personally, I like to see a bird bald on the head—halfway down its back, too, if it likes—at this time of the year. I have several in this condition in my bird-room at present. It is a sign of an excellent moult—one that will be quickly and satisfactorily got over. It is a splendid sign when birds drop their feathers quickly—in "clouds," as I have heard fanciers term it. They must not on any account be exposed to draughts at this time, however (close the windows on damp, windy nights), and the bath should be given at discretion (never very late in the day). An excellent "tonic" for moulting birds is Parrish's Chemical Food, given twice a week, a tablespoonful stirred into a pint of water which has previously been boiled (give in glass or pot vessels only). The bird you mention is evidently a cock Bramblefinch. If the flesh of the bare part does not look healthy (appears to be covered with a whitish scurf), then you must cage the bird by itself and gently anoint the place twice daily with a tiny portion of sulphur ointment.

Chaffinch when Moulting.

Timid.—I have often given the "feeding" for a Chaffinch; the only special treatment during the moult is to give a little live-food daily, and not to overlook the "green-meat." Give a bath frequently when the weather is suitable, but not daily (in any weather, that is), until the moult is drawing to a conclusion. As a staple seed mixture give the following: Canary and teazle four parts each, summer rape, charlock and linseed one part each. In addition give a good feed of white sunflower seed or safflower seed daily; or put one part amongst the stock mixture. Smashed walnuts (and other nuts) are greatly relished also and should be given occasionally as a special treat. A small feed of hemp can be given once a week. Give a mealworm or two every day, varying same with flies, grubs, earwigs, an occasional spider, aphides, scoured gentles, wasp grubs, live ants' eggs, etc., as obtainable. Chaffinches will eat most kinds of live food. These birds nibble a sprig of shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, etc. Radish, turnip, and summer rape seedlings are usually eagerly devoured, too, when just sprouting, which they soon do when it is soaked in cold water. Some Linnets are very wild for a time. Keep the bird in a box cage, hanging about breast high in a room wherein people are constantly moving about. This, and the moult, should make him quite steady.

The Jackdaw.

Novice.—I do not know that there is any very appreciable difference in the plumage of cock and hen Jackdaws. In the springtime the old male is usually more glossy, and the metallic reflections exhibited by his plumage are the more brilliant, while the greyish-white of the neck is purer and more pronounced. But these, of course, are comparative differences and do not help you much when you have only one bird to look at. It is a general rule with Jackdaws, Crows, Jays, Magpies, etc., that the cock is the "cheekier," bolder-looking bird. (2) You would only be likely to succeed in keeping other members of the Crow family (such as those named above) with your Jackdaws in the 10ft. long by 8ft. wide aviary. I must confess, however, that I have never tried the experiment. (3) I think it is likely that a pair of Jackdaws, if by themselves, would make an attempt to breed in such an aviary. If kept with other birds, however, I don't suppose for a moment they would do so; or, at any rate, succeed. I am open to correction, of course.

Sexing Young Goldie-Greenies.

R. Elston.—There are no absolutely sure sexual signs to be found in the plumage of any young Mules or Hybrids—sex differences become manifest only when the birds have moulted their nest plumage. The bigger, bolder-looking youngsters generally turn out the cocks (though Bullie Hybrids can deceive one in this respect), and they have larger, flatter skulls, when viewed in profile. In short, only a lengthy experience can enable a fancier to make a fairly certain forecast of the sex of either young Mules or Hybrids. He can generally do so when he has the young of any one nest together; but mix up the youngsters from several nests (especially the progeny of both buff and yellow hens) and he will be more or less at sea. The only safe plan for any beginner is to wait until his birds have moulted before he definitely makes up his mind as to the sex of his birds. He will then have the song to aid him, as well as colour. Of course, even in the babies, the cocks will "try over" their song in a more persistent and vigorous manner than the hens; but as it is an undoubted fact that the baby hens will "warble" a bit, song is not so safe a guide before the first moult as it is afterwards.

A Goldfinch and a Linnet.

R. Wilson.—You cannot have read last week's CAGE BIRDS very carefully, for in it I dealt fully with the moulting and feeding of both Goldfinches and Linnets. Note the replies given to "Dinas" and "R. K. M." 1: It often happens that a Goldfinch which fails to fill eggs when not house-moulted gives a very different account of himself after he has been moulted in a cage. Therefore you should certainly give the Siberian Goldie you mention another chance next season. All birds appear to be "rather mopy" just when they are about to fall into moult, often sitting very quiet on the perch for more or less lengthy spells, and with their eyes closed. There is no cause for alarm in this. The first signs of the moult having commenced are generally to be found on the wings—there will be quill (new) feathers at the butts (shoulders), and one or two flights missing; at about the same time the feathers commence to fall from the sides of the breast, the bird appearing as though it had been plucked thereabouts. 2: Your Linnet is not likely to commence to sing until the moult is well over; when this may be I cannot, of course, forecast. I have one or two myself which are almost through with it, and which are commencing to sing again.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

Greypates Dying (Constant Reader).—Your query beats me; it gives me no particulars whatever which could help me to decide why the birds died. As they left this world while you were away from home, the likely solution is that they were more or less neglected. Canary-reared Goldfinches should thrive without trouble. You should not keep them "close to the door," if that spells draughts.

A Small Bird (Sheffield).—The only bird I can think of which answers your description is the Willow Warbler, and I feel quite certain this is the bird you have caught. If you do not know how to feed it, then I am afraid it will be dead before you read this reply. It is a very delicate bird, and requires a good insectivorous mixture (you can buy such at good-class bird or seed shops, or through our advertisement columns), prepared in the usual way for Softbills, and also a liberal daily supply of live foods as in season, also ripe fruits. (See the lengthy reply given Mrs. Fane in issue of August 14th).

Siberian Goldie Moulting (Constant Reader).—You have omitted thistle heads from your list, and these are very valuable for moulting Goldfinches; likewise the seeding sprays of chickweed, shepherd's purse, and groundsel. Iron, if given often, has an undesirable constipating effect. If given in moderate strength twice a week it is helpful. I could not say that it "improves the blaze colour," though. Still, anything that aids the health of the bird must also have an indirect influence over its beauty of colour and plumage.

A Skylark (Song Wanted).—It depends upon how long your Skylark takes to get over the moult. If all goes well, he should be singing in November; or just commencing to. Any honest dealer ought to sell you a genuine cock Lark for 2s. 6d.—a very good bird, too. Of course, it will not be a house-moulted songster at that price. Mind you are not caught by an advertisement with a lot of clap-trap in it—offering something for nothing, as the saying goes.

Colour-feeding Mules.

R. W.—The whole story of colour-feeding is too lengthy a one for these query columns. You must read the two long articles recently published in CAGE BIRDS, written by Mr. J. W. Bancroft and Mr. J. W. Ramsden (or the booklet by the latter gentleman, which is sold by CAGE BIRDS). Briefly, the most effective way to colour-feed Mules that I know of, is to well mix a finely minced hard-boiled (12 to 15 minutes) new-laid egg with a teacupful of bread crumb (stale bread grated), adding to this a teaspoonful of castor sugar and the required quantity of colour-food, which should be one teaspoonful just before the birds are due to moult, and be gradually increased, so that it reaches three teaspoonfuls when the birds are commencing to drop feathers freely. Get a brand of pepper with a first-class reputation (a bad pepper spoils everything). Each bird should eat a good teaspoonful of this made colour-food daily (prepare it fresh every day). How the colour-food should be mixed depends upon the brand you use. Some have a lot of added oil in them. The kind I use myself has not. To 7lbs. of this tasteless pepper I add 1lb. of pure hot cayenne, a ten-ounce bottle of the best pure salad oil, and one and a half pounds of moist sugar (the cheap brown kind, like sticky sand). These are mixed well together, and then stored in an earthenware vessel. Keep the birds which are being colour fed out of direct rays of sunlight; it is best to shade the window, during a portion of the day, at least. Dissolve a piece of citrate of iron, the size of a small pea, in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water twice weekly. Any point I may have failed to explain I shall be pleased to do if you will write again.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

What Parrot, and will it Talk?

E. Wright.—It is the Roseate Cockatoo, a native of Australia, and though its reputation as a talker in this country is not good, I have heard of and come across some talented birds. As it is tame, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation; also teach it by constant repetition—talk to it constantly and keep it interested by petting it, etc.; and I should most certainly say it will talk to some extent. Do not give it tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Confine its diet to the seed mixture, ripe fruits, nuts and plain biscuits; supply also cuttlefish, grit, and water for drinking and bathing. If it has been accustomed to boiled maize, this can be continued, but note, it only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessels must be kept strictly clean.

Plants and Birds for Aviary.

M. G. L.—You can put in all the plants you name, also box, wild clematis (travellers' joy), bamboo and any kind of fruit trees available; withers and willows are also very good. I know of no Parrakeet that would not soon ruin all your green growth. The Cardinals are all hardy and also handsome birds. The same applies to most of the foreign Thrushes; you could keep, however, to most advantage, such as the small Ornamental Finches, Mannikins, Waxbills, Grassfinches, Diamond and Java Sparrows, with one or two species of small Quails, as ground birds, also Diamond and Talpacoti Doves, Weavers and Whydahs. If you will repeat query telling me your country, I will give you a detailed list of the most suitable. Sufficient of the aviary should be formed into a shelter shed to accommodate all your birds during winter nights. Such perennials as sunflowers, golden feather, and the like, also make excellent cover.

Budgerigars with Growth.

G. R.—It all depends on the character of the growth; if it is soft and contains humour, as soon as it appears ripe, it must be carefully lanced and the humour got rid of by gentle pressure, the sore well cleansed with tepid water, dried, and then lightly annointed with a little healing ointment. If the growth is hard and does not contain humour, then lightly touch it daily with tincture of iodine till the growth disappears. It will be well to give the bird a cooling aperient every third day for a fortnight—one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in an ounce of water, and let this form the only drinking water for the day; if you remove the drinking water over-night, it will be quite ready to take the prepared water freely the next morning. I should advise isolating the bird till the growth has disappeared, and when not giving the magnesia well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. While the supply lasts, give it as much seeding grass (grass in flower) as it will eat. If it will eat it, a piece of plain biscuit slightly moistened in the Chemical Food water will also be helpful.

Budgerigars, Cockateels, etc.

W. H. W.—The book you name should be a great help to you in treating your birds. I am afraid the Canaries will either get killed or mutilated at no distant time. Parrakeets and Finches cannot with safety be kept together. It is quite possible the Budgerigars may bring you off a brood this year, but there is great variation in individual pairs; some begin at once, others take months to settle down. I should not be over anxious on this score; it will probably be all the better for your birds if they do no breeding this year, but leave up the husks and let the birds follow their own "sweet will." Such seed hoppers are procurable from most large fanciers' supply stores, but you must keep them under supervision, as out of doors, especially in wet weather, they are liable to clog. It is best if possible to exclude mice, but I find this impossible; undoubtedly they do hinder breeding to some extent, but I have not found them to seriously do so. However, you must not let them get such a hold that they breed in the husks and logs put up for the birds. Cockateels do not breed till they are two years old; if you procure an adult pair now they should breed in the course of next year. Your aviary is well arranged and you should have good results once your stock has settled down. Lovebirds are not such free breeders as Budgerigars and Cockateels.

Zebra Finches Not Breeding, etc.

R. A.—This season till quite recently has been very unpropitious for birds out of doors, more especially in small aviaries, where the birds have only a limited flight range, and there has been trouble and loss even in the aviaries of experienced aviculturists. I should keep a bottle each of Dinneford's Magnesia and Parrish's Chemical Food by me; a dose of the former and a course of the latter will usually meet the case of minor ailments, which is the case I think with your bird. Use the magnesia in the proportion of one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water and the Chemical Food will be about right if used in the same proportions. It is very probable that your hen has never been really fit, and attempting to nest has aggravated the trouble. Your diet is satisfactory except as regards greenfood, and also a little ripe fruit should be beneficial, lettuce and seeding grass and a little ripe apple, pear, orange, etc., will answer well. Stop all water over-night, and in the morning give the Magnesia as above, leaving this as sole drinking water for the day; after an interval of two days repeat the dose, and then put the bird on the Chemical Food—this treatment will do no harm to your other birds. Some species of birds, among which are Nuns, Weavers, and Combassous, make no attempt to nest in captivity, not even in large natural aviaries, for which it is hard to give a reason. In "Foreign Birds for Beginners" you have concise directions for the dieting and treatment of seed, fruit, and insect-eating species. All classes of birds are more or less debilitated on arrival and consequently a somewhat risky purchase, but once the treatment is mastered, fruit and insect-eating species are often quite as easy to keep fit as seed-eaters. If you name any species you would wish to keep, I shall be pleased to report as to their hardiness, diet, and treatment. Small Finches often breed the first season when adult; some take a year to settle down.

Cardinals and Smaller Birds.

"Amateur." While it certainly is not impossible to breed Red-crested Cardinals, for this has been done, success is but seldom attained, as in the majority of instances the young are thrown out of the nest when about two or three days old. As regards mixing them with small birds, I have kept them with such, and though my aviaries are not large, have never found them to do any harm, but in confined quarters I have heard their doing so. If you give me particulars, size, etc., of your aviary, I could give you a definite answer. I have not found my hens to sing other than uttering a call note rather rapidly, very different, this, from the song of the male. It is probable it would cross with other Grosbeaks of similar size; it has done so with the Pope and Virginian Cardinal. I think before I give you a list of birds you had better give me the particulars asked for above, as if I attempted to do so on present data I might lead you astray.

Brevities.

Zebras out of Condition (Devonian).—Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in an ounce of water, supplying no other drinking water that day unless the whole of the above has been consumed; repeat the dose in three days' time. Change your diet entirely—feed as follows: Canary and white millet in equal parts, also spray millet, greenfood, such as lettuce, grass in flower (seeding grass), chickweed and groundsel heads. A small slice of ripe apple or pear is usually appreciated and is very wholesome. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in cage. Remove cotton wool from nest box and supply hay and long grass as nesting material, leaving the birds to construct their own nests. If the birds come into condition, there is yet time for them to bring off a brood, but birds ought not to be permitted to breed when out of condition.

Budgerigars and Lovebirds (Breeder of Seven). — Your aviary has space for about four breeding pairs, or, say, at the most, 25 to 30 birds in all, that is, old and young together. Most of the Lovebirds are not so hardy as the Budgerigar and the only ones I can advise are the Madagascar and the Blue-winged, and as to the latter, I am somewhat in doubt; it is rather difficult for me to reply definitely as I have no clue to your locality. In London I should take the risk with them. Seven is a pretty full clutch, though I have heard of nine, but three to five is the more usual number. I should advise covering the glass roof with felt during the winter months.

What Birds? ("Quong Sing").—Please accept my best thanks for informing me that I had named your birds correctly; this is often far from easy, as with so many species closely resembling each other, it is difficult indeed to separate them when the description given is very thorough. Your birds should be worth at least 30s., possibly more; it all depends how many happen to be about; if you come across anyone wanting such a species, you would probably get 50s. for it at the present time. I should say, though, that true pairs sell more readily than odd birds. There are several species that can be called Brazilian Jays; probably the bird in question will be the Brazilian Blue Jay; if so, it is a very handsome, striking and interesting bird.

Identification of Dove.

Smith.—Your very good and clear description leaves no doubt that your Dove is the true Turtle Dove (Turtur turtur), a well-known summer migrant to this country, but not nearly so familiar in captivity as the tame collared Turtle Dove or Ring Dove.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 2s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Waxbill (Marie Walker).—Softening of liver and consequent hæmorrhage.

Roller Canary (E. D. G.).—Bird fever. It is suggested that you get Dr. Clarke's book from this office.

Canary (Bolton).—This bird died of fever. The probability is that the other losses are attributable to same disease.

Canary (C. Le Kaye).—Chronic softening of liver ending with rupture of blood-vessel of that organ. This state of things might render a bird nervous and songless.

Goldfinch (Cottier).—Your surmise is probably correct that this bird died of chronic indigestion, for his liver appeared in a diseased and softened condition. It is caused by insufficient exercise and too much food.

A Letter (D. John).—The letter has been duly addressed and forwarded.

On a Saturday (A. Mallett).—Our offices close at 12.45 to 1 p.m. on Saturdays.

Illustrated Ideas (Walter Gee).—We have published a very similar one before. (D. W. Tatten).—Will see if it can be traced. Yes; we take all ideas strictly in rotation. (E. E. Miller).—We have given this before.

A Prize said to have Gone Astray (T. Richards).—You are certainly entitled to sue for the special prize which you have not received, and which you are told has "gone astray in the post." As regards the book mentioned, there is not such a one published.

Price on Cage Label (W. Armstrong).—The exhibitor certainly should not write anything on the cage labels sent him by the show secretary. The price is not often put on nowadays, the object being to stimulate the sale of catalogues among those on the look-out for bargains. In the case of an error with the labels, the exhibitor should write a note calling the secretary's attention to it and requesting him to put it right. Any writing on the cage label might lead to talk about "distinguishing marks" put on for the "benefit" of the judge; or even lead to disqualification.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—Permit me to reply to Mr. A. Wilkinson's letter in your issue of August 21. I was very sorry to hear about his losses in British birds, but I am glad he has kept the Canaries free from this dreadful disease, although when once the Canaries catch the disease they go off like chaff before the wind, and there is no stopping it by means of syringing water on to them. You must find another remedy. Now, I have kept to my promise, and have sent my remedy to the two gentlemen (Messrs. J. Woaire and E. R. Bryant) whose addresses were forwarded to me. I have also registered my remedy, and its announcement will appear in CAGE BIRDS shortly.

In reply to Mr. Thos. Robson's letter, may I say that the first warning one has that the birds are going wrong is that their necks appear to become shorter and their excreta begins to turn. One should then take particular notice of them for two or three days, after which the droppings lose the white and begin to become brown and watery.

W. H. THOMAS.

SIR,—I was very much disappointed with "Lancashire Lad's" letter. He seems to have so much knowledge, but selfishly sticks to it. What makes him write on a subject when he can give no remedy, advice, or experience, except that his friend the painter says they use sulphur in London to asphyxiate insects in "mahogany flats"? He makes me think he is one of the unsophisticated who would give advice if only he could. The most inexperienced of us are well aware that sulphur is largely used by sanitary authorities for stoving and disinfecting places where any infectious disease has been. "Lancashire Lad" wants to prove his statements before rushing into print and writing a lot of hare-brained chatter which he seems to only know in theory. There are some marvellous cures in this world, and some that don't seem feasible at all; but still they are so. At a lecture given before our society (Bingley O.S.) a well-known breeder, exhibitor and judge recommended this sulphur treatment. He did it, and got good results after, giving the credit to the sulphur. Before using it his birds were dying fast, but after they gave over. I came across Mr. James Hartley, of Cinnamon fame, who had a fancier friend with him from Queensbury. He told about being advised to try burning sulphur with his birds in the room. He had been having a most disastrous season. He tried it, and the result was he did not lose any more that season. In both these cases it meant a very heavy financial loss if it had turned out a failure. To me it would have been a loss of £20 when I did it. To make "Lancashire Lad" see that I am still losing my head, and am still trying to eradicate the disease, and birds also, I have done it a second time, but with no worse results. They keep dying when their turn comes. Instead of trying to make ridicule out of my experience (for I can prove all my assertions), I will pay "Lancashire Lad" all expenses if he can give me any advice or remedy. I have removed all my birds into fresh quarters. I will send him a bird to look at, or if he cares to come this way, I shall be only too pleased to see him. I tried all Mr. North told me to do before ever taking any notice of any one else. I can quite sympathise with Mr. Robson, he being in the same boat. ROBT. ODDY.

8, Oak Street, Cross Flats, Bingley.

SIR,—Being the reader of CAGE BIRDS to start the above subject in the correspondence columns, and lately appearing with the affix "for a fatal disease" added, I did it in the hope that among the numerous Linnet fanciers, and more especially the Linnet champions or Linnet kings, there might be some who would be able to give me a remedy (if not too sacred a secret, and for which they would expect to be paid), or if not a remedy, something that would in some way relieve or cure the complaint, or disease mentioned in the different replies. Most of them mention that the stomach is inflamed and swollen, and that it gradually gets worse and a deeper red, almost turning black, etc. If life is prolonged after a few days the inflammation gradually turns the stomach flabby, whitish and dry-looking, when death puts an end to it. I have had some which have been covered all over the body with small white spots, resembling specks, down, or mildew, and apparently under the skin, as it cannot be wiped or rubbed off; they remain the same the whole time and also after death. I lost two good cock (red) Linnets (had for nearly 12 months) last week, one of which had these spots. Most of the birds appear to die without struggle, and in the position in which they are resting (similar to photo of Mr. T. Robson's dead Canary in your last issue). In reply to Mr. A. Wilkinson, on "The Feeding and Keeping of Linnets in Health" (and he was among the first to reply to "A Remedy Wanted," if he will send me his address I shall be pleased to let him try the remainder of the bottle of stuff kindly sent me by Mr. W. H. Thomas, according to his promise, although I did not succeed with it myself. I am still looking for and wanting the remedy, and shall consider it a blessing if a remedy is given that will cure the disease, whatever it may be, and by so doing saving the lives of many Linnets which I consider one of the finest songsters among British birds. Speaking of their song, if anyone wishes to hear it to perfection, I would advise him to get out, if possible, into fields or lanes or wayside in the breeding season, and listen to the Linnet as he sits perched on a bough, or on the topmost twig or hedge swaying with the breeze, possibly near the nest; the sun will be seen shining on his blood-red breast, and he will then pour out his song for all he is worth, indifferent to your presence. There you get the Linnet's grand natural song.

F. J. WEAIRE.

SIR,—What I stated in CAGE BIRDS re remedy wanted was intended for Canaries and not "British" birds, as at the time of writing my last letter I was offering advice to those who had written on the matter printed in your columns of August 7th, British birds not being mentioned on that date. And I am very sorry Mr. A. Wilkinson misunderstood me. I have kept British birds, but have lost them after a few weeks' illness, so have given them up. May I be allowed to ask Mr. A. Wilkinson to read up CAGE BIRDS, dated July 5th, re "A Remedy Wanted," when he will get the answer he requires. One cannot expect a good result when the advice given is not taken advantage of. Does Mr. Wilkinson put any fresh birds into the cage of a dead bird before the cage is cleaned out? for a bird is liable to pick up the excreta of a dead bird and eat the germs; hence the same complaint in each bird. May I also offer a suggestion to the persons whom I wrote about in my last letter, re the Roller Canary dying, i.e., there is nothing better for birds that sit humpy than giving bread and milk sop (the latter boiled) and sugar; that is to "Cymree" and F. W. Balls. BERT.

Are Enamelled Water-tins Dangerous?

SIR,—I read in CAGE BIRDS last week (August 21st) of the great loss through some unknown disease of nearly all Mr. Thomas Robson's stock of Canaries, and although I do not know the gentleman, I can honestly say I felt heartily sorry for the writer of the letter. I feel a desire to be allowed once more a space in your columns, so that I may tell of some sudden and curious deaths among my birds during the last five weeks. To begin with, I have always used glass water troughs, but eight weeks ago I took a notion and purchased about thirty enamelled tin water troughs (the first in all my experience, of course). I put them all on, and thought really they were very neat, handy and clean. But alas! five weeks ago nearly every one of my stock, both old and young, commenced to look "dead off," many of them scarcely eating at all. Next item: two die; another couple a day or two after (1909, grand birds); then, finally, and lastly, two 1908 cocks die, much in the same manner as Mr. T. Robson's. I did not commence to give any medicine or tonic of any kind, but sat down in the room to ponder over things a little and to study. I knew my cages to be fairly clean, and the seed was, as it always had been, and was purchased at the same dealer. At last, I came to the decision, after closely examining five or six of these enamelled water troughs, that out they should go. And out they went, never to return. I thoroughly washed and cleaned all my former glasses, refilled them with good clean water, and on the birds went to continue their former duties. I can say this that ever since the glasses were returned the birds have come round again, both old and young, and have now come to that state that I think they are in the very pink of condition. Although they are moulting now, some are giving us good vocal selections, making me feel happy and content with them as beforetimes. I can honestly say this was all the change I made after my nearly sixty minutes' studying as to what to do. There was then, of course, a likelihood of many more dying. Perhaps many experienced breeders of longer standing than myself will not have very particular opinions of my experience in birds dying rather rapidly. Anyhow, with regard to the enamelled tin water troughs (if they were enamelled), I bid them farewell. JOHN H. JOWETT.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I cull the following from the letter of Mr. Thos. Robson in the last issue of CAGE BIRDS: "It is a mystery! What is responsible for their deaths? I have proved it is not the food, for I have brother fanciers doing well with precisely the same treatment." Now, Mr. Robson, are you certain of your last sentence? I presume that you used hard boiled eggs; were they from the same source as the fanciers you speak of? Were they new laid eggs that you used? If they were not, then that answers the second sentence quoted above. Having been through the mill in 1903 (when I lost three-fifths of my birds), I then thought it quite time to put into practice what I had for years believed in theory. The first thing I did was to stop all egg food, and put all birds on milksop, also stale breadcrumbs and soaked rape in addition. The birds that were still ill I gave one drop of Sloan's liniment, in the end of beak by means of a piece of wire dipped in the bottle, twice daily. All recovered, and have done well in the breeding room this season. My advice to fanciers is: Be sure that the eggs you use are new laid. If not, then you court disaster.

FRED BURCHNALL.

SIR,—I would like to extend my sympathy to Mr. Robson and others who have had similar experiences to his. I have had a most disastrous and distressing season myself. I have only a dozen birds left—six young and six old ones, all Canaries. Mine started much the same as Mr. Robson's. Your readers may remember my letter a short time ago re six young birds in four eggs; it was immediately after losing that hen that my other birds began to go, the hens dying first, with exactly the same symptoms which Mr. Robson describes in his letter. I sent on one of my Norwich cock birds to Mr. North for post-mortem, and his reply was "unmistakably bird fever." Upon receiving his reply, I stopped all breeding operations for the season, and thoroughly disinfected all the birds, cages and rooms, and yet since then I have lost several. Before this operation I lost as many as eight or nine in one day. Just now I have one young hen showing the same symptoms, and I am trying a remedy which I hope will save it. If I am successful in doing so, you may rest assured I shall let your readers know what it is. I may say the bird is improving so far. Now I should just like one or two questions answered by some of the old fanciers. They are as follows: First, is the disease really bird fever? Secondly, what are the causes of this distressing calamity? and thirdly, what are the best remedies to cure and eradicate it? J. W. BOOCOCK.

SIR,—Inflammation most frequently proceeds from a sudden change of weather; or from the birds being kept in a room which during the day has a fire, and at night, when the birds are asleep has no warmth; or sometimes again from feeding them on unripe herbage. Therefore, always give ripe groundsel or plantains, and when birds appear dull and heavy, with their heads under their wings, and appearing all of a heap, take them out and see if their bodies are inflamed or swollen; if so, give some grit amongst their seed and a little boiled bread and milk with moist sugar in their drawers. Next day scald a little rape seed and bread in a bit of cloth, squeeze out the water from the bread, and bruise the seed to a complete pulp; then add a hard-boiled egg and a little maw seed. The next day give them bread and milk and clean water with a few flakes of hay saffron in it. Continue doing this, keeping the birds comfortably warm until they are cured, which you may expect to take place in about a week. All this time take care to supply them every day with a box of sharp sand to dust in, and a pot of clean water to bathe in, a piece of chalk to peck at, and a few sprigs of watercress, plantain, or other ripe greens. The birds will choose the best for their disorders. If you find them in about a week getting no better, and the swelling not abated, still continue the opening food and the bread and milk and sugar until the swellings are completely gone down. A little nourishing food and a little hemp seed must be given now and then to keep their strength up. I have found magnesia to be of service—a small quantity in a wineglass of water. Give toast and water for a change for two or three mornings, and give scalded rape seed. I have been a bird breeder for 60 years. It is 60 years since I bought my first Canary book, and I have it now. You would laugh to see the shape of the Canary on the back. Fanciers used to breed pied ones in those days—16 black feathers in each wing, and 12 black ones in the tail, the rest of the body being clear. There was a young man in this village (Handsworth, Sheffield) who started last year with five pairs, and got a nice lot of birds. He made a lot of shout about the birds he had, so I said, "Wait a bit; you have not got out of the wood yet"; and in two months' time he had not one bird left.

Successful Catching with Spring Net Traps.

SIR,—I shall be pleased if you will allow me a small space in your most valuable paper as regards a working man's means of catching his own birds. I dare say I am not the only working man who cannot afford a large pair of clapnets, so I sent for three of the self-acting spring net traps. As it was the August holidays I went out into the fields, and the first morning I got one cock Blackbird, two hen ditto, one hen Thrush, seven Linnets (two hens and five cocks), and one hen Bullfinch. The second day I went in another direction, where I was told I should find some Goldfinches. That day I caught Goldfinches, Linnets, and Greenfinches, in all 13. I shall be pleased to hear of any other fancier having experience with this cheap yet useful trap.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—I think Mr. McKee talks without his book; if he knew more about the matter probably he would say less. All "the attacks" he talks about have been merely letters from fanciers who had a just grievance against the society; and on them Mr. Halliday based his own letter. The Y.C.C. have patronised the coming fixture, as Mr. McKee states, but the S.N.P.C. and the S.Y.C.C., two bodies on the spot in the South, have not done so, and they know more about Dulwich matters than the body up in Yorkshire. Why have these two kept their patronage away, Mr. McKee? Perhaps they contain some of the members of the Dulwich O.S. who had so "willingly" given up their prize-money (I don't think). If they are so willing, as Mr. Woolhouse and others would have us believe, why is there so much dissatisfied talk amongst them? Every London fancier knows there is this, except, apparently, Mr. Woolhouse. Now let Mr. Woolhouse tell us the number of "members" to whom prize-money is owing and the total amount; also how many of the "members" who have money owing to them can rightly now be termed members (that is, have paid their current subscriptions). Then we shall know whether they are a "united body" working for "love" or not. I have heard that one fancier has almost in the teens of pounds due to him, and another four or five pounds (a decent bill, these two alone). Are they still "members"?

TRUTHFUL JAMES.

The Dreaded Bird Fever.

Some Suggestions for Combating it.

SIR,—"Any port in a storm," the old proverb tells us, and it is purely on this principle that I venture to give here the salient points of a letter I dropped across when looking over some old issues of CAGE BIRDS just recently. The letter purported to give a method of treatment for that general scourge, septic fever, and which the writer honestly believed to be followed by very good results. It may perhaps be that this treatment helps to increase the bird's powers of resistance during an attack, or after being exposed to infection, and, in consequence, enables a greater proportion of "suspects" to ward off the disease, and also a larger percentage to win the battle when the attack begins. In any case, beyond rigid isolation and thorough disinfection one can do extremely little when the disease breaks out in an acute epidemic. It is during the breeding and moulting seasons, unfortunately, when outbreaks may begin to be looked for, so let all who find the advice of real service send a brief note of the facts to your correspondence columns, so that other afflicted fanciers may go and do likewise should misfortune grip them. When an outbreak occurs, and is diagnosed beyond doubt, the apparently healthy birds should be removed to new quarters and kept strictly isolated. No communication should be allowed between the two sections. Thus, wherever possible, separate attendants should be deputed to look after the well-being of each group, and appliances of any kind must not be allowed to pass from the affected room to the healthy stock. Immediately a bird shows obvious signs of infection it should be taken back (together with the cage it occupies) to the infected room to take its chance with the rest. Needless to say, the earlier this isolation is put in force the better. But during the summer months, when birds are still breeding, it is as well to get the disease diagnosed before breaking up the arrangements of the room, in order to be certain that it is not done for any comparatively trivial cause. This, of course, may be done by getting a post-mortem on a bird that has died, and, considering the small fee, one should always make a point of getting a post-mortem with the least possible delay whenever birds begin to die off in rapid succession. Having isolated the healthy birds, the latter should be given a saline aperient for a few days. A few grains of Epsom salts in two tablespoonfuls of water is as good as anything for this purpose. A plain diet of Canary seed, with a fairly liberal supply of green food, and no egg for the time being, should also be given. In the case of the sick birds a similar course of aperient is given to begin the treatment. The diet consists of scalded rape and sponge cake moistened with sherry. A supply of green food may also be added to this simple dietary. In the drinking water fifteen drops of brandy are to be given daily. This is continued until an improvement begins to be seen in the condition of the birds, when the brandy is discontinued, and a twopenny packet of quinine powder (presumably a stock line of some chemists) is to be dissolved in one ounce of tincture of steel, and ten drops of this solution given in the water daily instead. Under this simple treatment a very respectable proportion of the birds (according to the writer) survived the infection. The utmost cleanliness in cages and all food and water vessels must be observed. Food and water vessels which are amenable to such treatment should be boiled for a few minutes daily in water in which a lump of common washing soda is dissolved, and the cage floor should be well covered with pine sawdust during the attack, and this should be cleaned out and burnt every day. These precautions will do much in themselves towards cutting short and minimising the virulence of an attack. It naturally follows that the most thorough overhauling and disinfection becomes necessary after such an infectious disorder. The danger of recurrence is so great, even after what has appeared the most drastic treatment, that the general supposition is that destruction by fire of all cages and bird-room appliances, save such glass, china, and metal articles as can be rendered aseptic by thorough boiling, is the only really safe plan to pursue. Still, when one has a lot of well-made new, or little used cages, this method rarely gets carried out. For this reason the following treatment of cages and rooms is recommended (it is said to have been quite a success in the case already referred to). This is given for what it is worth, and without any warranty. The cages are first well cleaned in the ordinary way, care being taken to reserve all dirt, dust, etc., for immediate destruction by fire at the finish. Then wash well all over, inside and outside, with a solution of two tablespoonfuls of carbolic fluid, as obtained from a chemist, in each half-gallon of hot water, working it well in all joints and corners with a brush. If the epidemic has been severe (or prolonged) the walls of the room might also with advantage be washed down with a similar solution whilst the cages are drying. When dry, stack the cages in the centre of the room, back to back, in order to leave free access to the insides, and fumigate with sulphur for two or three days. To do this, first stop up the chimney so as to prevent any draughts or ventilation, paste strips of brown paper over the window sashes and any other exits to the open-air, close all ventilators, and set one or two open metal pans, standing on two or three bricks each, about the room; place in the bottom of each pan a few live glowing coals, and scatter over each a handful of yellow brimstone. Then make your own exit, close door, paste strips of paper around it to make all airtight, and leave it for two or three days. When the door is next opened, throw open all windows and ventilators, and give the room a good airing. Then wash out the cages with hot soda and water, and when dry, re-whiten the inside with limewash prepared with quicklime, to each gallon of which a pint of paraffin oil has been added. Stir the wash frequently when using, and finish by giving one or two coats of similar wash to the walls of the room. Finally, re-varnish the outsides of cages with copal or spirit varnish—the former being rather slow in drying is best in the hands of a novice, as it allows him more time to work it on smoothly and make a decent job of it. As a last word on the subject, it may be well to point out that the cages being lime-washed with quick-lime it would be a wise policy to allow them to stand empty for a few weeks for the heat of the lime to pass away before again putting birds in them.

A Tale of Two Fishers.

SIR,—I am sending the following account, from my local paper, hoping it will interest you. A Mr. A. T. Taylor writes:—As fishermen's yarns are notorious, I hardly expect the following experience will be believed; nevertheless the facts stated are absolute truth. When fishing in the open near Ashow recently, I was startled by a Kingfisher settling on one of two rods at my feet, hanging over the river. I sat perfectly still, hardly daring to breathe, for what seemed like five minutes, the bird in the meantime turning this way and that, always with an eye on the water below. At last, darting under the second rod, about two or three feet away, he rose and settled on the second rod with a small fish in his mouth. He took a sharp look at me, and seeming at this time to scent danger, darted away across the river like a flash. The time he must have been on the two rods would be a minute or a minute and a half, and as he was only about eight feet from me, the opportunity to admire his grand colours was one I would not have missed for a trifle. I have heard of this bird settling on the point of a rod projecting beyond a bush, but it should be borne in mind that in this case there was nothing to hide me from the bird when on either rod.

How a Reader Prevented the Plucking of Young.

SIR,—I have been a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS and CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for the past three years, but I had never tried my hand at breeding till this year, and I think I have been very lucky, for from one pair of Yorkshires I had 13 eggs, all fertile. I only let the hen sit on 11, however—two fours and one three. I have reared them all, thanks to some useful hints gleaned from CAGE BIRDS, which I wish every success. I would just like to show some of your readers a little device by which I stop the hen plucking the young. I take a spare double breeder wood partition (marked A) and cut out a square piece of about 6ins. (marked B), leaving about a quarter of an inch of wood at the bottom, to fix the wires to, set wide enough apart for the hen to feed the young through them, but not too wide, or the young may scramble through. I have not had a single bird plucked by this plan. I am sure some of the readers will be pleased to see this.

Appeal for Help by the Officials.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow us to state through your columns that, owing to bad weather which resulted in the wrecking of the poultry and pigeon marquees, and a wretched gate, we have a very heavy adverse balance on this show's accounts. We wish, therefore, to ask prize-winners if they will be good enough to wait for a few weeks for their cheques, and, in doing so, we can only offer them our sincerest apologies and regrets. We hope to pay winners in guaranteed classes very soon. We are glad to be able to say that an appeal made to members to forego part, or the whole of, their prize-money until others are quite paid has met with a most laudable response, and while we do not wish to press the matter, we hope that some outside exhibitors and fancier friends will help us, either in the same way, or by giving us something towards a fund which has been started to wipe off the deficit. Names of all subscribers and exhibitors foregoing prize-money will be published. Besides the above, we have arranged a prize draw, and shall be glad to hear from anyone who will help this forward also. We take this opportunity of thanking all those exhibitors whose birds went astray, owing to the accident, for their patience and consideration, and it is a great satisfaction to be able to say that, instead of complaint, we have had nothing but sympathy upon having such an excellent show marred by unavoidable circumstances.

An Experience when Breeding Goldfinch-Linnet Hybrids.

SIR,—I thought the following might interest your readers. I have an aviary containing one cock Goldfinch and one hen Linnet. The Linnet built a nest and laid four eggs, which were all clear. The second nest contained four eggs—three clear, one with a chick dead in shell. The third nest contained three eggs—two clears and one young one was hatched out. But after two days the Goldfinch killed it. And now she has gone to nest again, and is sitting hard. I should like to know if the young from such a pair as above would be scarce Hybrids?

Fifteen Not Out Scored by a Young Beginner.

SIR,—As I am a lover of birds, I thought I would like you to know how I am getting on with them. In 1908 I started with a pair of "Norwich," but had no luck with them that year, only rearing one bird. At that time I did not take in CAGE BIRDS, and I put my failure down to this. Since then I have taken the paper in regularly every week, and through reading it I have scored a success, as this year I paired up the same two birds, and have reared 15 young up to the time of writing, which I think is very good considering I knew nothing of birds until I took in CAGE BIRDS. I think I have got quite a lot for a young beginner of 18.

A Question for Users of Long Clap Nets.

SIR,—In reply to "Querist," whose letter appeared in your issue of August 14, I may say that in the morning clap nets lie alright, that is, while the dew is about; but as soon as the sun rises, or the wind gets up, the nets begin to "sag," will not spring over so quickly, and will lap over at each end and appear "gappy" in the centre. Well, then you should take your two hind staffs, or poles as some call them, from the side lines, and take a mallet and strike your two hind pegs; then tighten your lines. It means taking your pegs nine inches or so farther back. Then put the staffs on again, and you will find the net will be alright, and that it will spring over much better and more quickly. Nine inches lap is plenty, I think. If "Querist" will try this, it will bring about the desired effect.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

SIR,—Your issue of August 21st contains a report of a Committee meeting of Y.C.C. of Ireland, in which is given an extract from Mr. Mulligan's (Sligo) letter of resignation as a member of Committee. Mr. Mulligan is alleged to have stated in his letter that I commented on a letter sent me when I was hon. secretary of the club before I had submitted it to my Committee. The report of the Committee meeting is signed by Mr. Hyland, the hon. secretary pro tem., who, if my memory serves me correctly, was present at the Committee meeting at which I read Mr. Tighe's (Sligo) letter. Be that as it may, those who attended the meeting, at which Mr. Cloke presided, know that it was decided to "take no notice of it" (the letter), and that it was not even marked "read." It was after I had submitted the letter to the Committee, and not before, that I commented on it, and then only in a general way, not even mentioning names or alluding to any particular district. If you would kindly insert this letter you would much oblige. Every letter I received from a member, or from a creditor of the club, was read by me at the Committee meetings following their receipt by me.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—Having been a Linnet fancier for nearly thirty years, I have been much interested in the correspondence respecting Linnet singing which has appeared in your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS for these last few weeks. But although I have kept Linnets almost continuously for all these years, I don't know everything yet. If some of the expert contest singers would kindly give us (novices) a few tips, I am sure we should all be very thankful. I have never had the pleasure of being present at a Linnet singing contest (though I don't live a hundred miles from Blackburn, and they go strong there); but I have heard one or two contest winners sing at their owners' residences, and they were certainly a treat—far and away better than anything I ever possessed. They had the most beautiful runs and trills, and they went at it till they shook again. How is it? Racing pigeon men say that it is the man that makes the pigeon. I wonder if it is the same with regard to Linnets? If it is, the experts keep the method of doing it very, very close. "London Fancier," in your issue of July 17, asked "whether these birds have got their own wild song, or whether they are trained by some artificial instrument?" In answer to that, I may say that a very successful contest singer of my acquaintance kept a good German cock Canary alongside his Linnets. I am beginning to think these extra good Linnets have been trained under some other bird. It is funny that really good Linnets should be so very scarce. I have had a few moderately good ones in my time, but they nearly always had some objectionably bad passage in their song which spoiled the whole lot. What has a fellow to do to improve that kind of bird? I always get rid of them. Mr. G. Rostron tells us in his letter of July 31 that "there is not more than one good Linnet in a thousand." I am inclined to think he is right, but that statement isn't very encouraging to the novice, when he thinks that he might have to buy nine hundred and ninety-nine before he gets the one. Referring again to the champions to which I had the pleasure of listening, they certainly were extra fine, and sang in the Linnet voice, but there were one or two trills or runs that struck me as having been acquired from some source other than the Linnet. But, anyway, if some of our successful Linnet fanciers would kindly tell us how to work up a few really good quality singing Linnets, I am sure a crowd of anxious novices would be truly grateful.

LIVE AND LEARN.

SIR,—I have read with much interest in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, the letters on the song of the Linnet North and South. I should like to say that the fanciers in the North have a very different way of Linnet singing to what we have in the South. So I think it was very ungrateful of the Northern fanciers to pass their opinions as they did on the Londoner who called himself "A London Fancier." Kindly convey my thanks to Mr. Barnard for his support. I am, sir, a constant reader, and

ANOTHER LONDON FANCIER.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to say that I have read your correspondents' letters on Linnet singing for some weeks, and I have come to the conclusion that some of them know very little about the Linnet song. Your correspondent Mr. Barnard seems rather upset. I myself read some of the letters with a smile. It is quite right what he says—a man is not going to sit down and give all his hard-earned experience away for nothing; but for the sake of young fanciers I will write this, that the Linnet has its own song. It requires no Larks, Titlarks, or any other Larks to rear them. The Linnet taken from the nest and caged will sing the same changes that his parent did before him; that has already been proved. Linnets in different counties do different changes, and the species has more changes than any other English song bird. Then there are the singing races; the North claim to have the correct style. Having had the pleasure of seeing a little of both sides, I am sure the London style of singing is fair both to the bird and the owner, because the two birds are hung, say, 3ft. apart, the timekeeper calls time, and there is silence. Two men are elected to "chalk" for the birds, and two more look over to see they "chalk" correctly. The birds hang, as a rule, for ten or fifteen minutes, and the "chalks" are taken for break of song or changes, which are arranged for, as a rule, before the birds go up. I think it would be better for the young Linnet fanciers if some people would first learn about the Linnet and its song before they start penning views on the subject.

The Sensational Scottish Disqualification Case.

SIR,—The letters of "Southern Fancier" and the gent who adopts a Latin nom-de-plume are very "straight talking," and ought to make some of our Scottish bodies "sit up." Let's hope they'll do their duty. But if "Southern Fancier" thinks the Dalmellington-cum-Ayr business stands alone, he makes a very large-sized mistake—the borrowing and lending game in Scotland is in a much more flourishing state than that. Who, I wonder, was the very well-known Scottish exhibitor, neither from the East-side nor the West-side, but from in between, who recently borrowed the "team" being shown by an equally well-known English exhibitor (also from the Midlands) and showed them in his own name? Was another "trophy" to blame for this? How much did the Englishman get out of it, I wonder? And why did those who noticed this thing not protest, especially when these very birds were again shown by the exhibitor from the South? Is it because so many of us up here are tarred with the same brush? According to our Latin friend, it looks as though a new set of fanciers will have to arise in Scotland before they dare fearlessly expose malpractices of this kind; and I believe he's about right. "Have they never lent birds and never faked?" he asks those who would judge others. That is the awkward question, and from my own knowledge of the Scottish Fancy not many up here want to be called upon to face it. I should just think "Southern Fancier" has no confidence in anything Gemmell may say. Every Scotsman I know laughs at the easy way in which the English club (the N.B.B. and M.C.) swallowed his letter, especially seeing that in it he contradicted himself. I see now that Mr. McQuiston states that another Ayr fancier (it seems to be rather hot air in that neighbourhood!), named Wilson, exhibited at Ayr Show the Bullfinch which was stained by Gemmell. Seemingly, there are a good many people in Ayr who can't tell a stained Bullie when they see one. Let's hope it isn't a case of use being second nature And how did Gemmell, the pigeon exhibitor, the "novice" (as Mr. McQuiston himself terms him), who has never—or hardly ever—kept a cage-bird, acquire so well the "art" of staining Bullies? I wonder; and all the world wonders, I should think. Now, is it not true that this much-lent Bullie did not belong to Gemmell at all (though he afterwards bought it), but was lent to him by a Mr. C——, of Kirkcudbright, who has admitted it, and also denied that it was stained when it left him. Had Gemmell this bird in his possession sufficient time before the show to have stained it (even if he knew how)? From what I hear he certainly had not. Wasn't Gemmell at the show held in Dalmellington going about threatening to take McQuiston "to law" for saying that the Bullfinch was stained? I think so. It will be interesting to know how Wilson came to be drawn into this mess. And more interesting still to see how the Scottish B.B. and M.C. is going to get at the "truth."

NORTHERN FANCIER.

The Cuckoo in Confinement.

SIR,—In "The Boys' Own Natural History," the Rev. J. G. Wood writes:—"A tame Cuckoo, that lived for more than a year in captivity, seemed to consider a young mouse an especial treat. The mouse was first beaten against the ground on a hard stone until it was reduced to a soft mass, after which process it was swallowed."

O. HALSTEAD.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

SIR,—On seeing in CAGE BIRDS that a gentleman, Mr. J. Hards, wishes to know how to breed mealworms, I may say that being only a young fancier myself, but a great reader of CAGE BIRDS, I am able to tell him of one way of breeding them. Get a box 18ins. long and 12ins. wide, and 5ins. deep; fill with meal ½in. from top, and bury three small dead birds, which you can get from any bird shop, if you do not happen to have any; and then tack the lid down and leave for a fortnight or three weeks. If you like you can damp meal at the top with a little beer. Put the box in a shed or cupboard. If buried in meal properly there will be no smell.

Hybrids Born with Crossed Beaks.

A Curious Experience.

SIR,—It may interest your readers to know of my curious experience with one of my muling pairs—a Redpoll and a hen Canary—this season. They had three nests, 15 eggs in all, 12 fertile, three clear. All the youngsters with the exception of two (one of which I have now) were born with crossed beaks, and lived about three or four days. In each case a rather large "air-bag" formed on the neck, expanding and going down as the birds breathed. The youngsters seemed to be in great pain when about three days old, struggling hard to breathe, and eventually dying. I might say that the hen was a good feeder, but owing to the crossed beaks she could not feed them properly. Should like to hear from any of your readers who have had a similar experience. Should also like to know the cause of this.

GOLDIE-LINNET.

Linnet Singing and Catching.

SIR,—You can catch birds at good water (drinking) spots without any song if you can lay on the side of the water, like at certain places where I go sometimes and get twenty dozen on a hot day. The birds you want for the grass are long laying Linnets that don't "hip." I have had birds, the best of singers, which I have sold for 3s. or 4s., because they "hip"; otherwise I would not have taken 20s. for them. People talk about their good birds, champions on their own nail, but borrow a dozen of them and see how many will be worth 10s. on the grass. It is like borrowing a good Chaffinch for pegging. One good one, 49 say. "take me home." I don't like them in the tree. Regarding Linnet singing, there is a large house in Shoreditch where you can hear some night singing next month. They generally sing three changes of song, or "one in mouth." If this gentleman wants to hear some, come to Club Row, and he will soon find out where they sing. If he likes he can get a race on for a pound or two with his bird. He says he can tell what the Linnets will do, if kept by themselves. I take it he means whether they come from Hants, Kent, Cambridge, Essex, or elsewhere, without hearing them. Will he inform me where birds that do this song come from, and near about the part of the county, and I will tell him if he is right? "Tolic, tolic, perly gee," "Icle, icle, ar," "icle icle ar ic," "tolic, ar ic," "tolic, bargey, weet," "widdle, widdle, gee." I will next write about birds not singing in fields as in cages, and the difference in the amount of birds I have caught this year at different places, as this is a hobby of mine, and I have a lot of week-ends at it. Where I spent a week I did not catch so many Finches by two dozen, and Linnets not a fourth, yet had better weather than last year, and had people to help me, which I had not before. I know what I am talking about, and can tell a bird with the next; not like some fanciers, don't know a cock from a hen for sure when young (especially Goldfinches). I am not an old bird sharper who pulls at everything, but a young sportsman, and I wait till birds are low enough to reckon mine, and if anybody else went where I go they would not know anyone had been there. The birds would not be off in all directions when they saw the brace birds and heard the song.

I LIKE THE BEST.

Several letters unavoidably held over.

Under the White Rose.

THE National Green Marked Y.C.C. held a committee meeting on Saturday evening last at their headquarters, the principal business being the allocation of the club's patronage. A goodly number of applications had been sent in, but in consequence of dates and judges clashing, all could not be fixed; therefore the final decision will not be arrived at until the meeting of Saturday next (September 4th), when everything must be put ship shape ready for the publication of the year book.

TO-DAY (Saturday) the Yorkshire County B.B. and M. Club meet to fix up their prizes and competitions for the coming season, and the secretary informs me that their patronage has been pretty freely applied for, and more so from the districts outside the Bradford radius, which will please the committee, as it is their earnest wish to spread the advantages of the club throughout the county. As the benefits to be gained are numerous, it is hoped the membership will spread also in the districts as yet untouched by the club.

SOCIETIES holding their shows in the early part of the season are now very busy arranging schedules, etc. We shall soon be in the midst of the show season again, and fanciers in the Union must not overlook the fact that they will require water tins, as these will not, as during the last two years, be supplied by the societies, but must be sent along with the birds by the exhibitor.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Dysart and District C.B.S.

The members of Dysart C.B.S. have had on the whole a very fair season. The summer has been the best we have had for a few years past in regard to the Border Fancies. A. Watson for his first year has bred 30 youngsters, some very good specimens being amongst them. He has had some promising buff cocks, which with a good moult will be heard of later. J. Hutchinson had 30 young Borders, some very good ones amongst them; but the outstanding one is a Cinnamon-marked youngster of a good strain of birds with which he hopes to score at the first show. D. Walker has not been so fortunate. He has bred eleven Borders and a Greenfinch Mules. As they are late birds he cannot say much about them yet, but hopes to stage a winner or two from them. H. Bisset has bred 12 Norwich. He is one of our leading fanciers, but has had very bad luck this season. He had the misfortune to lose by death one of the best promising British birds in the district recently, viz., a large, well-formed Missel Thrush. R. Trail has bred 8 Norwich, 10 Borders, all promising youngsters. Alex Gray, 8 youngsters; he has some good wild birds for the show bench. G. Harris has bred a few Norwich and Commons. J. Macgregor comes next with over 40 youngsters, mostly common birds. He always comes out on top with his Commons, and I hope he will do the same this year. A. Black has a grand stock of the birds with the Circle type, but at the moment I do not know the number of young he has. J. M'Ewing (our latest "capture") is a marvel. He has bred from one English Goldfinch, 16 Mules, Yellows, and Buffs. They are under treatment for the forthcoming show, and if he does not win with some of them, I would like to be in possession of the ones that beat them. P. Burt has bred a few good Norwich, but I do not know the number. I, myself, have bred 53 youngsters, Norwich, about 20 Commons amongst them.—JAMES LOGAN, hon. secretary.

The Moulting Season.

Some advice on the Treatment of Birds which are Moulting, with a "Tip" or two on helping them to make a good start.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Green Food for the Young.

Many fanciers go so far as to say that no greenstuff of any kind should be given to the young stock until after the completion of the moult. Whatever the result may be in certain cases, in my opinion it is the abuse of green food rather than the use of it which is apt to set up trouble. Whilst the weaning process is going on, or from the time the birds are separated from their parents until they are from six to seven weeks old, and well on to a seed diet, it is best to withhold very moist and succulent herbage, and give only such things as the seed stalks of shepherd's purse or half ripe plantain stalks. But after the given time has elapsed no harm can accrue from the use of wholesome green food in variety. The supply should be limited at the beginning, until the birds are accustomed to it, always giving preference to seedy kinds rather than rank leaves. Given judiciously, it must be a bold man indeed who attempts to gainsay its use in preference to resorting to drugs and unnatural messes for keeping the birds healthy and regular in habit.

Among the Grown-ups.

As a rule the adult stock of Canaries, and pairs which have been raising young will be the last of all to break into moult, the young generally being in full swing when the old birds begin to break away. An early moult is desirable from many points of view, and this should suffice to prevent one keeping the breeding stock together until too late to enable them to have a brief interval for recuperation before commencing to moult. After the early part of July there is always a certain risk in allowing a pair to re-commence nesting—a risk, that is, of the eggs proving unfertile; of not more than one or two being laid for a clutch; one or both birds breaking into moult before the young, if any, are hatched, or are many days old, and the consequent desertion, or making it necessary to remove the old birds if they are required to be colour fed. And several other things are equally liable to turn up and place serious obstacles in the way of any young being reared. Of course, this is not saying that no young can ever be reared after this time; but mature experience invariably convinces one that the game is scarcely worth the candle.

The interval betwixt breeding and the moult should always be devoted to getting the birds into good condition. This again is more important in varieties that have to be colour-fed, for the simple reason that soft food has to be used through the moult, which necessitates an appreciable portion of soft food forming part of the bird's diet for a larger portion of the year than is altogether advisable, especially if there is no interval between breeding and moulting when it may be suspended for a time. The feeding during this interval should have been plain and wholesome; aim at removing any ill effects that are set up by the lengthened use of a free supply of rich egg food during the breeding season. When first separated put the birds on a diet of plain Canary seed only for one week, and allow a fair amount of green food daily, and every second day add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water. After this initiatory treatment discontinue the buckthorn, limit the green food to a fair sized spray daily, and add a fourth part of the bulk of summer rape to the Canary seed, and keep them on this diet until it is time to begin giving colour food which should be as soon as the birds begin to appear dull, and occasionally snatch "forty winks" during the day.

Allow the birds plenty of space for exercise —with wings, if possible—and let them have free access to the bath. Then they should be in good hard condition to withstand the moulting without injury, and also to get through the process in good time and without a hitch, which is always a most important point, but naturally assumes the greatest importance where colour feeding is concerned, on account of the material saving which is effected in "feed" by a rapid moult shortening the length of time over which it has to be given.

Starting them off.

Should the birds be left in roomy quarters to moult, or be caged up in smaller moulting cages? This question can only be decided when one has a knowledge of the stock, and the intentions of the owner. If, for example, the stock is common singing birds, which it is intended to dispose of as soon as the moult is over, it will be a decided advantage to let them remain in the flights undisturbed throughout the moult. Similarly all surplus stock of an ordinary type which one intends to dispose of may be picked out of the bulk and moulted in this way, even when the cream of the stock are to be moulted specially in cages. Whether this transference to moulting cages should be made before or after the commencement of the moult (as shown by the casting of feathers) is a matter of diverse opinion. Many fanciers prefer to allow all to remain in the flights until they have broken well into moult. Others consider it a mistake to make any change of quarters once the moult has fairly got under way. My advice to the beginner is to lose no time when the birds show signs of dropping into moult in getting them all sorted out and placed at once in their moulting quarters. Having done this, it will do no harm to give a mild aperient all round for two days. For this purpose nothing will be better than two teaspoonfuls of syrup of buckthorn in half-a-pint of water; this mixture given in place of pure water in the drinkers (glasses) for two consecutive days. Where only a few birds are kept, ten drops of the syrup in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water may be given.

A Word about Cages.

See that the cages are scrupulously clean, more particularly that the insides are washed perfectly free from dust and grimy accumulations. Neglect of this precaution may entail the washing of birds for the very first show, whereas one should always aim at keeping the birds in fit condition for showing as long as possible without washing. A good layer of sawdust on the floor assists materially in keeping the inmates nice and clean; but in these circumstances gritty sand must be provided in a separate vessel. A very light muslin cover over the cages is also a great advantage from the time the new plumage begins to show through; when one has the misfortune to live in a smoky atmosphere it becomes a real necessity to keep the show birds in anything like good condition. Do not, however, use a heavy material for the covers. The flimsiest material will suffice, so as to admit air quite freely.

Exceptions to Moulting in Companies.

There are exceptional circumstances in which the practice of keeping a number of birds together for moulting cannot be strictly carried out. Young birds of any variety are apt to contract a habit of plucking the plumage of their companions, and not infrequently do a vast amount of damage where the birds are being colour fed, particularly amongst Lizards, where the loss of tail or flight feathers is always a more or less serious matter if the specimen is otherwise a typical one. If feather pluckers are found to exist, remove them, and moult by themselves. No other plan is of any practical good, because whilst you are experimenting the mischief is still going on, and, in all probability, other birds are learning the habit.

Excepting the Lizards, and known feather pluckers, all other birds may be caged up in twos or threes of one sex in the moulting cages. This has a decided advantage in the case of birds that are to be colour fed, inasmuch as the birds will almost invariably vie with each other in getting a full share and "a bit over" of everything that is given, including the colour food.

The Dietary.

As a staple diet, plain Canary seed should be given in unlimited quantities. A pinch of summer rape should be given separately daily, and every third day a small teaspoonful of egg food, crushed biscuit, or sponge cake, with about half the usual full feeding strength of colour feed mixed in it. Occasionally this may be replaced by an equivalent quantity of bread and milk sprinkled with tasteless red pepper. Should any of the birds appear to ignore the colour food at first, give only a slight sprinkling of it, and dust it over with maw seed and a pinch of soft sugar, and gradually increase the quantity of colour food each time. In most cases, however, when the colour food is neglected by any number of birds, it is very probable that something is wrong with the "feed," either in quality or composition. In addition to this, give about half-a-teaspoonful of maw seed every second day to each couple of birds, and continue this until the moult is a little more than half through, when it should be gradually decreased, and a few grains of linseed per bird given about twice each week until the birds are quite fine in plumage again. A liberal supply of green plantain stalks, seedy stalks of shepherd's purse, mouse-ear, chickweed (nearly all seed-eaters are simply ravenous after this, but, unfortunately it is not everywhere available), and seedy sprays of ordinary chickweed, as well as deep red-coloured blooms of nasturtium, and marigolds may be given daily.

This regimen (minus the colour food in the case of Borders) will be all that is necessary through the moult for all small or medium-sized Canaries.

The Larger Breeds Considered.

But for all large breeds, or breeds which require a large bony frame, such as Lancashires, Crests and Crest-breds, Belgians, or Scotch Fancies, a rather more generous diet is very advisable throughout the moulting period: a little extra soft food—not necessarily increasing the proportion of egg—but, say, slightly reducing the quantity given at a time and giving it every second day, and about twice a week giving a small teaspoonful per bird of a mixture of hemp, millet, linseed, broken groats, coarse oatmeal, or rolled oats, and a few cracked sunflower or safflower seeds. These latter seeds are quite beyond the power of Canaries to manipulate if given whole, although they possess a very rich and nutritious kernel. If one has a suitable mill to crack the husk and kibble the kernel, they should be utilised in this way, and broken freshly as required. A piece of cuttlefish is also a useful adjunct to have always accessible during the moult, and an occasional dose of twenty drops of chemical food in the water towards the end of the moult and for a week or two afterwards is also a most useful pick-me-up.

If any birds appear to make a slow start, or lag, it is advisable to give them a few shreds of saffron in the water (as mentioned before), together with twenty drops of whisky, for a few days. Half-a-dozen shreds or thereabouts—or enough to tinge the water a yellow colour in a couple of hours—will suffice. This will frequently "break up" the birds, and set them going freely in a few days.

When the new plumage begins to show (but not before), the light in the room should be toned down, either by "sheeting down" the cages, or keeping the window blinds drawn down. The latter plan, however, can only be carried out when the birds have a room to themselves. Where this is not the case (also in such case where the locality is smoke-laden), the "sheeting down" process, which is nothing more than suspending an improvised curtain in front of the cages, will have to be resorted to. The material generally termed "butter muslin" is sufficient for all practical purposes, and not only serves as a kind of filter to the air admitted to cages, but affords the birds plenty of light to get about quite freely, yet not enough to have any injurious effect upon the colour.

When the new plumage is showing in streaks down each side of the breast, and on the shoulders, is the proper time to begin to give a little iron in the water two or three times a week, to strengthen and "fix" the colour. This is best given in the form of sulphate of iron, a crystal about the size of a large hemp seed being dissolved in each ounce of drinking water. If it is found to give rise to constipation (which the dietary advised is not sufficient to counteract) add to the water at the same time a few drops of pure glycerine, or honey. Continue the iron twice a week until the plumage has quite finished growing.

The Finishing Touch.

The time to make the final modifications in the treatment is when new quills begin to show about the head and neck. This is the time to begin to lessen the colour food (when the birds are being colour fed), and also the most suitable time to decrease the supply of maw seed, which should be gradually stopped entirely, and to begin to substitute a little linseed two or three times a week. Be careful not to overdo this item—a small pinch per bird will suffice— and continue it regularly until a month or so after the new plumage appears to be fully grown. Remember that the best part of the gloss, or sheen, is produced after the feathers are fully grown, and do not stop the linseed too soon, or its effect will be partly lost.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

The Best of the Barbets.

One thing that hinders the free importation of many beautiful birds from India is the fact that most of the finest species are found in the Himalayas. These mountain birds are only brought down to Calcutta in the winter, and so during most of the year a trip round the Calcutta bazaars is apt to be disappointing to the seeker after rarities, though always worth undertaking on the off chance. There are, however, some common birds of the plains of India which can be obtained at any season, such as Bulbuls, Mynahs and Barbets, and of these last the commonest, and at the same time the best for most fanciers, is the little "Coppersmith," so called by Europeans from its ringing metallic note. Natives of Bengal know it as Chota bussunt, which means "Small Barbet." In size this bird about equals a Sparrow, as far as length goes, but is really a bigger and heavier bird, being bigger in body and shorter in tail. The main colour of the plumage is green, varied with black, yellow, and red on the head and breast, and the feet are also coral red. The whole colouring is well contrasted and strikingly handsome, and I found that in India the bird was generally admired. Few people there know it by sight, as it always keeps in the trees, where its green plumage conceals it unless carefully looked for.

A Victim of Satoo.

In my time the Coppersmith was not regularly in stock, though often to be found in the dealers' cages casually, and this for a very peculiar reason. It cannot live long on the "satoo" or pea-meal usually used for feeding non-seed-eaters, but dies in a few days if fed on this. If, however, bananas be given, it will thrive from the first as soon as caught, and young birds can be hand-reared on this food alone, as I have personally proved. Young Coppersmiths, by the way, have no red in the plumage, and the legs are only flesh-coloured, but they are not to be mistaken for anything else. It is very strange that satoo, on which the large Blue-cheeked Barbet thrives, should be so fatal to this bird. There must be something specially deleterious in the meal, for bread-and-milk agrees with the Coppersmith well enough, and one they had at the Zoo lived for about a year on their usual soft food, though I cannot say it looked well. But I do not think anyone who would provide plenty of fruit, and a few insects now and again, would find this pretty little Barbet at all hard to keep. By the way, in keeping and shipping these birds care must be taken to put each in a separate compartment, as they are very intolerant of crowding, and fight most vindictively, though I have known several adult-caught specimens live well together in a three-foot flight.

The Coppersmith Barbet.

Was it Hatched in a Mare's Nest?

There was a rumour going about the trade the other day that a specimen of the celebrated South American Umbrella bird (Cephalopterus ornatus) had been imported and sold for ten shillings to some fortunate individual, its first owner not knowing that he was entertaining an angel unawares, so to speak; but inquiries I made were not successful in revealing the whereabouts of the treasure. As this bird has never, so far as I have heard, been imported alive, I may mention that in general appearance it is very like a thick-set Crow, being a big, glossy-black, strong-billed bird; but it is distinguished at once by the peculiar feathery tassel which hangs from its breast, something like the hairy tassel of the Turkey-cock, and by its peculiar crest, which spreads out on all sides when expanded, whence the name given to the bird. It is a fruit-eater, and ought to be easy to keep. Specimens are on view in the Natural History Museum at South Kensington, so that anyone living in London who wants to get an idea of what the bird looks like can do so. For those who do not, perhaps the accompanying very rough sketch may give some idea of the characteristic features of this strange bird, which would certainly make a grand show specimen, and beat anything at present likely to appear on the bench.

The rare and curious Umbrella Bird.

Fear of the Blues?

The following experience I had some years ago, when keeping a number of Pekin Robins together, may be of interest to lovers of this most interesting of small cage birds. Their drinking water was supplied in several glass fountains, some of which were plain white, while others had the lip edged with blue and a large blue ball on the top. Now, I repeatedly noticed that though the blue-topped fountains were not absolutely avoided, they were not patronised by the birds to anything like the same extent as the plain ones, so that they would have plenty of water in them when the others were nearly empty. I cannot account for this except on the supposition that for some reason or other this bird does not like blue, and the hint may be of some use to those who are troubled by their Pekins interfering with the nests of other birds, as they will sometimes do; a blue glass ball attached might tend to keep them away, though it might act as a scare to the owners of the nest, unless they had been allowed to get used to the sight of it beforehand.

Breeding the Black Lories.

In the last number of the "Avicultural Magazine," Mr. E. J. Brook states that his Black Lories (Chalcopsittacus ater) have young, a very remarkable record, for it is very rare for any of these "Soft-billed" Parrots to breed in captivity, though two or three of the Lorikeets have done so. The Black Lory is a very remarkable-looking bird, with glossy black plumage which nevertheless shows indication of colour here and there, so that the effect suggests that the bird was really coloured, and has been imperfectly dyed black. The few specimens I have seen have shown extraordinary tameness; I remember one in Calcutta which was chained to a swing, and when I put out my hand to it, it promptly jumped on to my palm, and rolled over on its back like a playful kitten, afterwards clinging to me as if it did not want me to go. As far as I remember, eighty rupees (more than £7) were asked for this bird, though it had a damaged foot, so that it may be seen that a rare bird whose rarity is known is not necessarily to be had as a bargain even in the Far East.

In the Courts.

Catching Linnets on a Sunday.

At the last Lutterworth Petty Sessions (Leicestershire), William Wynes, Providence Place, and John W. Deacon, Wand Street, Leicester, were charged with taking wild birds at Ashby Magna on August 15th. There was a further charge by Inspector Stanhridge, of the R.S.P.C.A., Loughhorough, of cruelty to the birds taken.—Mr. Lancaster (Leicester) represented defendants, Wynes only appearing.

P.C. Button, stationed at Broughton Astley, stated that about 9.35 on Sunday morning, in a field occupied by Mr. Bodycote, near Ashby Magna Station, he saw defendants. They had a long net and cages, six newly-caught Linnets, and one cage of captive birds as decoys. Two out of the six died the same day. He asked defendants if they had permission to go on the land, but they replied "No." He took the decoy birds, and later in the morning the others, with the nets and traps (produced).

Mr. Lancaster stated that the men admitted taking the birds, and, in fact, were employed by some gardeners to do so. They came out from Leicester by the cheap train for the purpose. They were men out of work, and eked out a livelihood by catching a few birds. As the Bench were aware, there was no close season for Linnets. His attention had been drawn to a Provisional Order issued for the county, which prohibited the Linnets being taken on Sundays between July 31st and March 2nd following, and this case happened on the second Sunday in the prohibited time, so there was something to be said in justification, as they were not aware of the Order.—The Bench decided to hear the second charge.

P.C. Button stated he first saw defendants about 9.35, and watched them for twenty minutes. They had a long clap net, and one of them worked this, and the other was pulling the cord. The birds were allowed to fly up to the limit of a short cord, which, continually repeated, caused chafing and abrasions.—Defendant was put in the box, and stated he had been using one of the birds for four years, and one had been braced for three years, and had moulted in the brace. He had never seen or caused any cruelty.—The Bench decided to convict in both cases, the first case an inclusive fine of 8s. 6d. each, and the confiscation of the nets, birds, and cages, and in the second case a fine of 15s. each.

Wild Bird Life.

The House Sparrows' Flitting.

In the early Spring and Summer months the common House Sparrows were much too numerous in the garden and round the house. The food given in the aviaries and poultry runs was a constant attraction. One had no sooner attended to the wants of the inmates than the Sparrows came for their share. They would sit on the trees chattering and chirping with an injured air if one were late in attending to the stock. When feeding their young they became more than a nuisance, so impudent, in fact, and cheeky that they committed robbery before one's eyes, and within a minute or two returned to repeat the offence. Now, however, the gardens are clear. Every House Sparrow, both old and young, has gone to the cornfields. If we follow them there we shall have no trouble in locating them. By keeping along the hedgerow (now grown so luxuriantly that we hardly recognise it) we come at once upon their chief stronghold and gathering place, from the hedge (where they swarm as thick as the berries on the hawthorn). They raid the crops upon either side. A dozen or so drop into the corn, clinging with surprising agility to the swaying stalks. The main body follow, and a few stragglers bring up the rear. The damage done by a single bird is not much, excepting the corn he eats, but the weight of numbers has a different effect. Some half a dozen clinging to the same stalks fighting and quarrelling, as only Sparrows can, they break and beat down the heavy ears, scattering the golden grain in wilful waste. Occasionally the farmer gets a shot among the raiders, and then it is interesting to note the result of the bag. The majority of the birds are Sparrows in all stages of growth and plumage—young ones in nest feathers, with yellow edges to the beaks, and a few stray downy hairs characteristic of nestlings; others just breaking into moult; a few mother birds with the frayed and discoloured feathers indicative of an arduous summer. Here and there we gather an old cock bird, grimed and smutty with the smoke of the town, and we speculate upon his home. Is it Shoreditch or Woolwich, or near a factory in the suburbs? It may be either, for evidence is before us that these birds travel far from their usual haunts for their annual holiday among the tall hedges and golden grain, to meet their fellows from different parts, and eat to excess of the fattening wheat.

A Difference in Habit.

It is said that the Common Gulls on the West Coast of Scotland nest upon the sea coast and the grassy islets, but those on the East Coast fly some distance inland, and rear their young in the most desolate mountainous districts.

To Capture Tree Creepers.

So nervously sensitive is the tiny Tree Creeper that the concussion produced by the heavy jarring stroke of a stick against the bough to which it is clinging appears to promote temporary paralysis. No douht this is so, but the difficulty would be to get near enough to the bird to give the stroke.

The Cuckoo and Marsh Warbler.

It is recorded from Cambridge that a Cuckoo has used the nest of the rare Marsh Warbler to deposit its egg in. When we consider the rarity of this species, it seems an almost certain proof that the Cuckoo cannot use the nest of one species only; hut possihly in the mind of the Cuckoo the Marsh Warhler and Reed Warbler are identical.

The Boom of the Bittern.

A Son of the Marshes says, "Much has been written ahout the boom of the Bittern hy those who never heard it and never will. The hird has a weird cry of its own, but it is not a boom. The Snipe drums, or, rather, we might say hums, in the evening, and that sound has, I know, in more than one instance, heen attributed to the Bittern by those who ought to have known better."

A Rare Species.

The Nuthatch is one of the British birds about which few of the general public know anything. The species is not at all plentiful, heing distrihuted only in suitable localities. Their food consists of insects, ants, heechmasts, and hard seeds and kernels. When found frequenting old trees near a house they soon become familiar with the inhahitants, being hold and fearless. We have heard of several instances of these birds coming regularly to be fed.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

HARRY ALLEN.

HAVE YOU SEEN KELLY?

Kelly is all the rage, like Harry Allen's birds. Ladies and gentlemen, if you want real honest value, send to me for real classical stuff. Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, beautiful wing bars and nicely tanned on breast, 2/-; and a few picked birds, 2/6; these are the right sort. Beautiful cock Linnets, with new polished cage and my new book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6; they are singing grand. Linnets, singing grand, with new cage and my book of secrets, 2/6; I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. These are right for catching or contest singing. I sell these birds at a very low price to encourage the Fancy. My book alone is worth the money, as it has saved thousands of birds their lives. Linnets that have been hung under the champion Linnet of the world for two months, 1/6; they are singing grand, and in show condition. Linnets, from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world; without a doubt they are the finest singing Linnets ever heard for quality singing and time singing; they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest, only 1/-. Beautiful cock Larks, singing nice and low, and as straight as arrows, only 1/-; young cock Bullfinches, 1/6; hens, 1/- each. My new book of secrets, which tells you how they sing at Linnet contests, and the rules under which the champion Linnet of the world won all his prizes, and how to make birds sing at one another with their wings down, 9d. I have 5,000 books at hand; no waiting. Look out for my show birds shortly. I give my very best thanks to the following: London, co. Durham, Lancashire, Staffordshire, and Sheffield, and not forgetting my own town Leeds, where I have sold 700 Linnets at my bird stall in three Saturdays. For proof of the above, read what others say:—"125, Harvist-rd., Queen's Park, London.—Dear Sir,—Received bird with thanks; he is a nice steady bird. Thanks for your fair and honest dealings.—C. E. Bown to H. Allen." "18, Margaret-st., Sheetburn, Durham.—Dear Sir,—I received the birds all right, and give every satisfaction.—W. Thompson to H. Allen." "23, High-st., Dalbeattie.—Dear Sir,—Received bird all safe; he is a beauty and well worth the money; also thanking you for the extra picked one.—Wm. Rae to H. Allen." All my birds are on seven days' approval, cash or deposit, for 13 months. Not one bird sent back. For proof, the Editor. Those who want real honest value, send at once to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

No. 340.
Sliding Door for Wood-bar Cage-fronts.

Sent by Mr. J. W. Conkey, 62, Kitchener Street, Darlington, Durham.

Enclosed is a sketch of a sliding door for wood bar cage-fronts. I find the idea is much better than the ordinary door, especially in the breeding season. First take a piece of oak ¼in. square, and cut off two lengths of 6in. Then take a length of punched bar and mark on the wood, ¼in. from the end, and next a hole; then again at 10th and 11th holes. Then bore holes 1 and 11 (see Fig. A). Turn the wood on on side with marks to you, and put a tenon saw cut through to 1-16in. from the other edge 2 and 10 (see Fig. B). Then mark ¼in. each side of the cut, and cut down with sharp chisel (see Fig. C). Next see that they bend easy; if not, cut a trifle further down, but do not go through. All that you have to do now is to glue and press the ends inward, then let it set well (see Fig. D). Put the punched bar on again from hole to hole, and bore with small bradawl prickers remaining holes. Cut your wires 5ins. long. Then you have an opening about 5ins. square. Of course, you can make them any size to suit yourself, but always have one hole more than you want to allow for the V cut. I think the idea will be better seen from the sketches.—J. W. CONKEY.

No. 341.
Ventilating an Outdoor Aviary Without Draught.

Sent by Mr. William Allison, 8, Burnett Place, Aberdeer.

I enclose a sketch showing how an outdoor birdroom may be ventilated without causing a draught. The arrangement can be made out of either wood or tin. "A" is a piece cut out of door or the side of the bird-room. B is the shutter which is made to slide along and completely covers up A. C is the space at the bottom, where air passes downwards into the bird-room. A should be covered with wire netting or wire gauze to prevent the birds from escaping.—WILLIAM ALLISON.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-st., August 28th, when 17 birds sang. 1, 2, Hardcastle; 3, Stead. Judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. Also on August 29th, when 19 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Jennings, Naylor, and Mawson; and some very good singing was heard, before a crowded house. 1, Hardcastle; 2, Summers; 3 shared between Stead and Wigfield.—WILSON NAYLOR, hon. sec.

Club Reports.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 28th at St. George's Hall. Mr. W. T. Turner presided over a good attendance. In view of our annual show, to be held October 30th, we had a good evening fixing classes, etc. Mr. W. T. Turner was appointed show manager.—B. BAILEY.

SOUTHALL AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held August 30th, at St. John's Schools. There was a good number of members present. The chief business was the allotting of specials for Open Show, 27 being allotted to the various classes and sections. Votes of thanks were passed to donors of same, and one new member was elected. After a little friendly discussion another pleasant evening came to a close.—T. G. JEFFERY, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Usual monthly meeting held at headquarters, The Swan and Peacock, Wolverhampton, on August 26th, a very good muster of members being present. The whole evening was taken up with the business connected with our open Roller contest to be held November 3rd and 4th. Mr. F. A. Lester will judge, and we intend to leave no stone unturned to make the show a complete success.—J. H. WILLOWS, Hon. Sec..

GREAT HORTON (Good Intent) O.S.

Meeting held on August 28th at club-room. A dingram competition was held, and an interesting and instructive competition it proved to be. The sketches were drawn by Mr. Percy Jowett, who is an artist of merit, and Mr. D. Sutcliffe, of Wibsey, placed them. The prize money was pooled for two winners in equal shares, and the winners were Messrs. S. Briggs and H. Schofield, who tied, with others close up. A discussion was started on the Yorkshire Union shows, and will be taken up later on, as it is a subject which wants to be thoroughly understood before being voted on.—H. SCHOFIELD, hon. sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

At the monthly meeting held August 14th, an exhibition of hand-washing was given by Mr. William Cullen. Mr. Jas. Stenhouse (president), in opening the meeting, said he was glad to see such a turn-out of members, as it had always been his ambition to see the members in harmony, and as this was the first meeting of its kind, he hoped it would not be the last. Mr. Cullen set off to business in a most efficient manner. He explained, as he went along, how to turn and handle the birds. He had a special drying cage of his own construction on view, which was highly appreciated. After washing the birds he asked one of our members to try his hand. Mr. A. Dickson, after a few remarks, did exceedingly well. Mr. Cullen answered all questions in a most satisfactory manner. A vote of thanks was accorded both Mr. Cullen and our worthy chairman, the rest of the evening being spent in harmony, which, I am sure, was highly appreciated. —J. FORD, sec.

FIFE AND KINROSS NORWICH P.C.

At a meeting held August 28th in Penman's Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, Mr. T. Barclay (Kelty) presided. It was agreed to grant our patronage to the following societies:—October 23rd, Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A., judge Mr. A. G. Cameron (Kelso); December 4th, Cupar and Dis. O.S., probable judge Mr. J. Adams (Dundee); December 11th, Thornton and Dis. O.S., probable judge Mr. J. McLay (Kirkintilloch); Bowhill and Dis. O.S., probable judge Mr. J. Patterson (Chiruside). The Penman Cup is to be competed for at these four shows on points; also two medals are to be granted to each show, one for best cock bird and one for best hen shown by a member, and at Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A. a trouser length will be given by Mr. D. McGregor (Kinross) for best unflighted bird belonging to a member. All entries are to be marked on entry forms F. and K.P.C., and three birds nominated for cup to have "Cup" written after them. Donations were received from Mr. W. Spence (Cardenden) of 5s., and Mr. A. Ramsay (Lassoddie) of a gold medal to be given to winner of Penman Cup. This being all the business the meeting was closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman. Anyone desirous of joining us should do so now before the show season begins; full particulars will be given by me.—A. DICKSON, 37, Adams-terrace, Kelty.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY CLUB.

Will you kindly announce that the following have been selected as the cup shows of the club for the ensuing season:—Burnley, Peudleton, Birmingham, and Gatesbead. The other cup show is to be held at Wellingborough, subject to the date being satisfactory. The club show is to be at Pendleton. The contest between this club and the Southern N.P.C. is to be at Bolton, and that between the club and the Scottish N.P.C. is to be at Preston. The following is the list of specials (to date) to be competed for by members:—(1) The N.P.C. Challenge Cup, value £10 10s., on the same conditions as before; (2) valuable silver-plated tea urn, presented by Mr. J. E. Davies, to be won outright by four birds other than cup birds; (3) gold medal for winner of cup; (4) gold medal for runner-up for cup; (5) gold medal for best bird in Champion Section at club show; (6) six money prizes for best six birds from best first to best sixth at club show in Champion Section; (7) money prize for most points at each cup show, first prize winners not to compete; (8) special, value 30s., for points gained by four birds in Champion Section at cup shows; (9) £1 1s. cash given by Mr. W. Aitchison for most points gained by a member joining in 1909 at cup shows; (10) cup value 32s., presented by Mr. J. W. Ramsden for most points gained by four birds fed on his feeds; (11) special value 30s., for most points gained by an amateur at a club show; (12) silver-plated tea pot for most points gained by an amateur at cup shows; (13) silver-plated coffee pot for second most points; (14) silver-plated cream jug for third most points; (15) gold medal for best bird shown by an amateur at club show; (16) six money prizes for six best birds from best first to best sixth shown by amateurs at club show; (17) bound volume, presented by CAGE BIRDS for most points gained by an amateur in hen classes at a club show. May I remind members that subscriptions are now due, and must be paid before the first cup show, as per new rule, or they will not be eligible to compete for club specials? I should therefore be glad if they would let me have same at the earliest possible date, in order that I may get things in proper working order before the show season commences. I should also be glad to hear from anyone desirous of joining, and shall be plensed to give them any information they may require. I may say for their guidance that anyone joining now will be eligible to compete for any of the above specials.—JNO. HOPKINS, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTY B.B. & M.C.

A meeting of committee held August 28th, Mr. D. Duncan, jun. (president) occupying the chair. The following gentlemen were elected to membership: Messrs. Meadows (Malton), Wilkinson and Danby (Yarm-on-Tees), W. Woods (Pickering), J. P. Stamp (Whitby). Patronage was given to the winter shows of the undermentioned societies: October 23, Middlesboro' (judge, Mr. Marwood); October 29-30, York (Mules and Hybrids Mr. W. P. Barnes, British Mr. W. A. Cowgill); November 19-20, Hull (judge Mr. E. Brunskill); November 11, Malton (judge, Mr. W. Mundell); December 4, Harrogate (judge, Mr. A. Hirst); December 17-18, Halifax (Mules and Hybrids Mr. W. A. Cowgill, British Mr. W. Vardy); Jan. 8, Yarm-on-Tees (judge, Mr. C. Houlton). A few applications had to be withheld through clashing of dates and judges. Power was given the secretary to grant patronage to three societies, where different dates to above are selected. Mr. L. Hodgson's tender for rule books was accepted, and secretary would like matter for breeders' cards, which will be inserted at 1s. per half page. It was proposed by Mr. Boyle and seconded by Mr. Inman, that £4 be given for competition in the champion section in the following amounts, value 35s., 20s., 15s., 10s. There are also the CAGE BIRDS' prizes for competition as last year, for amateurs, of 25s., 15s. and 10s., for those members who have not "won more than three first prizes in open competition previous to current season." So hurry up ye British Bird fanciers, and send in your names for membership to me. —W. R. MYERS, Hon. Sec., 23, Ingleby-place, Bradford.

LONDON FEDERATION OF CAGE BIRD SOCIETIES.

A meeting of the Council was held on August 27th, when the following delegates attended: Messrs. H. E. Tringham (chairman), R. L. Crisp, W. H. Mugford, J. Dewhurst, A. C. Burn, J. Wyatt, H. Churchard, R. P. Harper, W. Penton, H. Smith, W. Clark, J. C. Birch, A. Cunningham, H. W. Tomsett, H. W. Cook, P. Adamthwaite (hon. sec.), and others.

The Insurance Scheme.

The Secretary stated that he had had a letter from the Inland Revenue Department of Somerset House to the effect that the filling up of the notice forms in connection with the insurance coupons constituted a contract between the person who filled it up and the Federation, so that a stamp duty of one penny per coupon was, therefore, involved. The Chairman informed the meeting that they had been advised not to seek to become affiliated as a friendly society for the purposes of the scheme, as the difficulties to be overcome would be almost, if not quite, insurmountable; and the secretary added that they had been further advised to proceed with any further scheme they might have in hand, and not endeavour to press the present one forward. The Council then proceeded to consider an alternative scheme which had been presented to them "in the rough" by the sub-committee. The idea, it was pointed out, was that any affiliated member wishing to take out an insurance policy for the season should take one for the amount he wished. It was suggested, said the chairman, that the amount of the insurance be left entirely at the option of the insurer; thus he could insure for £10, or for as much as £100, at the rate of 2d. per policy. A further idea was that a postcard should be printed, on which the insurer could state the number of birds, etc., he was insuring; then he would simply send the postcard to the secretary of the Federation, and be able to keep the policy himself, merely marking it from time to time for his own guidance.

In reply to a question by Mr. Cook (Poplar), the Chairman stated that the subject of fire insurance would probably be matter for a separate policy at a lower rate. He expressed the opinion in passing that in the case of anyone wishing to insure a bird on the outward and homeward journeys and also while at the show, it could be all done for 4d, and need not cost the insurer 6d., that was, 2d. for each. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Burn: Then this insurance policy will bear the penny stamp?—Yes, and the one stamp, of course, will do; so that each insurance need not be stamped.

Referring to the matter of limit of insurance, which it had been proposed should be £20, the Secretary said he took it the sub-committee proposed that the rules governing the insurance scheme of the Federation should remain practically intact; and the Council would remember that its liability for any one year had already been fixed at £12. The Chairman thought they should not put any limit on the amount of insurance, while Mr. Crisp was of opinion they should certainly for the first year minimise their risks as much as possible; which met with the approval of the majority present. If the Council were prepared to pay £500, then by all means, he said, issue larger policies; but he thought it best to put restrictions on the amount for which they could be held responsible.

Another question then suggested itself to the secretary. Were they, he asked, going to make the policy a yearly one? It was agreed afterwards that there was no need for any time limit, and that there was no risk involved, because they did not propose to cover fire. "That is fair enough," Mr. Burn stated parenthetically, "but what I wanted to see was a nice annual income." (Laughter.) It was added there would be no difficulty about keeping a proper balance-sheet. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Mugford said he thought that with a little persuasion the Inland Revenue Department of Somerset House could be induced to allow the original scheme to pass. Mr. Crisp said he, too, would be sorry to see their first scheme thrown overboard. He suggested that the original forms might possibly be used if the stamp appeared only on the first one. This, the secretary pointed out, would be much the cheapest way.—Mr. Mugford: Could we not have books of four sheets?—Mr. Cook thought that the scheme Mr. Penton (N. London) had hinted—viz., that they should have six sheets perforated ready for being torn off when wanted, with the policy printed above and to be retained—was much the best plan.

Mr. Burn moved that the matter be left in the hands of the sub-committee, so that they could approach the officials at Somerset House with a view to coming to an arrangement concerning this last-mentioned plan, and to report to the Council. —Mr. J. C. Birch (Queen's Park) seconded the motion, which, after further discussion, was carried.

The Secretary next read a letter received from the secretary of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., pointing out that the Society was holding a members' show in conjunction with the London and Provincial O.C., and asking that, as the latter Society was not affiliated to the Federation, would the Council allow them to suspend the rules of the Federation?—After considerable discussion, it was decided, on the motion of Mr. Burn, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, that the request be granted, but the event must not, it was added, become a precedent.

The "Defaulting Member" Question.

Another letter from the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., enclosing a list of names of members who had not paid their subscriptions of 3s., nor the amount imposed by the Federation, and asking for instructions as to how to act now under Rule 6.—Mr. Burn suggested that the matter be adjourned until the next meeting.—The Secretary pointed out that if the Council adjourned the matter they would have the Dulwich and Peckham secretary "about their ears," and rightly so, seeing the Council had given them instructions to do certain things, and the Society had faithfully carried out those instructions to the letter.—Mr. Burn said they had got to train the members of the Federation to a realization of the extent of their powers, and that if they came down on societies with the full force of their rules, they would cripple the fancy (in London, it is presumed he meant).—Mr. H. E. Tringham (who, having vacated the chair, being an official of the Society whose affairs were being discussed, was acting in the capacity of an ordinary delegate) rejoined that if they didn't act according to their rules the Federation would be disorganised at once. (Hear, hear.) This was, he said, a desperate case for the Society. They were in need of money, and here were a large number of outstanding subscriptions; and the only machine they could put into operation was the London Federation. He wished to disabuse the minds of the delegates that their action was the result of a vindictive spirit. It was not; they simply wanted what they had a perfect right to.—The Chairman (Mr. Crisp) expressed his opinion so far as to say he thought it necessary the delegates should have the matter brought before them, and as it had not been included as one of the items on the agenda, perhaps it would be as well to adjourn the consideration of the case, in order to give delegates a chance of thinking the matter over. (Hear, hear.)—On the proposition of Mr. Burn, seconded by Mr. Mugford, it was decided to adjourn the case, and that due notice be given to delegates.—This was carried.

Presentation to the Secretary.

A very pretty and memorable presentation was then made by Mr. Tringham to Mr. Percy Adamthwaite, the hon. secretary of the Federation. The presentation took the form of a "magnificent marble clock, which must have cost many pounds"—to use Mr. Adamthwaite's own words to CAGE BIRDS' representative afterwards. The clock had been very liberally and spontaneously subscribed for by the delegates, and was presented by them not only as a mark of their appreciation of the services rendered by the hon. sec., but also as their wedding present to him, the wedding ceremony being fixed for the following Saturday, September 4th. Several very neat speeches were made, and the recipient, having accepted the gift, expressed hiself at a loss to know how to thank his friends enough for their great kindness.—A vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding brought the meeting to a close.

GATESHEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 25th, at headquarters, Lockhart's Cafe, the Chairman, Mr. Almond, presiding over a large attendance. It gave great satisfaction to see so many present, and must have given Mr. Birchley, who had come to lecture to us, great pleasure to see such a large turn-up. Correspondence was read from secretaries of the following specialist clubs, granting us their patronage for our forthcoming shows: Open Norwich P.C., Yorkshire C.C., Northern Y.C.C., Northern Crest Club, National British Bird and M.C., Northern British Bird M. and F.B.C., thus making six specialist clubs' patronage up-to-date. Other business was left over. The chairman called on Mr. Birchley to give his lecture on "Mammals at Work and Play." In his opening remarks Mr. Birchley, who received a very hearty reception, expressed the pleasure it gave him to see so many familiar faces of those whom he had seen at Newcastle, Wallsend, etc. He told us that our great author, Ruskin, had said that the greatest thing a man could do in this world was to see something and tell the same in a plain way; and that was precisely what he would always endeavour to do. Before Mr. Birchley entered upon his lecture, he drew an excellent picture of the old-world beauty of the county, and his hearers were somewhat affected on his reference to the present-day state of things compared with that of the days of his boyhood. Some of his pictures were quite vivid representations of what many of his hearers must have passed through during the days of their youth. Entering upon his lecture on Mammals, Mr. Birchley fully explained the difference between animals and mammals, and in a simple way he went on at some length to show that mammals were really difficult to study compared with birds. He explained the reason for this in almost every individual case he quoted. He strongly advocated the studying of natural history in general, as a soothing and intensely interesting study, and one that would bring a rich reward to students. The lecturer dealt at some length upon many kinds of animals, and many most interesting and amusing little incidents were related that occur in the ways of wild nature. Owing to his taking up rather more time than we anticipated, Mr. Birchley, we noticed, somewhat abbreviated the latter portion of his lecture. The lecture, we believe, was the most interesting one that has been given before the Gateshead Society. In conclusion, Mr. Birchley thanked his audience for their kind attention, and said that it would give him great pleasure to see them again when he visited Newcastle to give a three-nights' lecture with his lantern illustrating from life many of the things he had been speaking about in his lectures in the North. Mr. Almond proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Birchley, and appealed for questions, many of which were then put, and were ably answered. After a lengthy address of appreciation by Mr. Currah (which certainly voiced the feeling of those present) the meeting was brought to a close. —G. BUCK and H. JOHNSON, Hon. Secs.

The Shows.

PEASDOWN ST. JOHN.

Second annual show held August 21st, in the Home Field, Red Post. Mr. O. E. Hodge judged the few cage bird classes. Mr. Howe, the secretary, had made capital arrangements, and everything went off well accordingly.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Table show held in the Miners' Hall on August 28th. Entries did not come up very well, the season being so very far advanced; most birds are now deep in the moult. Eighteen birds were staged in the four classes provided. The foreign birds exhibited by Mr. Thomson proved a great attraction, and were greatly admired. Mr. Johnstone (Hamilton) judged and gave every satisfaction.

MULE OR HYB.: 1, Johnstone; 2, Sinclair; 3, Nisbet; 4, spl, Swan; 5, Smith; 6, McAllistair; 7, McLuckie. HEN, BRIT.: 1, spl, Sinclair; 2, Johnstone; 3, Clark; 4, Clarkson; 5, Lockhart; 6, McLean. VAR. CAN.: 1, Bullock. FOR.: 1, 2, Thomson; 3, Nisbet.—JAS. POLLOCK, Sec.

HARLECH.

Held in connection with the sports on August 14th. There was a very fair entry, and some good birds were shown in the Norwich, Yorkshire and Mule classes. Also the British bird classes contained some nice birds. Messrs. R. Lole Strong and W. E. Thomas are the hon. secretaries, to whom every credit is due for their able management. Mr. R. C. Forbes (Pwllheli) judged.

LEAMINGTON SPA F.A.

A most successful members' Nest Feather Show was held at the Golden Lion Hotel on August 26th. Entries came up well, considering most of the youngsters are getting on with their moult. Mr. W. Treadwell judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Mr. Geo. Hall captured special for best bird in show with a clear yellow of good colour, shape and quality. The judging competition was closely contested: Mr. Abbotts and Mr. Hall equal first, Mr. Brooks second, Mr. Masters third.

NOR. CL. BUFF: 1, 2, Hall, nice quality and substance, good shape, 2nd close up; 3, Bull, grand bird. A.O.S. (2): 1, Pace, nice Yellowhammer; 2, Pound, good Wagtail.

CARLISLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Third nest feather show held in Viaduct Hotel, when there was a good muster of young birds, considering the time of year and the number of young birds in the moult. Mr. Pennington (Wigton) judged, and criticism was practically nil. Mr. Moore had quite a "day out" among Borders; the same with Mr. Lawson in Norwich.

I wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success. I think every fancier should do this, seeing what he gets every week for one penny.—J. MITCHELL (Cornwall).

Our young stock show on September 23rd will be opened at 3 o'clock by Alderman J. Savage, J.P., at the Harmonic Hall, Plashet Grove, E. Ham, writes Mr. H. Rutter, the hon. secretary of the East Ham and Dis. F.S.

It was impossible for me to answer all replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, re Hawfinch, writes Mr. E. Vermim (Fulham, S.W.), but I answered all who sent a stamp. This speaks well for CAGE BIRDS.

I consider CAGE BIRDS the best paper to advertise in, for I have had more replies to my advertisement than ever. I shall recommend it to all my friends who are in the Fancy.—F. LING (Oulton Broad).

The advertisement I inserted in CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. G. Russell (Middlesbro'), has brought me no fewer than 20 replies from all parts of England within two days. I wish your paper every success.

We are giving two classes for Norwich, Yorkshires, and Borders Fancies, for novices at our forthcoming annual open show on October 29th and 30th, writes Mr. Jas. Barrass, secretary of the South Shields and Dis. C.B.S.

The Kent County Cage Bird Association have given their patronage this year to the following societies' shows, writes Mr. Geo. Sanderson, the hon. secretary, Deal, Canterbury, Plumstead, Folkestone, and Dover F. and F.S.

Bird-keepers who have not as yet seen that most wonderful sixpennyworth of birdy literature, CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1909, have a splendid chance of acquiring a bargain, and probably their last chance. All the ordinary issue has been sold right out, with the exception of a few score copies which have the covers either soiled or a little torn (condition otherwise good), and those we offer to readers of CAGE BIRDS at the reduced price of 5d. per copy, post free. Orders should be sent at once to our Manager, at 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., as, of course, they can only be filled so long as the limited supply lasts. The ANNUAL contains a lovely coloured plate of an exhibition Linnet, which alone is worth the cost, and much grand information on bird-keeping and breeding (both Canaries, Hybrids, and Foreign). Send your fivepence at once, or we cannot guarantee to fill your order.

We have fixed our annual show this year, writes Mr. T. Bowen, secretary of the North Berks. F.S., for November 11th, in the Abingdon Corn Exchange.

The Accrington and Dis. C.B.S. have engaged Mr. W. Booth, of Hyde, to judge the Norwich section of their show, writes Mr. Jas. W. Philpott, the secretary, as they are anticipating a good show on October 8th and 9th.

The Pendlebury, Swinton and Dis. C.B.A. have decided to go for a ramble on Sunday next, September 5th, when friends are invited to meet us at Bulls Head, Swinton, at 1 p.m., writes Mr. Alex. Donnelly, the secretary.

It is impossible for me to answer all application for guns I advertised for exchange in CAGE BIRDS of last week, writes Mr. A. Jinks (Birmingham). I have had 91 of them, which speaks well for your paper. I have now sold them.

Kindly thank all who replied to my advertisement in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. Holloway (Sherborne). I received over 30 answers, and could not possibly reply to all; but I made a good exchange, and I shall always advertise in CAGE BIRDS in future.

I think CAGE BIRDS is a little gem. The queries that are answered therein are alone well worth the money. As for this year's CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, it is hardly possible for it to be in any way better, and no fancier should be without it.—J. W. CONKEY (Darlington).

The classes we intend providing for our open Roller Contest on November 3rd and 4th, writes Mr. J. H. Willows, hon. secretary of the Midland Roller C.C., are as follows: Young Birds 1909 (B.R.C.C. ring), Open Birds (B.R.C.C. ring), Open Class, Open Novice, £2 Limit, and Members' Class.

The rules of the Midland Roller Canary Club for 1909, together with a list of the names and addresses of the members of this new club, have just been issued in a convenient booklet form. Members and intending members may obtain same from the hon. secretary, Mr. J. H. Willows, Lindum House, Wednesbury.

Kindly inform readers of CAGE BIRDS that I have removed my business from Leeds, and have gone into partnership with Mr. R. Dearlove, of Hull, writes Mr. Fred Allen. All letters must in future be addressed: Dearlove and Allen, bird specialists, Porter Street Aviaries, Hull. All orders will receive our best personal attention as hitherto.

Can anyone inform me, writes Mr. P. Hart, secretary of the Leigh C.B.S., what has become of a portion of our members? Are they living? If so, we should like to see their faces at our next meeting, as we have now dropped our subscriptions from 4s. to 2s. 6d. We think this may cause new friends to join and some of our old members to come back again.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement for Goldie and Seifert hens, writes Mr. Geo. Bird (Wrexham). I received nearly 40 answers, and could not thank everyone separately. I have made satisfactory exchanges with all the birds I had to spare, and could have disposed of many more if I had had them, thanks to your well circulated journal.

Mr. Jacob Mackley, of Messrs. Mackley Bros., of Norwich, had the good fortune to be the chief subject of an article in the "Daily Mail," of August 26th issue, entitled, "A City of Canaries." The writer of the article, having referred to the probable origin of the Canary industry in this country, proceeds to state what Canaries can cost. His conclusion is that with a fair share of luck the breeders make excellent profits, but that the Canary business has more than a dash of the speculative in it.

At our last meeting a letter was read from the Welsh Cage Bird Club granting their patronage to our society, write Messrs. McLucas and James, hon. secretaries of the Pontypridd, Pwllgwaun and Dis. F. and F.S. They offer two cups as specials, one, that of Mr. Sandiford's, for the most points gained during the season by three birds fed on his Red Feed, and the other, a Norwich P.H. cup, which will be offered for members. These will be competed for at our next show, December 15th. Mr. C. A. House will judge.

The marriage of Mr. Percy Adamthwaite, of Fernhead Road, Maida Hill, London, W., to Miss Parish, of Malvern Road, West Kilburn, takes place to-day (Saturday), at Holy Trinity Church, Kilburn, at 2 o'clock. Mr. Adamthwaite is best known to our readers and to London fanciers especially, as the secretary of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, by which body he was on August 27th presented with a magnificent marble clock, partly in recognition of his services to the Federation, but chiefly as a wedding present. The felicitations of our readers will, we feel sure, follow the couple as they enter upon their wedded life. Ilfracombe is the place selected for the honeymoon.

London and Provincial O.S.

Further to my last week's note, with reference to the arrangements we are making for the lecture by Mr. Richard Kearton, on September 16th, writes Mr. H. E. Tringham, hon. secretary of the London and Provincial O.S., will you kindly allow me to make public the now complete details thereof? For this event we have engaged the fine hall of the "Institute of Journalists," situated in Tudor Street, New Bridge Street, E.C., which lies between Blackfriars and Ludgate hill stations, and in close proximity to the L.C.C. tramway terminus on the embankment, so that it is easily accessible from any part of London. We commence at 7.30 promptly. In addition to the matter already arranged, Mr. Kearton has promised to show an entirely new series of films and slides secured as recently as last summer, and which upon this occasion will be shown for the first time. The new films include such difficult subjects as Curlews and Lapwings going on to the nest, brooding, running away, etc., Kestrels and Marsh Tits feeding their young, rats at supper, and also some wonderful examples will be given of the new colour photography slides, all absolutely new, and direct from nature. We anticipate a very large attendance, and in order to facilitate the seating arrangements, I should be glad if those other than members of the L.P.O.S. desirous of attending, would make early application to me, and if a stamped envelope is enclosed, I shall have pleasure in sending them their tickets, for which, as before stated, no charge is made. Ladies cordially invited.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Loanhead and District C.B.A.

The breeding season is again nearing a close, and I have no doubt many of the fanciers about here will look upon the 1909 breeding season as one of the worst they ever experienced. This, to my mind, was due to the cold cast winds we had. While on my holidays at Kirkcaldy I had the pleasure of meeting a few of the fanciers there, and they have suffered there just as we have. While in Kirkcaldy I saw a very nice six-pointed yellow Goldfinch Mule, which with a good moult should be heard of again. Along with Messrs. Douglas, Yule and Nelson, I visited most of the members in this district, while Mr. John Steel (Dalkeith) kindly forwarded results from Musselburgh; and we find that though numbers are not so large this year, quality is better in all sections: in fact I expect to see some stormers in the Scotch Fancy sections, and I feel certain the Norwich classes will have some good ones, while the Border section will be quite up to the usual standard, both at Dalkeith and Loanhead shows on the first and second Saturdays in October. Members' numbers (Musselburgh): Robert Johnstone, 18 Scotch Fancies; James King, 16 Scotch Fancies; James Pearson, 36 Norwich, 35 Borders, 1 Mule; George Watt, 10 Borders, 1 Mule; Alexander Fleming, 6 Norwich. (Dalkeith): James Carson, 5 Scotch Fancies, 12 Norwich, 12 Borders; J. Sinclair, 22 Borders; John Steel, 6 Norwich, 16 Borders; John Ewing, 5 Norwich, 15 Borders; John Hamilton, 30 Borders; Thos. Briggs, 6 Scotch Fancies, 3 Norwich, 12 Borders; Thos. Bickerstaff, 26 Borders; Alfred Rowe, 24 Borders. (Lasswade): Wm. McAdam, 6 Scotch Fancies, 18 Borders; James Stirling, 32 Borders, 4 Mules; Wm. Masterton, 20 Borders. (Bonnyrigg): Geo. Harper, 30 Borders, 2 Mules; James Noble, 15 Scotch Fancies, 2 Norwich, 8 Borders; David Noble, 7 Scotch Fancies, 1 Norwich; Peter Noble, 10 Borders; E. Wighley, 5 Scotch Fancies; J. Mangle, 11 Borders; A. Ketchen, 8 Borders; D. Flockhart, 10 Borders; R. Fisher, 1 Scotch Fancy, 16 Borders. (Rosewell): A. Sinclair, 9, Norwich. (Polton): A. Jardine, 7 Scotch Fancies; J. Allan, 5 Scotch Fancies, 6 Borders. (Newtongrange): A. M. Gardiner, 17 Norwich; A. and J. Thomson, 45 Borders. (Loanhead): G. Yule, 2 Scotch Fancies, 23 Borders; A. Gilchrist, 3 Scotch Fancies, 10 Borders; R. H. Douglas, 22 Borders; W. H. Nelson, 2 Scotch Fancies, 47 Borders; W. B. Smart, 3 Scotch Fancies, 29 Borders. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—W. B. SMART, secretary.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

A meeting of the Executive Council was held at the Deansgate Hotel, Manchester, on August 28th, the president in the chair. After passing the minutes of the previous meeting and disposing of several other items, the compensation scheme (referred to at the meeting of delegates at the late Crystal Palace Show), was discussed, and the following proposition carried:—"To members of the C.B.U. paying to the Union secretary a registration fee of 1s., the Union will make up the loss to the extent of £1 per bird in case of loss caused by accident or delay on the part of railway companies to or from shows from September 1st up to March 1st in each year. No one claim more than £5 to be paid. Selling or limit classes will be paid according to the catalogue price." Of course, this means that secretaries of all affiliated societies must send on to me at once a list of all the names of their members and the balance of their subscription, if any, of 2d. per member according to Rule 4. The Union will offer medals for competition in the various districts on similar lines to last year. Particulars will be found in the show rules to be printed shortly.—J. RAYNES, secretary, 9, Richmond Road, Chorlton-cum-Hardy.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Youngsters Dying in Moult.

E.D.N.—It is always most essential in all cases of this kind to get definite particulars as to how the birds are being fed, and also how they have been fed previously, if any recent change has been made, and if they are being colour fed it is further important to know how the colour food is mixed, and also how the soft food in which it is given is made. In a great many cases the food is either directly or indirectly the chief cause, and even in cases where septic fever is the actual cause of death it is of vital importance to cut down the egg, if any is employed in making the soft food, to the lowest minimum. You can therefore see how important it is to have full knowledge on this point in order to give a really helpful reply. Feed on a staple of plain canary seed; give separately a pinch of summer rape each day, twice a week a half teaspoonful of a mixture of hemp, maw, linseed, inga, and teazle. Substitute powdered biscuit or crushed spongo or maderia cake as far as the tastes of the birds will allow for the orthodox egg food, and observe the strictest cleanliness in all food and water, the cages, and all appliances. It would be as well also to cover the cage floors with clean pine sawdust, which you should burn at once when removed from cages, and give a supply of gritty sand in a tin.

Wasting Seed.

W. E. Seed.—You omit to say whether the birds appear to be in fair health or otherwise. Some birds get into this habit of shelling canary seed and rejecting the kernel out of pure mischief, I believe. It is, however, always advisable, when several birds begin to do this, to well examine the seed to see if the quality is all right—it may be musty, or otherwise objectionable to the birds. If the seed is not at fault, give the birds a rather more varied diet. Besides the staple of plain Canary seed give separately about half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw with a few grains of hemp, linseed, and inga sprinkled amongst the bulk. Give a little green food, or half ripe seeds of chickweed, shepherd's-purse, or plantain daily. Keep cage clean, and strewn with gritty sand, and limit the supply of canary for a few days in order to avoid so much waste. Give, say, a small teaspoonful each day, which will be amply sufficient for each bird's needs. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days. After this give six drops of tincture of gentian in the water every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid.

Keeping Eggs Back.

E. M. H.—The length of time which you could safely hold over eggs for sitting must naturally vary a good deal according to the conditions under which they are kept, the state of the weather, and also the condition of the parent birds, as eggs with weakened germs due to the old birds being out of condition, or in any way imperfect, will lose their vitality much quicker than strong and perfect ones. The average length of time which I consider it safe to keep them if they are to stand a fair chance of hatching is about a week, not more. Some eggs, if perfectly sound and properly kept, will keep good several days beyond this limit, but, on the other hand, many eggs will have their vitality reduced in a week. The best way to keep them is to bury them in a small boxful of bran, or meal, or a mixture of both, each egg separately—this is, not touching each other. See that the box is just nicely full, so that the lid can be closed without crushing the contents, and yet leave no spare space for them to move about. Close the lid, and keep box in a cool, but not cold, moist place, and give the box a half turn every morning and evening. In the suppositious case which you quote, you should, before deciding to hold over eggs, feel quite convinced that the second clutch is going to be available in a week. Of course, you must see that there is a certain risk of them not duly arriving at the time you calculated upon, and if they did not, the broodiness would have left the first hen and the eggs probably be spoilt. To avoid this you had better in such a case give the first hen two or three dummy eggs to sit upon until you see whether the second hen fulfils your expectations. To take another view of the matter, if you merely wanted to change the eggs for hen number two to hatch and rear those of hen number one, and vice versa, then you should not hold over the eggs at all. Simply let hen number one commence to incubate her own eggs in the usual course, and after the second hen has laid and commenced to sit, change the two clutches at the same time.

Gone off Song and Moping.

"Jacko."—It is quite the usual thing for cocks to go off song at this time of year when the moult is rapidly approaching, or in many cases has already begun. Most birds are also apt to be a trifle dull and listless at the beginning of the moult, but even this is not necessarily a bad sign. It is, indeed, comparatively few which go through the moult from beginning to end without showing some effect of its depressing nature, though some individuals are affected much more than others. All you need do in such cases is to keep the bird fairly warm and perfectly free from any draught or chill. If there is any danger at all of this, cover the cage over with some light covering at night, as it is at this time when the bird is quite still that it will be more seriously affected by a chill whilst in a thinly-clad condition. A small piece of sponge cake with a few drops of sherry on it, or a small piece of bread scalded with milk pressed nearly dry, sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw seed, may be added to the usual seed diet two or three times a week. A pinch of maw seed every second day will also help it to get on with the moult more freely. As a simple tonic give twenty drops of chemical food in the water two or three times a week. If it should become constipated, increase its supply of green food, and if that does not sufficiently correct the condition, add a pinch of Epsom salts to its water occasionally. It will resume its song all right when it has quite got over the moult.

Lizards Outdoors.

"Hopeful."—Certainly, it would be quite possible to keep Lizards in an outdoor aviary all the year round, provided your birds have not been hitherto accustomed to artificial heat indoors. In all cases where one wishes to keep fancy Canaries outdoors, I consider this an absolutely essential condition; as to start such an aviary with pampered stock is not giving the birds a fair chance, besides taking a considerable amount of unnecessary risk of the plan not proving a success. Your aviary seems to be well arranged, and to have a very good aspect, so that, given healthy, cold-bred birds to start with, you should find the method quite a success. As regards your second question, too much linseed during the moult, or, indeed, at any other time, will assuredly seriously affect the birds. It is very apt to make "the works go wrong" in'ardly, and to give rise to obstinate diarrhœa. Teazle I have not given to Canaries in such quantity as to warrant my saying whether an excess of it would be injurious. Doubtless it is no exception to the rule that too much of any one thing is apt to prove harmful in one way or another. But I should rather expect they could get through a fair amount of this seed without any harmful effect.

The Education of Rollers.

H.J.—You are certainly losing valuable time in the training of your young rollers, unless you get a good tutor for them, or a bird organ. If you were going into the hobby of breeding and training Rollers, a good organ is an almost, if not quite, essential adjunct, to fill in gaps caused by the adult cocks dropping into moult just when their tuition would be most valuable for the youngsters. The probability is that by the time your adult cocks resume singing the youngsters will have formed some medley of song of which it will be most difficult to break them, even if it is possible to do so, whereas with a good tutor now, and the young cocks caged off separately, they would probably be well in good average quality of song and ready for disposal by the time the adult cocks were again ready to take up their education. Therefore, you will see that from a purely business point of view it would doubtless pay you to get a good tutor for them at once. But be careful to get one that is over the moult, and stout in song again. What you ought to have done in the matter earlier in the season was to cage off one of the adult cocks as soon as he could be spared from the breeding cage, kept him in a warm place, given a little whisky and a few blades of saffron in the water if necessary, and by these means got the bird to throw off its plumage quickly and early, and thus be through the moult and ready to resume singing by the time the second cock went off song for moulting. In this way you might have had very little break in the tuition of the young with only these two cocks.

Breeding for Song.

F. Taylor.—You would first of all have to decide for yourself whether you adopt the method of running cocks and hens altogether in a large flight space, or cage them up for breeding. If you had luck with good feeding hens the latter would probably give you the best results, but would also entail a very large amount of extra work in cage cleaning, etc. If you decide to breed in cages, I should advise you to place the cages on wall marked B., and along wall A. make a large flight to which you can remove the young as soon as they are well able to look after themselves in a large space amongst others. But if you decide to take your chances with cocks and hens all flying together then build the breeding aviary along wall A., reaching out as far as the commencement of the window, and extending about seven feet along that wall, from the end nearest the window. This will leave you space to make a supplementary flight on wall B. to which to draft the youngsters from the first round of nests, and thus prevent the breeding flight becoming overcrowded at the end of the season. Rollers will be quite the best breed for your purpose. The price you name for cocks is rather too low to expect really decent singers for, and as you will need them for tutors at the end of the breeding season, you should endeavour to get the best singers you can afford. You would probably not get fair quality singers for less than 10s. 6d. each; hens at 2s. 6d. to 3s. each. "Profitable Canary Breeding," which our manager could send you post free for 9½d., might fill your wants. German-bred Canaries are fed largely on rape, and when imported to this country it is necessary to keep up a larger proportion of rape than is usually given our English breed. Personally, I always find them do well on a staple of two parts Canary to one part rape. With recently-imported birds, however, the change should be brought about gradually. It would not be really necessary to keep a fire in your room in the winter.

BEGINNERS READ THE ANNUAL

The Troublesome Norwich.

C. and K.—(1) I should advise you to try the Norwich cock with a different brand of colour food—say, if your usual feed has oil added to it, get a small quantity of a sample with no oil, mix with it a fourth part of its bulk of soft brown sugar, add a sprinkling of maw and gold of pleasure seed, and try if the bird will eat this. A saltspoonful per day will suffice. If it does not eat this, take the same quantity of colour, mix it with a piece of yolk of hard-boiled egg the size of a large pea, or an equivalent amount of powdered biscuit, make this into a soft paste with a drop of honey, and stick on the wire at the end of its perch. Very few birds indeed will refuse this; but if he still refuses it, then to moult for natural colour refer to remarks in the article on moulting in the last two issues. Give plenty of marigold and nasturtium blooms, and two or three times a week a scrap of bread and milk slightly dusted with saccharated carbonate of iron and sugar. Keep bird in a warm place to start the moult. (2) Give the hen a scrap of bread and milk three times a week, and each time slightly dust it over with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. Give plain Canary only as a staple, and on the alternate days between giving bread and milk give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of three parts summer rape to half a part each of black rape, teazle, hemp, gold of pleasure, linseed, and inga, and one part maw. Allow her to bathe freely, and keep in a warm place to encourage a complete and free moult. Slightly smear bare patches once a week with olive oil.

The Way Out.

H.J.—In such a small house as yours, I take it the stove you use in winter is also proportionately small, and consequently takes but a small amount of fuel at one time, which is doubtless the reason you cannot contrive to keep it burning all night without attention. I suspect it is not provided with "dampers," by which you could regulate the draught and thereby reduce the speed of combustion; if it were, you should be able by manipulating them, being careful to leave on sufficient draught to prevent smoke or fumes escaping, to keep even a small stove going from late night until early morning. If you cannot manage this with an ordinary stove, you should try to get a small, properly-constructed, slow-combustion stove. Or you might fix up hot-water pipes with a small boiler under a separate cover adjoining the house, and utilise this stove for heating the boiler, the stove, of course, also being under the same cover as the boiler, and not inside the house. When the boiler was hot, this would ensure the pipes in the house keeping up the heat for some time after the fire had expired, and probably give you time to start the fire again before there was any serious drop in the temperature. If you cannot adopt either of these methods, try placing an earthenware bottle that will hold about a gallon of boiling water, in the centre of the room just before retiring at night. If the bottle is well corked, stood in a box which gives an inch or two of space all round it, and the space filled in with sawdust, it should keep a house the size of yours well above freezing point until breakfast time. Of one thing you may be certain, that unless you can prevent this total failure of the heat supply every night, you would do best to dispense with it altogether, as a stove burning each day and the water bottles frozen each morning when frost is about is the surest way to court disaster where the health and condition of the birds are concerned.

Stopped Moulting.

No Name.—I suspect when you moved the bird to a fresh cage you also moved her to a different position, where probably the temperature is wholly different, or in a position exposed to draughts. Was the fresh cage larger or smaller, and was it quite beyond suspicion of being infested with insect pest? All these are points I should suspect as being the probable cause before going further into speculations respecting the bird's health. And when it comes to consider the latter possibility you give absolutely no idea how you feed and treat the bird, so there again one is considerably hampered in offering you any definite advice. Anyway, try what the following treatment will do for it in a few weeks. First see that the cage is perfectly free from insects; hang in a warm corner where the temperature will be fairly equable night and day, and quite out of reach of draughts or chills; allow it to bathe as often as it desires. Feed on a staple of plain canary seed only, and every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately, and on the alternate days a slightly smaller quantity of maw. If you are not colour-feeding the bird, omit the rape twice in each week, and give instead a small piece of bread and milk dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash, and then sprinkled on top with soft sugar. Twice a week also give a few grains only of linseed. Give a little green food daily. If you are colour-feeding add the dusting of sulphur and potash to the soft food twice a week. In the drinking water add twenty drops of whisky, six of lemon juice, and a few blades of saffron daily for a week. If this does not set matters right in about a fortnight write again and refer to this reply, and say how you have been feeding and treating the bird prior to this.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Brevities.

Not a Rara Avis (Hugh Sawther).—Am afraid your Cinnamon Scotch Fancy cannot be classed as a great rarity, as this colour is not uncommonly found in the variety, though probably it is less common than in the more popular breeds where colour is more or less valued. In the Scotch Fancy colour counts very little indeed, so that practically no efforts are made to breed for varied colour or markings, and a Cinnamon-marked bird would compete with the green-marked in the "Foul-feathered" or "Piebald" class, to which its markings refer it. The bird is most likely a sport from the green cock, in which case it will be a hen.

The "Heather" Linnet.

Harry Lander.—There is no such bird as the "heather" Linnet; that is merely a local name for some bird or other. There is but one Linnet. It has two near relatives, the Twite (often called the Mountain Linnet), which is a long, slim bird, coloured and marked very like the ordinary Linnet, but with a yellowish beak, and the Redpoll, which may be told by its much smaller size and the "bib" (a rounded dark mark on the throat), which is usually present. The song of all three differs considerably, only the Linnet being really a good songster. The seasonal plumages of the Linnet cause confusion in the minds of people not conversant with them. In the breeding season the old male has a fiery red breast and crown. In the winter he is just plain brown, or greyish brown. The young Linnets are "grey" (perhaps these are what you refer to), streaked with dark markings. Any cock Linnet is good for both singing and breeding.

On Feeding a Skylark.

Huddersfield.—I should not give the pea-meal regularly; a little now and again will not hurt the bird. You can provide a really good and cheap staple diet in the following manner: Get a supply of soft-bill food such as is advertised in our columns (good brands can be bought at most bird and seed stores); also a bag of dog or puppy meal (such as Melox or Spratt's). For the daily feed, take about a dessert-spoonful of the latter and add sufficient hot water to thoroughly soften it (mash it with a fork); then reduce it to a crumbly consistency by adding the necessary quantity of the softbill food, when it is ready to give to the bird. This method is both easy, cheap and satisfactory. A little chopped greenfood should be frequently added, and some minced hard-boiled egg now and again helps to keep the bird in high, singing condition. Live-food give, of course, as obtainable. No bird will sing while it is moulting. Do not give the food in too sloppy a state; birds do not relish it in that condition.

What Pays?

Gollywog.—I can't say anything about the breeding of Foreign birds; that department is Mr. Page's, and you must address a query to him. I have no doubt there are some species which can be bred, and which would pay for the breeding. As regards Canaries, the best plan is to acquire a reputation on the show bench and found a strain which will throw winners of whatever variety is taken up; then there will always be a market for your spare stock, and at good prices. I have known several, however, more than pay expenses when breeding merely "songster" Canaries. It is hardly possible to breed British birds at a profit; the results are too uncertain, and the kinds that will breed freely are to be had so very cheaply from the dealers.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Of course, the breeding of Hybrids and Mules can be made very profitable providing one has good fortune. Light Mules, when good, always command a ready sale and fetch high prices. It takes some years, however, to get going with a strain of reliable hens for producing the light Mules. First-class dark Mules are likewise valuable, and hens likely to breed them are not difficult to obtain, though they can't be bought for nothing. I consider it is always "worth while" putting up a pair or two for Hybrid breeding. It is an uncertain game, but the rewards are worth the striving.

Concerning a Treecreeper.

L. P. Pickard.—If you have to ask what kind of cage a Tree Creeper should have, and what kind of food, then I am afraid you cannot hope to successfully keep it alive. The Tree Creeper is a highly delicate species, and no one should attempt to keep it who is not well skilled in attending to the wants of tiny insectivorous birds, otherwise it is certain to die. The stock cage should be a large one (say 24 inches long, by 20 high by 14 wide), and the back and sides must be lined with bark (called "virginian cork," at shops where is it sold), for the bird to run about on. Perches are not necessary, though I generally have one in my own cages. The wire front must be of half-inch gauge, not more, and the best feeding vessels are those which swing in through openings out into the front rail of the cage. If the sides and top of the cage are not bark lined (the back must be, they should be wired with a thick material, such as good quality baize (glued on). For food the bird must have an insectivorous mixture of the finest quality (containing plenty of good ants' eggs) prepared in the usual way with finely grated raw carrot or minced greenfood, a little minced hard-boiled egg being frequently added. Live food is essential to the bird's continued well-being—flies, aphides, wasp-grub, small scoured gentles, small (or cut-up) mealworms, live ants' eggs and the like. Unless you can cater for the bird properly, don't attempt to keep; try a species less delicate.

A Trio.

Hopeful.—1: The main exhibition points of a Greenfinch are size, shape and colour. Size as large as possible, shape, very cobby (Norwich) type, with broad, rounded chest, very wide bold head, and thick-set neck; colour, a rich green (fanciers term it "grass-green"), with a very pronounced edging of golden yellow to the sides of the tail and the outer flights of the wing. A Greenfinch with a mean head and thin neck is hardly any use for show; he would need to be wonderfully good in other properties to stand any chance of winning prizes. The Lesser Redpoll varies a lot in shape, but here again the chubby type is preferred—a bird with a nicely rounded body, and a bold, proportionate head. It should be a deep, warm brown in colour, as free as possible from light breaks on the breast. The bird should be well laced (striped with black) on the flanks and sides of the breast, and carry a prominent "bib" on its throat (a rounded, black mark). Pencilling (dark stripes) should also show on the back and head. Mere size is not so very important a matter in this species. 2: Shepherd's purse, chickweed, knot grass, mouse-ear, plantain, dock, groundsel, charlock (wild mustard), milk thistleheads, are all liked by the Greenfinch; also sunflower heads, grown in the garden. 3: No, they would not mope, but the birds flying loose might interfere with the caged birds.

Brevities.

Goldfinches Ailing (C. Sargent).—Give a course of treatment as advised "L. Watkins" this week. If any constipation is present, then commence with a saline aperient.

A Mealworm Box (Wormy).—I should think the cause either (1) box kept in a damp place, (2) insufficient, or no, ventilation, (3) putting meat, bones and the like inside. Read the letter from Mr. Houlton in this week's issue. I should burn old contents of box now the worms have been removed.

Young Skylark in Trouble (L. Watkins).—Use a glass or pot drinking vessel, and make the bird's drinking water a light red in colour by the addition of a few drops of Condy's Fluid; don't give it very strong. In a few days' time I think you will find the "gaping" cease. Should this not be the case, write me again.

A Bramblefinch (Bramble).—This bird should be treated exactly on the lines advised a querist last week for a Chaffinch. It will then moult out in the best possible condition. Don't forget the bath, or the spray. Colour-feeding is generally adopted, and the Bramblefinch usually eats it readily, either mixed with crushed seed, or a mixture of seed, sweet pepper, and insectivorous food. The bird should steady down during the moult.

In an Aviary (P.G.F.).—You are not likely to have much success with Mule breeding in an "aviary," 3 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in., with a mixed lot of birds. Such an aviary is really only suitable to house a small collection for one to look at. If you wish to try the experiment, however, the best thing will be to turn in four hen Canaries with a cock Linnet and cock Goldfinch. Let the latter be quite steady.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Green and Yellow Budgerigars'

B. H. Warbler.—I take it your figures refer to feet; in that case, if your measurements are 11 ft. by 4 ft. by 3 10-12th ft., you would have actual room for six breeding pairs, but four or five pairs only would be better, as it would leave more accommodation for the young birds; the aviary ought not at any time to contain more than 40 birds. The green and yellow varieties agree well enough, but they certainly do inter-breed freely, that is even with sexes equal of the respective varietics; they readily cross, with the result that crossed pairs would throw all green progeny. There is no deterioration in the stock therefrom unless in-breeding is permitted. To obviate this, I advise getting each pair from separate sources, and even then it is advisable to introduce new blood, preferably a few imported males. You would find "Budgerigars and Cockaticls," 7d. post free from this office, very helpful.

What Parrot is it?

H. Mirams.—It is a Roseate Cockatoo, a native of Australia, a hardy species, and rather much given to squealing. Many individuals do little more than utter a stray word or two. On the other hand, there have been quite a number of accounts in our pages of quite talented birds of this species. You evidently have an untamed and untrained individual, and you can do little with it while it remains so wild; gain its confidence by kindness, quietness, and pandering to its taste with any wholesome dainty it fancies—keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, yet not where too rapid movements in its vicinity will scare it. Seed mixture: Canary seed, oats, wheat, hemp, maize, and sunflower seeds in equal parts is about the best mixture, get a quart of each, well mix them together, and you will have a cheap and wholesome mixture. Also supply ripe fruit, green food, nuts, grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. Do not give slops and messes. Note weekly warning about same in this column.

Breeding Singing Finches.

A Lover of Birds.—These charming little Serins have frequently bred in cages, but very few, if any, Foreign species breed with the same precision as Canaries; they take longer to settle down, and resent curiosity and examination of their domestic arrangements. In my aviaries I have not found Serins of any species to favour a husk for breeding purposes; they will use a hollow cube with a small round hole for entrance, but seem to prefer a small Hartz travelling cage to any other nesting receptacle; all that is needful is to remove the fittings and cut away two of the bars to allow for entrance, push inside a small quantity of hay, and throw some hay, long grass and a little moss in the cage and leave the birds to do the rest. I fear, however, it is too late for them to breed this year now, but should say there is every probability of their doing so next year, if you provide nesting accommodation somewhat as above, screen the nest receptacle with a bushy heather spray.

Waxbills for Exhibition.

L. N. Pickard.—At large exhibitions there are usually classes both for common and rare Waxbills, etc. Of course, at such exhibitions as only give one class, the uncommon species usually score, and these, of course, are mostly costly. Waxbills: Zebra, 7/6 a pair; Orangecheek, grey and St. Helena, 3/6 to 4/6 a pair; violet-eared, about 40/-; Sidney, about 25/-. Finches: Diamond, 10/6 to 20/-; crimson, 25/-; Gouldian, 25/- to 30/-; long-tailed Grassfinches, 10/6 to 15/-; Ruficauda, 15/-; Cuban Finches, 40/- to 50/; Parrot Finches, 60/- to 80/-; Lavender, 7/6; the black-faced Serin is a good exhibition bird, as also are scaly-crowned and scaly-fronted Finches, 20/- to 40/-. Of the cheaper kinds Spicebirds, Silverbills, Ribbon and Saffron Finches, white-headed Mannikins, all from 3/6 to 7/6 a pair; in fact, all brightly-coloured kinds have scored where competition has not been too keen, but everything depends on the condition of the birds. Whydahs: Giant, 30/-; red-collared, 30/-; Paradise, 7/6 to 10/6; Queen, 20/- to 30/-, the latter is a very likely scorer.

How Many Zebrafinches?

Mack.—You have ample space for 50 birds the size of Zebrafinches in this aviary, but I should not advise you to have more than two breeding pairs in at a time, as they interfere with each other, and results are poor; you could then leave old and young together for the one year, reducing your stock annually to the two pairs. You could keep with the Zebrafinches, to the extent of a dozen pairs, any of the small Finches and Waxbills without their interfering materially with each other's domestic arrangements. You must, however, have at least two dozen nesting receptacles of various kinds hung up about the aviary. While you have young Finches in the aviary supply spray and the small French millet in addition to Canary and white millet. It is when the young are a year old that they interfere with their parents nesting again. Unless they crowd into the nest with the sitting hen, they can be left with their parents for the one season. When necessary to remove, do so as soon as you see them freely cracking seed for themselves.

Parrot Queries.

Constant Reader.—(1) Yes, treat as advised in this column almost weekly. They are better without boiled maize, though the latter is necessary for very young birds till they are able to crack seed freely, and also for adults which have been long accustomed to it, though the latter should be gradually weaned therefrom as quickly as possible. (2) Once a year, though it is often very protracted, especially the first one in the country. (3) These vary a little according to the diet a particular bird lives on, but generally speaking it is a green tint is almost black, lightly mingled with white. (4) It is always safest to boil water before drinking same, but it should be allowed to become almost cold in winter and quite cold in summer before supplying to the bird. If the bird is healthy and accustomed to water, it is best left continually in the cage; the opposite is only necessary where a bird has been deprived of it for a long period, or for physical reasons liable to take too much.

About Zebrafinches, &c.

R.G.H.A.—I consider it would be wisest not to attempt to coerce the birds into nesting this season; it will be less strain on the birds unless they are well-seasoned birds from some outdoor aviary. I should not take nest boxes down, but do not leave nesting material about. It is getting rather late in the year to turn out birds now, unless you are able to purchase birds that have already been out the greater part of the summer. Silverbills, Bengalese, Bronze Mannikins, Rufous and long-tailed Grassfinches would also live and probably breed, but these two species would cost you from 10/- to 15/- a pair. Grey Java Sparrows occasionally breed, and are attractive, hardy, and cheap. As regards plants: Ivy, box, red and black currant bushes, iris, willow, fir, arborvitæ, privet, with grass and weeds as undergrowth. Grey Singing Finches would also suit you. Of course, if you had been prepared to pay from 15/- a pair upwards, the list could have been much larger, but the above will give you a fairly interesting and attractive selection, which can be extended as your experience grows.

An Ailing Ringneck Parrakeet.

E.D.G.—I fear nothing much can be done for the bird; however, I should not say the case is absolutely hopeless, and should advise a mild aperient every other day, so long as its voidings are not watery. One teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water will be about the best you can give. If the bird becomes very weak it will be well to stimulate it with a few sips of very weak brandy and water. I should also give it at intervals during the day a piece of plain biscuit that has been moistened in equal parts of water and Parrish's chemical food in addition to its ordinary diet of seed, ripe fruit, and nuts. It should be kept in a room where the temperature is even, as risk of chills must be strictly guarded against. If you can do so without unduly disturbing the bird, it would be well to scald out its cage with boiling water, and, also to remove and destroy all voidings as quickly as possible. I think it would be well for you to report progress after a week of above treatment.

Are they Plucking Each Other?

H.H.B. (Clitheroe).—You can really only decide this question by personal observation. The Chaffinches and Bramblefinches are certainly dangerous to small birds, but if they were responsible for it, there would be wounds as well as baldness. Again, the Blackbirds and Thrushes are dangerous at certain seasons of the year, will often run "amok" and slaughter several of the small fry in rapid succession. The danger from the young Budgerigar would lie in broken limbs, wings and mischievous mutilation. We are now in the midst of the moulting season, and it is quite possible this natural cause is responsible for the baldness. Another cause may be that the birds are plucking one another; this often occurs in cages with Waxbills, Silverbills and the like, but is rather unusual in outdoor aviaries. Make the drinking water just saline with Epsom salts for one day, and give them a liberal supply of green food, such as fresh lettuce, seeding grass, ripe apple, pear, etc.—blighty foliage, and herbage will be very helpful at this juncture. I opine as soon as the moult is past, the ragged appearance of your birds will disappear, and if you find you have a feather puller, you must catch him up and consign him to durance vile, for a period at any rate.

Concerning Cuba Finches, &c.

F.F.—(1) Cuba Finches do not seem easy to breed, the behaviour of many individual pairs being similar to that of your pair. I take it your birds have only been put in the aviary this season; the probability, then, is they will settle down all right another season. With this species I have heard of many unfertile eggs and young dead in shell, very probably from faulty incubation—it is astonishing, however, what neglect the eggs of some species will stand, and yet hatch out. I should give liberal supplies of such greenfood as they will take during the nesting season, also a little of any ripe fruit they will eat—blighty foliage is about the best insect food for such species. Foreign birds you cannot treat as Canaries, as there is so much individualism about respective pairs, that generalisation is not easy. You may possibly pull off a brood yet, as your aviary is indoors, if not you can only hope for better luck next year. (2) The Maroon Tanager and the various glossy Calornis are obtainable from dealers, but they are not by any means common, the former being very uncommon. An advertisement in our columns would probably procure you specimens.

Brevities.

Birds with Budgerigars (Jack).—It largely depends on the size of your aviary what you can keep together; you must not overcrowd, that is, they must have perching and flight accommodation without being on the top of one another. Cockatiels, Rosella, and Redrump Parrakeets, with Cardinals, such as Red-crested, Pope, Green, and Virginian, you could also keep Foreign Thrushes and Starlings with them, but you must carefully regulate your variety and quantity according to your space. If you care to give details of your aviary, I could give you more definite help.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Special Numbers (J. O. Watkins).—We are obliged for the suggestion, which will receive our consideration along with others of a similar nature.

Photo (R. Dalley).—Accept our thanks for the photo, but we regret we cannot use same, it not being "sharp" enough.

Competition (J. Hennery Lewis).—The result of the "ladder of Progress" competition, as might have been gathered from our last issue, will be announced very shortly now, the task of judging having proved an exceedingly laborious one.

Photograph of Aviary (A. Hill).—Many thanks for sending us this, which we hope to be able to reproduce in one of our forthcoming special numbers.

Correspondence.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I was very glad to see Mr. Thos. Robson's account of his losses had aroused some interest, and the offer of varied friendly advice in your last issue. What struck me most forcibly in Mr. Robson's letter, and also in a few of the other writers' accounts, was the fact that any rational and practical person should be content to lose such a great number of birds, representing in some cases very considerable monetary value, without taking the very slight trouble and trivial cost of having a post-mortem examination made on one of the bodies in an early stage of the epidemic, which would at least give them some definite knowledge of the disease that had to be combated, and, perhaps, help them to turn all their efforts into the most effective direction, instead of floundering about in a veritable slough of guess work and supposition. To obtain such knowledge with the means you place at each reader's disposal does not entail more outlay than the cost of one common canary, and that one should neglect this means of assistance and go on losing literally scores upon scores of birds in ignorance of the actual cause of the loss is to say the least the very climax of a penny wise and pound foolish policy. Personally, after carefully reading these letters, I have not the slightest doubt that practically all these big losses, whether occurring rapidly or slowly, are due to so-called "Bird-fever." This will answer "J. W. Boocock's" first query. As regards his second, the cause is a typical germ—Septic bacilli; and thirdly, of remedies to cure, I believe, there are none of any practical value. Prevention is the best remedy, and this is best brought about by pure food, pure water, pure air, cleanliness, and general hygiene, and when an attack occurs it is best combated by isolation and thorough disinfection added to the above essentials.

A LOOKER-ON.

SIR,—I am very sorry Mr. J. W. Boocock should be losing so many birds, and hope my answer to his letter may be the means of helping him (partly) out of his difficulty; but before proceeding, I wish to quote from his last letter a few of the lines in same: "I sent a Norwich cock, etc., to Mr. North for post-mortem," and after receiving the answer, doubts as to whether the disease is really bird fever; I ask is this justice to Mr. North or the Fancy? Anybody with half an eye can see that the advice given is doubted by his asking fanciers to give their opinion of it. How many old (or young) fanciers are there who can prove the contrary? How many of the old fanciers can tell for certain whether the disease is other than stated? Very few. One may just as well go to one of the best physicians the world can produce and ask his opinion (after somebody else has given theirs) as to whether a patient has died of cholera or not. No, my dear friend, post-mortem examination is the only way, and when given should not be doubted; otherwise, what is the use of having same? A post-mortem is the only way to find out what your bird died of. Now, I ask: Has he carried the disinfection far enough, and has he isolated all the ailing ones? If not, he will lose every bird he has. Say, for instance, Mr. Boocock contracts a cold; a relative in the same house has no handkerchief, and asks and receives his. The consequence is that that person catches the cold, and so it travels round the house. So it is with birds. Another point is this: Two or more birds peck at one another's beaks, and so carry the germs to one another and to others; hence eight or nine deaths during the day. Therefore, I again ask: Has he carried the disinfection far enough? One more question and answer before I finish: What is the first thing a doctor does after visiting an infectious case? He notifies the Board of Health of the case, and they remove the patient, disinfect the house, also the very clothes the patient was wearing. The same, therefore, should apply to birds and their feathers. The latter should be sprayed with a solution of coal tar or other disinfectant, providing it is not one of those disinfectants that would burn the very life out of a bird.

BERT.

SIR,—Again in my paper, CAGE BIRDS, August 28th, I see there are many who are still on this subject. The experiences, in my opinion, are really, in the Yorkshire phrase, "hard lines," having lost half a dozen myself, though I think I checked further losses after the last two departed. I think the Canary is one of the most delicate and dainty birds we have in the Cage Bird Fancy, but I would like to ask, does the Canary (any variety) receive a true and natural treatment? For instance, there are the breeding cages (of course, up to date) that have a sort of painted or coloured interior with the woodwork in various colours made up of patent mixtures which I am not very well posted up in as to its manufacture, etc. I am of opinion that no description of paint or enamel should be within reach of any Canary, or of any other cage bird. I wonder if our forefathers used to have the loss of their stocks similar to what we hear and read about up to date? I should be inclined to say they did not, so far as my memory tells me, 25 years ago and less. Again, should any amateurs have cages with painted or black lacquered wire front, I advise their having some new ones minus the same. Further, touching on the point of "true nature," some time ago I visited a friend (a breeder) to have an hour's chat in the bird room. After a while he suddenly took up a small package, and put in every water trough a fair good dose of Epsom salts. Each Canary received as much as I thought would have almost taken myself out of the moult, or assisted me with it. On leaving my friend's house (I had my feelings for those birds) I wondered, was it a natural administration? "No." And he had several more curious decoctions from the chemist in readiness for the Canaries, of a very unnatural appearance, and which I should decline to give to my stock. All the same, they were perhaps liquids that would do the necessary when required. If any of my stock of about 50 birds is inclined to be a little shady, I simply take the car into the open (return fare 2d.), and obtain for them some natural grown greens of my own simple collection which generally they devour most freely for some time. So far I have not had the misfortune of a decease, nor do I like to read of it! But such is the case, and a remedy in some directions will have to be got, certain, as these losses we read of must be awful financially, as well as discouraging. In conclusion I say, give the Canary a general treatment approaching to true nature, and the result will be much to their better health. The only preparation I have on hand that I administer to them is colour food; and why? The answer is, because we have it to do for various essential reasons. I wish success to my paper, CAGE BIRDS.

JOHN H. JOWETT.

SIR,—Would you kindly allow me a little space, seeing so much is being written about bird fever and the fatal disease? It brings fresh to my mind my loss of 15 young Scotch fancies about nine years ago. I will try to give my experience. I had a bath-room, of just a fine shape for four shelves. I made the usual start with five pairs. I bred the birds in the kitchen to get an early start, and put them in the bath-room when they were five weeks old. I was very much afraid of draughts. And my birds were all in fine health when they went to the bath-room, but in a few weeks one after the other died, sometimes two the same day. The sketch of Mr. T. Robson's bird in a recent number was very like the way they went off. I gave them all the known cures I could get hold of, but still they went off. After I had lost 15, I took them out and put them in the room where they did well. I found out after I had paid the penalty it was blood poisoning, caused through bad ventilation. I kept the bath-room door shut, and I was at that time so much afraid of cold that I very seldom opened the window. My wife always had the kitchen window open night and day, and many times I told her that she was killing my birds; but the birds in the kitchen were alright. I may state that that same year I was over-run with red mites; they were sticking to the wall paper all over the house. I was very slow at learning what was wrong, but I have never let them go the same way since. I have 30 young Scotch fancies just now doing well with my window open all day and night, and this more than anything in this wide world, keeps the mites at bay. Of course, my birds are in at the side away from any draught. Now, I am only giving my experience, and I don't say that this fatal disease is blood poison, but to whom it may concern it may prove valuable, as prevention is better than cure—once bitten, twice shy. I believe in plenty of fresh air now. I hope this may meet the eyes of any who shut their birds up in garrets with closed windows. When I look back on things I don't think this disease was infectious. I give my name and address to show good faith, but will sign myself

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

Sir,—I have read with great interest the letters on the song of Linnets North and South. I see that some correspondents believe the Linnet has its own song. I myself am confident it is a mocking bird, but I don't wish to press anyone into the same belief. A correspondent ("Live and Learn") says, "How is it racing pigeon men say it is the men that make the pigeon, and I wonder if it is the same with the Linnet?" In a sense it is. A real Linnet fancier, who knows the song, will keep nothing but the best he can get, always trying to get a better bird than he has, thus improving his strain. I should like all novices to know that a young bird with a good note or two will improve as it gets older with a little care and attention. I think it is very wrong of the North to call the South names, as they enjoy their style as well as we do ours.

The Human Linnet.

Sir,—I was very glad to read the sensible letter and correct statement of one who signs himself "One Who Does Not Require Teaching." But I am sorry to say that the one who signs himself, "I Like the Best,' I consider is next door to the worst of your correspondents, and his letter, like himself, is nothing but "swank" from beginning to end. He goes and catches 20 dozen a day with no song at all, and yet he advises others they want Linnets that don't "hip." Then, again, he expects me to tell the Linnet's song in the case of birds which I have never seen or heard. Surely he is not in his right mind. Again, he invites me to go and hear the song, when he gives six notes and four of them are bad ones. Fanciers, both young and old, do not want that I should state which are the bad ones, as any fancier that knows a Linnet knows that I am right. If he means "The Blue Anchor," "The Rising Sun," or "The Crown" (I am only mentioning these three), I have been to these houses fifteen years back or more, have won, and have been bored afterwards. I used "The Blue Anchor" in Bill Richardson's time (how's that, swanker?) before you knew a Linnet from a Crow. With regard to Chaffinches, he no doubt speaks the truth about borrowing one for work; it is a complaint with a lot up there. I have No. 1 clincher, cloucher, chibby chay, rattle chock wader; ling, ling, hill, hull, cher, weeder; ling, ling, hull g woader; No. 2, the spinning cher weeder and broken chock wader; No. 3, chow, chow, "kiss me, dear," and "tiddle me, dear." My own are not borrowed, and are all good honest hard workers. No day is too long for them; not walking sticks for the Row Sunday mornings, and when you get away in the country, weeting and shrimping. all day. I should not, of course, have run away from the subject—Linnet song—to the Chaffinch song; but I do so for the sake of fanciers who don't know, and I should not have written at all, but I was pressed to do so by a fancier in the shires. But before I withdraw from this correspondence, I will send you a sketch of two of my London contests cages, one for a very steady bird, and one for a very wild one.

H. N. Barnard.

Sir,—Kindly allow me further space in your valuable paper Cage Birds on the above subject. In reply to "One That Requires no Teaching," he says Mr. Barnard seems upset. I should be very sorry to hurt any one's feelings, although I struck rather hard, but it was only to educate and not to cause ill-feeling against any one. Your correspondent has read our letters on quality singing with a smile, bnt not with as much laughter as we did reading his style of singing. But there are different ways in different counties. He says the Linnet has its own song; then further on he says the Linnet in different counties sings different changes. Quite so; that proves it is a mocking bird. I will just name a few that are not mocking birds—the Titlark, Yellowhammer, Redpoll, Chaffinch, Greenfinch (with its soft rolling chatter and its "ger, ger, ger, gill, gill, gill, chell, chell, chell," etc.). Any of these birds, whether caught North or South, will sing the same, only some will be better than others. But the Titlark, to my mind, is far the best quality singer, particularly when he is coming to the ground. The novice will think he has stopped singing, but it is the finish of his song you should listen to. After "titling" in voices, he will start "light reeing," and then get into "hollow reeing," going deeper as he gets to the ground. I would not say, like Mr. Barnard, if they wanted to advance a step further that I would give up Linnet singing. I would follow the majority. I am too much in love with this little brown-backed minstrel, the poor man's bird, as it is termed by some of our writers. It is the "Nightingale of the North," and I can scarcely find words good enough for him. I am not writing this to suit one or two persons. As a quality singer, I am writing to the world, thanks to Cage Birds and its ever-increasing sale. I will give you a good Linnet song without any faults: "Tit, tit, tit, tit, tit, tit, tot, tot, tot, tot, tot, tot, quee, quee, quee, quee, quee, quee; quy, quy, quy, quy, quy, quy; quo, quo, quo, quo, quo, quo; oh, oh, oh, oh, oh, oh." I will now give you the same song full of faults, and not pieced up properly—this is the way a bad bird would sing: "Tit, tit, tit, tit, po; lot, lot, lot, lot, qua; quee, quee, quee, quee, archie, sweet; quy, quy, quy, quy; topic, quee, feeit; oh, oh, oh, oh, Archie, sweet." Perhaps a Frenchman could explain a good portion of the latter song. This may interest some fanciers who want to know more about quality Linnet singing.

Decision to Close Down the Morriston Cage Bird Society.

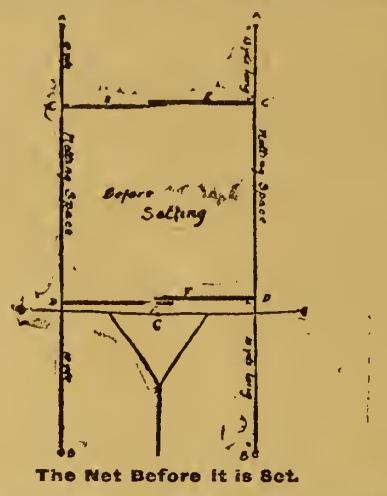
Sir,—Would you please insert the following in your valuable paper? It was proposed and seconded at a meeting of the Morriston and District Cage Bird Society, held on August 28th, at the Forward Movement Minor Hall, that in face of the fact that the members of the Society do not rally round the few who regularly attend, it be decided to wind up the society, and that the cash in the bank to the society's credit be divided between the Swansea Hospital and the Morriston Nursing Institutes, after all debts are paid. It is with deep regret that I have to announce that as we have the best place in Wales for show purposes, and we can be sure of a good financial success. A general meeting will be held on Saturday, September 11th to confirm the above, or to receive a resolution to that effect.

W. H. Lewis, Sec.

A Bucking-up for the Porth and District C.B.S.

Sir,—May I occupy a small space in your valuable paper, Cage Birds (the bird fanciers' Encyclopædia) to try and draw the attention of the members of the Porth C.B.S. to endeavour to bring us a little more in unity than has been the case during the past few months? I will take this liberty of calling a special general meeting to be held on Saturday next, September 4th, having met several of our members, all of whom want to know what is the matter and why no meetings are called? The reason is: because we have no secretary. Our late secretary, Mr. R. Challenger, resigned at the end of the last year, and we have not elected our officers for this year yet, although there were meetings called for that purpose, about three of us turning up. Our members seem to be a little down-hearted at the deficit on and failure of our last show, which were owing to the very poor entry, but every exhibitor was paid his prize-money, we being fortunate in having a loan of the money from one of our local gentlemen; and every member had to pay an equal share, which was 9s. 8d. per member. But there were one or two who did not and have not paid that 9s. 8d. yet, and we trust they will pay it to the society before this year is out. Should we arrange to hold a show this year, I hope it will be a huge success, as we deserve better support than we have had in the past. May I again ask the members to kindly turn up in good numbers, and put the society on a better basis? The general meeting will be held at our usual meeting place, Danix Temperance Bar, Hannah Street, Porth.

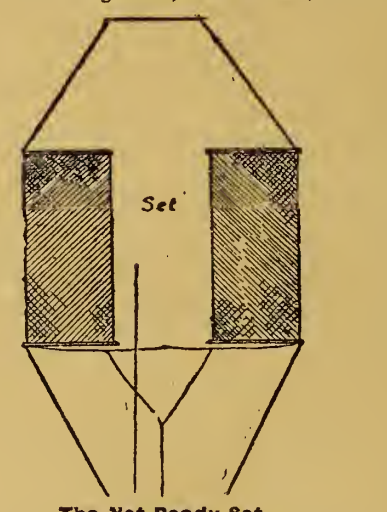
A Staunch Member.



Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

Sir,—With reference to the letter in your last issue signed, "Truthful James," on behalf of the D.O.S., I must say that the statement is altogether untrue. We owe no member teens of pounds, and moreover, a ten pound note would clear all our liabilities. We have had one member resign, but we have made twenty new members, and in spite of the effort of "Truthful James" (he left out a syllable preceding his nom de plume) to try and injure our future show, we mean to try again and cater for that part of the fancy which appreciates grit and determination, and we think these will excel our enemies. The figures of the workings of the D.O.S. during the year (and we were trying to clear off our show debt), after paying for hall, printing, and all other incidental expenses, showed that we were left with a deficiency of over £30 due to prize-winners in the open and members classes; but by the generosity of the committee (for we have not had to make a levy on the members), we have paid all excepting four gentlemen in the open (and two of these have been paid part), and two members; between them we owe £7, and to remaining members, which does not come to 30s. (thirty shillings). This is how we stand, and do not think it very disgraceful. One thing we are to blame for and that is we guaranteed too many classes, and if some of our specials had been put to the show funds as they were offered for, we should not have had much to make up after the show.

S. J. Kent, Sec. D.O.S.



How to Set and Use Clap Nets.

Sir,—Being a lover of this sport, I should very much like to help the gentleman who is in trouble. The first thing is to see that the netting is wider than the height required, with regard to the poles, as the netting should be slack. After the top cords are on the poles, the next thing is to keep the bottom cords in line with the top ones. They do not need an additional pair of poles, as there is a danger of killing the birds in the net. From four to six inches' overlap is quite sufficient for any net. I think you will have little difficulty in setting if you do as advised. Start at "A," drive the staff well into the ground, pull the cords tight to B, and peg pole D in the ground; the same with C.

The Net Ready Set.

Stand E pole erect and lift the cords to same; ditto F. Then peg the bottom cord down. Then comes the main gear. G is a stout wooden staff, which drive well into the ground level with the cords on the staff; then tie cords H to pole F, and all is then ready. You will find this bridle gear a great benefit to you in the windiest weather.

What Shall be Done to Him?

Sir,—The showing season is now advancing with measured strides, and birdie men are working hard to get their birds successfully through the moult, watching the colour food doing its work, so as to be in good time to stand a chance against their brothers in the field. This is the bright side of the game, and certainly the most exhilarating—the side of joy and pleasure. We will now scan the other side. I mean the "man" side. The birds are alright; show and club secretaries are all alert and scanning the horizon of the fixed show dates, and doing little by little to get their "house in order." The question that naturally arises is, Why can't they get their houses in order? They could if men were "men"! The clubs of 1909 are not unlike businesses that have not a ready-money system. They have bad customers, and book debts. Does not every secretary know them, and are they not a drag upon the market? We will turn our attention to that person (I cannot say member obviously), who does not pay. He is more often than otherwise not a novice, and, generally speaking, one who ought to know better; seeing he is only setting a bad example to more recent recruits. Take a summary of the clubs in general; in fact, we will start a club on "paper." We wake up and find that we want a society in Canaraton. A meeting is called, and it is started. All is fair and sunny. The secretary feels elated, for is he not the "head cook" of this Cage Bird Society? (I must not omit, however, "and bottle washer"). The Fancy is going to hear of this club. He is right. The secretary labours for the benefit of the members; has no salary. It is a labour of love, pure and simple. What a dream! Christmas is over, and subscriptions will soon be coming in. The future success looms large in the mind's eye, and quick as thought, pair show, nest feather show, members' and annual open shows—but stop; it is January, and subs. are due. February comes and there are no subs. March, April, May, June and July come and go, and the nest feather show comes on naturally, with the result that the secretary and committee are a bit out of pocket. It will all come square soon with the subs. August comes, and a few pay, and September with a few more. The secretary scratches his head, and says "I must get out of this job! The men will want the show, but they won't pay. How can you ask the big man with the big gold chain for his subscription? You'll offend him. He usually has it stopped out of his winnings. Did anyone hear of a more degrading and disgusting system?" They've got a committee, you know, and if a man is a committee man, let him pay for it, is what is said in effect. "In fact, I won't show at all if they don't buy a decent lot of specials," some will even say. The cute man now turns his attention to his stock of birds. He looks over them all. On careful calculation he thinks it won't be a very successful year from a showing point of view in this game of love. "Shan't pay my subs. now, because perhaps I can't take more out of the club than I pay in." Do you see the drift, secretaries? You must stop it. Refuse all subscriptions after the date in your rule book. Is it not better for Tom, Dick and Harry to know they are paying their money for the upkeep of the club, and not for the upkeep of these vampires? Secretaries must combine, and absolutely bar these men from adopting this pernicious and growing habit. What is the use of an inflated membership of a hundred, say, when only 60 pay? Out with them, I say, and have only 60, but honest members. Combination is the thing. Refuse their money after August, the absolute latest. Federate, and if the worst comes to the worst, expose them as richly as they justly deserve. You will find among them the men who get the biggest prices for their birds, take the biggest winnings, and, what is quite a paradox, the men that won't pay. The Fancy wants purging. It's like "Old London," which needed a great fire, and so have a stop put to this pestilence that is eating at the heart of an exhilarating hobby, and leave behind the men who advance the Fancy, work in the general interest, and, what is a big feature, pay their way.

Ipso Facto.

A Disclaimer from Dublin.

Sir,—Having received a printed circular (see enclosed) on which my name appears as one of the committee of a society to be called the Yorkshire Canary and British Bird Society of Ireland (of which I know nothing) I shall esteem it a great favour if you will kindly inform my friends in the Fancy that I have no connection with this supposed society, neither do I intend taking any part in forming or supporting another Yorkshire club in Dublin, as I consider the Y.C.C. of I. gives enough encouragement to fanciers of the bird I admire. They might also make further inquiries, when they will discover other names in the circular (including Mr. G. Bray, V.P.), who knows nothing about this new society, and has so informed me. Trusting you will give this notice space in your widely circulated paper, so as to prevent my old supporters being mislead

Joseph J. Cloke, late chairman Y.C.C. of I.

Dear Sir,

In consequence of the controversy lately ruling in the Fancy Press it has been decided to form above new club. The following gentlemen have been unanimously elected (pending sanction) to act as officials, and before sending your name to print I shall be glad to hear from you re same. The subscription to the Club will be 2/6 per annum, and as the promoters would like to get to work at once, I shall be pleased to receive same, together with any new members you may wish to propose. Hoping you will give us your valuable assistance and so make our Club a success.

I remain,
Yours truly,
D. CARROLL, Hon. Sec.

President—
Vice-Presidents—G. Bray, Esq. E. J. Tighe, Esq.
Chairman—Mr. F. R. Fry.
Treas.—Mr. J. P. Rooney. Sec.—Mr. D. Carroll.
Committee—

A Hint to Fanciers Troubled with "Bird Fever."

SIR,—Seeing so much in CAGE BIRDS about bird fever, I think I may be able to give some hints as to the prevention of this disease. I have until of late years been a great bird fancier (now commenced again), and have had great success, only losing my birds from old age. I took a new house with very pretty and large rooms, and I made a large room (sunny and bright) into a bird room, my birds looking charming in their aviaries there. Suddenly they seemed ill—for what reason I could not say. I tried all known remedies, but I lost my birds one after another. I wondered if it were bird fever. Now aviaries and remedies did not have any effect, and I myself got a bad throat, and I knew it to be a "drainthroat," so called. So I sent for the plumber, and had my ventilating shaft looked at, as I thought it was not carried high enough, and it seemed in a line with the staircase window. Then I looked from the late bird-room window (as I had removed some few of the birds left to a room on the other side of the house), and I found that the window was in a line with the ventilator. When I showed it to the plumber he said that if anyone had slept in that room they must have had typhoid fever. So my poor birds had their disease from that. They must have pure air like ourselves. Since then I have removed into other houses, and I always look now at the height of the ventilating shaft of the drain, and found that same had to be put higher in three houses that were supposed to be alright. Will your readers with cases of bird fever see where their shafts are? I have, I may say, never suffered with such cases since, and I have always had a few birds, and now have a great many.

Born with Crossed Beaks.

SIR,—Seeing in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, concerning hybrids with crossed beaks, I may say I have reared one for a friend; it is a Greenie-Bullie, and it is cross-beaked. It has only got one eye, and the hen had not the slightest trouble in feeding it. She had in the same nest two variegated mules and a Goldie-Greenie hybrid. I see the crossed-beaked one can feed itself quite easily every time I fill up the seed tray. It is the first down, too. ROWLEY ELSTON.

SIR,—In reply to "Goldie Linnet," I had a similar experience. It occurred in the case of a Lesser Redpoll and a Cinnamon hen Canary. I had a nest of three all having crossed beaks; two I reared on to the perch, but I came to the conclusion that they were worthless, and would never be able to feed themselves, and so I destroyed them at once. I came to the conclusion that it was a freak of nature. GEO. R. JAMES.

SIR,—Seeing in your issue of August 28th an account of "Goldie Linnet's" experience with muling pairs, I may state that I have a Redpoll-Canary which was born with a crossed beak. It is now over a month old, and is strong and healthy, though rather small for its age. The mother, unlike your correspondent's hen, has apparently experienced no trouble in feeding it, and the only inconvenience the bird itself suffers is inability to clean itself properly. After the bird had hatched out, I showed it to some friends, who immediately predicted a short life for it. They again saw it a few days ago, and were very surprised to find it was still alive. The bird presents rather a comical appearance; its top beak is crooked like a Parrot's, and its lower one is twisted round to the left almost at a right angle. I hope this may prove of interest to your correspondent and your readers in general.

F. PARRINGTON.

A Successful Experience.

SIR,—As I have read in your excellent paper CAGE BIRDS, the experience of other novices, I thought I would like to put a little of my own before you. Last summer I bought what I thought was a cock Canary, after hearing it singing nicely outside the shop, and knowing it to be warranted by the dealers. I had it for a few weeks, when one morning on cleaning out the cage, to my surprise I found an egg. When I found I had got a hen I began to think about breeding. I had a cock Linnet, so I paired them up, but had no results. Having had no experience in bird breeding I asked my newsagent to get me a suitable paper. He recommended CAGE BIRDS. Through the interesting articles and information contained therein, also by buying "Canary Breeding for Beginners," House's "Canary Manual," and CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL, I was able to start this season with two cock Canaries and four hens. I have had 52 eggs and 31 young birds from them. I have only lost four youngsters, and these I believe, through overdoing it with bread and milk after taking the young ones away from the old birds. I also add thanks for replies to queries which have helped me out of a trouble or two with the birds at times.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. J. Hards, I gave the size of boxes I used in an article of March 13th, published in CAGE BIRDS. The whole of the particulars might be repeated, Mr. Editor, by your kind permission, and, in addition, I recommend Mr. Hards, or anyone else desiring to stock boxes, to buy a pint of mealworms, and put them into the boxes when ready, as I directed in the article last March—half a pint in each. Let them alone for two or three months, except to look at the top covering to see how they are working. There will soon be a lot of tiny mealworms, and "clocks," or beetles, and also big mealworms between the layers of sacking. Only use the big, fat mealworms. These boxes will supply two or three hundred a week easily after the first hatch. Buy some to use in the meantime until the boxes are ready.

CHAS. HOULTON.

We have much pleasure in reprinting from Mr. Chas. Houlton's article published in CAGE BIRDS, dated March 13th last, the part which described his own method of breeding mealworms. It is as follows:—

"My method of breeding mealworms was as follows: I procured two very large boxes or tea chests, about 2 feet 6 inches square, and 3 feet high. I had close-fitting lids to these, and in the centre of the lid was a piece cut out about 4 inches square, and a piece of perforated brass plate, or brass wire gauze fastened over. This was for ventilation. At the bottom of the box I placed a false bottom inside, about an inch less all round in dimensions. This false bottom had two ribs nailed across it underneath about an inch thick, which left a space between it and the box bottom proper. On this I would spread a piece of old flour sack, cut to size, flat all over it. A thick piece of brown paper formed the next layer. Then I would put in some crushed oats, bran, and meal, about an inch thick. Another piece of sack, and a piece of brown paper saturated with black treacle and brewers' ale I put next. This should be soaked and left to dry in pretty well before being put in the box. Another piece of sack is put on this soaked paper, and on top of this some more crushed oats, bran, and meal. Don't, when doing this, put any flesh, meat, or dead birds in. I put in another piece of sack and brown paper next, and some more oats, bran, meal, and on top of these I placed a piece of sack which had been soaked with black treacle and beer. I took care not to put too much treacle and beer, but just enough to allow of its being well absorbed into the dry sack. I always had a good supply of mealworms after I had established this method. I used out of one at a time, allowing the other time to regenerate a stock. If kept in warm places, the worms will rapidly thrive and increase."—Editor.

What are a Judge's Duties Respecting Stained Birds?

SIR,—As a fancier and a lover of fair play, there is a question I should like to bring before the Cage Bird Fancy, one which is, I think, of no mean importance, viz., Is it right for a judge to handle a bird that he may consider has been tampered with? Would it not be his duty to merely place the birds in their order of merit? And should any question arise as to his objection to any exhibit, he, or whoever the objector be, should lodge a protest to be brought up before the club for their decision on the matter. Instances have arisen in which, after a bird has been suspected and tested by the judge, and the judge found to be in error, the bird has been spoiled for the rest of the season. The question then comes: who is responsible for the spoiling of the bird? SCOTS FANCY.

A Successful Start.

SIR,—Having seen the various accounts of breeding results of the season, I send you a few notes of my results. This being my first year in the breeding of Canaries, I think I have done very well. I had three pairs of birds to start with—two pairs of Canaries and one Canary hen with a Goldfinch. The Goldfinch got out of the cage and I lost him, or I thought so. But I was told by some that it was a hen; some, however, were sure it was a cock bird. Anyhow, the Canary had two sittings (five eggs in each nest), but all the eggs proved to be clear. Then I borrowed a Yorkshire cock bird, and I got four out of five eggs. The other two pairs hatched out nineteen young ones. Out of these I only lost one bird three days old. I only started keeping birds last year, and I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since. This year I had altogether thirty Canaries, and also a Skylark. The Skylark I brought up last year, and he used to sing in the winter by lamplight; but he does not sing now. He is at present moulting, so I don't expect much song; but I should like to know if any reader would tell me what would bring him into song? I give him the same seed that I give the other birds, besides a few mealworms, a bit of cold boiled potato, and a raw carrot, and I always keep a turf in his cage.

A New Cage Bird Society for Leadgate and District.

SIR,—A number of fanciers held a meeting on August 26th to consider the formation of a Cage Bird Society here at Leadgate. A well-attended meeting was held, and it was decided to have a society, to be called the Leadgate and District Cage Bird Society (confined to a radius of six miles). Subscriptions will be 2s. 6d. Fanciers are cordially invited to our next meeting on Saturday, Sept. 4th, at 7.30, at headquarters, 545, Quarry Street, Leadgate. J. A. TURNBULL, Hon. Sec.

Wanted: Novice Classes for Unflighted Norwich Canaries.

SIR,—Now that the show season is close upon us, I pen this to express the hope that societies round Staffordshire will put unflighted classes on for novices in the Norwich section. I am sure that by doing so it will be better for both sides. I think it is a great injustice to class old birds against the unflighted ones, as the officials know as well as I do that an unflighted bird has to be an exceptionally good one to be in the prizes where old birds are competing. Also I should like the officials to look at it this way: a novice goes at the back end each season to buy stock birds, and when the shows come round he is showing these birds and winning. Where then are the birds he has bred? They are at home; and why? Because there are no classes for them. I hope, therefore, secretaries will buck up and let us have classes for the birds we have bred and not for what we have bought. A good stock bird, of course, not properly paired up, does not breed a Palace winner.

UNFLIGHTED NORWICH.

The Sensational Scottish Disqualification Case.

SIR,—Much has been said and written upon this case that has been of little if any value to the Fancy in Scotland, or anywhere else No doubt it has whetted the appetite of a few "busybodies," and that is all. Except for the "coterie," the subject is a dead letter. Mr. McQuiston was tried, "found guilty," and had no defence; and he was ill-advised in putting the blame on Mr. Gemmell, rightly or wrongly. It is well known in the Fancy that Mr. Gemmell's and Mr. McQuiston's interests are almost identical, and of a co-operative nature. "Faking," or dressing exhibits is not confined, however, to Mr. McQuiston and Mr. Gemmell, but has a large number of practisers in the Fancy. This case should act as a warning to others. BULLFINCH.

The Captivating "Umbrella Bird."

SIR,—In reference to Mr. Finn's article headed "Was it Hatched in a Mare's Nest?" I may say I am the purchaser of the "umbrella bird," about which there seems to be some doubt as to its existence. It is a fine specimen, and very tame, and is fond of custard. I purchased it from a dealer in London. I may add that it will never be seen on the show bench, so that the pot-hunters need not think they may still win such prizes. I am always delighted with your paper, CAGE BIRDS. H. C. MOLINEAUX.

Notes on the Lark Family.

By G. E. Watson.

There are but few among us who are indifferent to the pleasure of "keeping" birds. The desire for possession is doubtless due to the attention lavished upon them in their wild state. Is it not enough that we hear the Lark, the messenger of morn carolling in the skies?

The King of the Feathered Tribe.

As the lion is the king of beasts, so may the Skylark claim the monarchy of the feathered tribe; and as the monarch of the jungle maintains his brawny limbs and tough muscles in spite of all, so the Skylark compels our admiration, not by reason of its splendid plumage, its bold flight, or its magnificent song, but by its humility and gratitude.

As soon as the sun peeps from its hiding up springs this brown bird from amongst the grass and speeds heavenwards to give thanks for another day. Higher and higher it mounts till it is no bigger than a bee, and the music of its tiny throat fills the broad expanse. We then shade our eyes, lest we lose sight of the quivering speck as it floats in the sunbeams.

Popular and Long-lived.

Of no song-bird has there been more written than the Skylark. It has been a subject for poets from time immemorial. It is a pleasant reflection that it suffers no way in health and spirits through being kept in captivity. Besides the good qualities enumerated above, there is no reason why, if you get a young and healthy bird, it should not live quite a number of years in captivity. There are many who assert that the Woodlark is superior to his brother, but whatever opinion may exist as to the excellence of either bird, it must be allowed that its power of song, its gracefulness of shape, and its hardihood make the Skylark to come first.

However, the first thing is to get a young, healthy bird. It should be slim, upright and well planted on its legs. It should hold its head well up, so that from the front the whole of the underpart to the extremity of its tail may be seen.

Flick your finger along the cage, and if it instantly puts up its crest, you may be sure it is a healthy bird. To know its age examine its legs; if they are scaly or mottled, showing the scales have been removed, it is an old bird, but if its legs are sleek and clean, and its toes perfect, it is a young bird.

To distinguish the cock bird see that the breast feathers are a dingy white in colour, tinged with light brown; if they are not the breast will be nearly white in colour, spangled with dark brown spots, which denotes that it is a hen. It will also be found that the hen is a smaller bird.

The Second of the Lark Tribe.

We now come to consider the Woodlark. No doubt we can place this bird second in the Lark tribe. It may be easily distinguished from the Skylark by the shortness of its tail, and by the reddish-brown streak which it has above each eye; and it is altogether a smaller bird. Like the Syklark, it builds its nest on the ground, but generally under a bush or hedge. But unlike the Syklark it is a perching bird, and will sing either on the wing or on the branch of a tree.

The poll of the cock Woodlark is a reddish brown in colour, the sides of the head are brown, the breast is a dingy yellow with brown spots, the tail and wings are brown, and two of the feathers of the latter have a light red spot on them. The markings of the hen are altogether darker and the spots on the breast are more numerous. But it may be mentioned that the hen is the more handsome bird of the two.

The Shorelark and the Titlark.

Besides the Skylark and the Woodlark there is the Shorelark, which has a yellow throat and a horse-shoe-shaped crest on its breast. Lastly we have the Titlark. This is the smallest of the Lark tribe, being about five-and-a-half inches long, and even more slim than the others. The upper parts of its body are a rich brown in colour, speckled with black. The underparts are a dingy yellow, each wing is crossed with a yellowish white bar, and the tail is narrow and slightly forked. The only difference between cocks and hens is that the hen is a dingy yellow on the breast, and the underparts of the body and the bars across the wings are a vivid white.

The Titlark resembles the Woodlark as regards the building of its nest, which it always does on the ground, in a tuft of grass or beneath a bush.

How Best to Manage Larks.

We now come to the management of the Lark tribe. With regard to the cages in which to keep them, we may rest assured it is of no use putting a perch inside for the Skylark, as it would only be in the way. But the Woodlark and the Titlark being perching birds will require a couple of perches inside.

The Lark tribe being insectivorous or soft-billed birds require feeding on as much of their natural food as possible, such as ants' eggs, worms, insects, etc. The disease which they mostly suffer from is looseness of the bowels. Another malady which is peculiar to them is a sort of a yellow scale at the base of the beak; this disease frequently attacks them when they are in captivity.

The Beautifully-Marked - - Lizard Canary.

By S. R. COMPSTON.

A lecture delivered before the Lancashire & Lizard Fanciers' Association on Feb. 1st.

A largely attended meeting was held on Aug. 1st for the purpose of hearing a lecture by Mr. S. R. Compston on the subject of the Lizard Canary. Mr. J. Dewsnap ably presided. The lecture was as follows:

It would be very interesting to know the history of the Lizard, who bred the first one, and how long it took to fix the markings. It is not my intention to occupy any time attempting that part of the subject, for the simple reason that we have nothing but conjecture to work upon, and that is rather poor material for a guide. One thing we may be sure about—the Lizard was not made in one season's breeding. Years of patient mating up to produce certain effects have been spent before the beautifully marked bird we possess to-day could be procured.

The bird is well named. There is certainly a close resemblance between the spangling on a Lizard Canary and the markings or scales on a Lizard.

A Bird of Many Points.

There is no variety of Canary with as many points about it as the one we are discussing. All others are quite plain by the side of it. Shape and carriage are the main points in other breeds, along with colour and condition. The Lizard has those properties, but in addition has markings. As there are some members present who have not had quite the same experience as others may have had, I will describe the properties of a good show specimen as well as I can in words without having a model or specimen before me.

The first point a good Lizard judge looks for is the spangling on the back. Some of the old breeders call this spangling "work," because the marking is so regular, even, and distinct, that anyone might be excused thinking the feathers had in some way been worked in order to produce the effect. A good bird has certainly a lot of grand "work" on it. The spangling is in lines down the back, each feather overlapping and showing a nice gold or silver tipping circling the edge of the feather. These lines or rows begin right up in the neck, and continue to the bottom of the back, the spangling increasing in size as they get nearer to the bird's tail, and showing a larger space between each row of spangling.

The back is not the only part of the bird that is spangled; the top parts of the wings are marked in a similar manner. The shoulders are very distinctly marked, and across the middle of the wings above the long feathers there is a row of spangling almost like a row of buttons; one used to hear old exhibitors call them buttons. The longer feathers in the wings and the tail flights are all laced on the outer edge, but not with the same shade of colour until the bird has an adult moult.

A good Lizard shows rows of mooned feathers on the breast and on the lower part of the body, but these feathers are not spangled like the feathers on the bird's back, they are more of a self colour, and almost black.

The Lizard's Marked Peculiarity.

The cap or head colour is a marked peculiarity of the Lizard. We have a dark bird with a light colour on the skull, which has been well described as being the shape of a thumb nail. By that is meant that the cap should be the shape of a thumb nail.

In the early times of exhibiting Lizards, one that had not a good shaped cap was discarded or disparaged, but time proved that breeding for good capped birds had a great tendency to spoil the bird in other respects. Over-capped birds came—birds with caps running down far behind the skull. Over the eyes of a Lizard there is a black line of feathers, almost like a pencilled line; this line goes away when birds are bred too much for cap, and instead of birds with dark cheeks, young are produced which are light in face, and these are called "balled faced." The spangling also suffered; the tippings or light edge round the short feathers increased in size so as to destroy the contrast between the centre of the feather and the edges; the result was that a bird was produced that might have large spangling but bad ground colour, the silvers coming too mealy-looking and losing all the beauty of a good spangle. The good breeders knew the cause of this, and made use of the broken-capped Lizard when mating his birds for breeding.

The broken-capped Lizard, I hardly need tell you, is one with more or less of a black or dark patch of feathers on the head. As time went on the classification at shows was extended, and classes were provided for broken capped Lizards.

In the majority of cases the broken capped bird is the best-spangled one, and a bird without cap will very often beat the lot in work and in all-round beauty of markings. Some Lizard judges attach too much importance to the cap. One does not wish to say anything in any way disrespectful of a fellow judge, but when we see birds high up in the prize list with no good quality except cap about them, one cannot help feeling that the judge has had little experience in Lizard breeding, or in studying the make-up of a Lizard.

Where Great Care is Required.

No one knows how the Lizard was produced. All Canaries spring from the same source. We don't even know how the green bird has been made almost white; some one has spent a lot of time and patience in developing the Lizard, and great care is needed in pairing the birds to keep the variety from going back. That it is possible to lose the best property of the Lizard has been shown by breeding too much for cap. Breeding from full-capped birds a few generations will produce young ones with white flights in both wings and tail; consequently, any one who intends to succeed in producing show specimens must of necessity learn as much as possible about the way they breed.

The description of a Lizard, and standard of points supplied to each member, are good ones, and one is surprised to hear differences of opinion expressed at shows with reference to a judge's awards. There may be a number of us together at a show, all of us knowing exactly what a Lizard should be, and yet not two of us may be alike in our opinions as to which bird should have won. This comes about because our powers of observation are not just alike.

The Bird that is Wanted.

I remember being drawn over the coals after I had done judging at one Crystal Palace show, by an exhibitor who can tell a good Lizard usually. A certain bird ought to have won which was third. I allowed my friend to finish his remarks, and then asked him if he had examined the bird alround? He had done so, he said, and all was right. I asked him to shew me the spangling on the right side of the third prizewinner. He took another look, then confessed that he had been so struck by the good work on the back that he had failed to notice the bird had not moulted its butts.

Another person once drew my attention to a bird I had put low down that had won at several shows, and had secured much higher positions. He could not see a small row of work down the centre of the back, where there ought to have been none. That small row has spoiled the chances of many an otherwise splendid bird. A judge who knows Lizards does not fail to notice these defects, and when he finds birds without them they go up.

I mention these matters in order that you who exhibit may observe your birds more closely, and in selecting some for show, if possible, let them be those that are without those faults. They are not fatal faults, but a judge who knows his work should be able to see them, and give preference to birds that have not the faults.

The Kind of Spangling Needed.

I was judging Lizards once when another judge who was taking other varieties drew my attention to a Lizard and expressed his opinion to the effect that it was the best he had ever seen. That bird had won first at a good show. This judge was surprised afterwards when he found I had not placed it first. He was a little surprised when I told him that the spangling must be in rows down the bird's back, and not like currants in a cake, all over without any design. This is a point the novice must learn if he would succeed in his Fancy.

At one Palace show an exhibitor asked my opinion of certain birds he had exhibited. I told him they were good birds, but badly shown. He answered by saying he did not like to wash them, as he might knock a feather or two out of them, and he had put them on a price to some one. What was the use of his showing them dirty? A Lizard must be shown clean to look well. A dirty Lizard gets its feathers misplaced, and however well-rowed or spangled it may be, dirt jeopardizes its chances on the show bench.

I have said we all know exactly what a Lizard should be, but most of us are inclined to think our own birds are nearest the ideal, especially so when they go to a show.

It is quite right to admire our own stock, but sometimes it is awkward when a number meets each one admiring only his own. It is then the judge catches it. It is well to cultivate a spirit of sportsmanship, and try to feel that a man who cannot suffer defeat is not deserving of victory.

The Staging of Lizards.

There is no great secret either in breeding or exhibiting Lizards. There may have been a time when there was a great art in staging a Lizard to win, but most of the artists have left off showing, and it will never again be profitable to exhibit birds of this variety that require a lot of getting ready. There will always be something that some person will call faking before a team of birds can be sent out to a show.

Some people are foolish enough to object to a bird's being washed. By some it is considered cruel; others contend that an experienced hand has an advantage over the novice in that respect. Experience always has the advantage; the novice must hurry up and get experience.

Every breeder should remember that the Lizard is a made variety, manufactured by judiciously crossing various coloured birds. By observation he will notice results of his pairing up. Sometimes his birds will run too light in colour, others will produce young ones too dark. Sometimes he may breed young ones with a bad ground colour, a shade that does not harmonize with the rest of the colour. Most of these things he can remedy for himself if he is cut out for a fancier. Most older fanciers will give advice to younger ones who are open to receive it.

The greatest tendency a Lizard seems to have is the tendency to throw back or revert to some lighter coloured ancestor. I am now speaking of the older breeder's difficulties. I have drawn attention to the danger of breeding for cap too much; I want now to point out that the colour of the wing and tail flights have a great deal to do with the colour on the rest of the bird. All other points being equal, the birds with the strongest colour in the long feathers will breed the best Lizards. A fading colour in those feathers is an index to what the bird will reproduce.

The Produce of the Breeder's Art.

Time will not allow me to go into all the details of breeding and exhibiting, allow me therefore to conclude by saying that in the Lizard you have a beautiful bird, the produce of the breeder's art, a bird that must have taken more skill and patience to produce than any other Canary. A Canary it is with a beauty all its own, standing out from the rest of the Canary tribe by its beautiful markings. Each feather on the top of its body is pencilled and placed in order to a pattern; underneath are splashes of colour which put away all thought of plainness, and balance the colour on the top, strengthened all round by a sound, strong, coloured wing, matched by the tail; with a light-coloured cap on the bird's head too, to remind us that it is still a Canary, as we are in the habit of seeing a Canary colour.

A number of questions were asked and answered to the satisfaction of the audience. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously carried.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS.

By that distinguished authority on aviculture, WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., Etc. Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds," Editor of the Foreign Bird Journal.

A thoroughly comprehensive and highly instructive Manual, written from personal observations made during a lifetime's experience. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints and reminders. ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

Birds for St. Helena.

Attention has been recently drawn to the fact that our little colony of St. Helena is in need of insectivorous birds, and it has been suggested that Humming-birds should be imported to help in keeping the insect pests down. As it is, the only insectivorous bird on the island is the common Indian Mynah (Acridotheres tristis), although no doubt some of the Finches which are there, especially the St. Helena Waxbill, do something to keep down insect life; these little birds have been found splendid insect destroyers in a greenhouse, where they kept the plants free from thrips, green-fly, and such-like vermin. I have, however, myself recommended in the Press the introduction of the Pekin Robin, which, as many of our readers know, is cheap and easy to manage, and will account for a great variety of insects of different sizes. To those who do not happen to have met with this delightful little bird as yet, the accompanying rough sketch may give some idea of its appearance, and at any rate, prevent their having Java Sparrows passed off on them as Pekin Robins, a little game which was tried on in the trade not so very long ago.

The Pekin Robin.

An Aviary of Aliens.

The island of St. Helena has but one truly native bird, with the exception of some widely-ranging sea-fowl, this solitary aboriginal being a small species of Plover, very closely allied to an African kind; the familiar St. Helena Waxbills were originaly introduced from the African mainland. The other St. Helena birds, also introduced, are the St. Helena Seed-cater, also an African species by origin, the red Madagascar Weaver, the Java Sparrow, the above-mentioned Indian Mynah, the Guinea-fowl, and the Chinese ring-necked Pheasant. It will thus be seen that there is plenty of room for more "Soft-bills," which ought to find themselves in paradise, for the climate is delightful, and there are no birds of prey of any kind to trouble them.

Bird Breeding in the Open.

Indeed, I think the need of insectivorous birds in this charming island might be taken advantage of to considerable purpose by the introduction and multiplication of two charming American birds, now for some time practically unobtainable by reason of the bird export prohibition law of the United States—the Blue Robin and the Nonpariel. The latter, though a Finch, has very insectivorous tastes, and any surplus of these birds would always command a ready sale in Europe, thus adding to the small resources of the island; while permission could no donbt be obtained from the American Government to ship the original consignment from the States for the purpose of this introduction, as all bird-lovers should sympathise with it.

The Two Nonpariels.

It may be worth while here to mention the differences between the true or American Nonpariel and the so-called Pin-tailed Nonpariel of the East Indies, which is quite an easy bird to procure, and, like the American bird, shows red, green and blue in its plumage, distributed in a somewhat similar way. The American bird (Cyanospiza ciris) has the top of the head and the back of the neck purple-blue, the back yellowish-green, and the underparts, from chin to tail, cherry-red. The tail is also edged with red, and is squared at the tip in the ordinary way; in fact, the bird, which is about the size of a Linnet, has no special peculiarity of form. The East-Indian or Pintailed Nonpariel (Erythrura prasina), has the face pure blue, the back and wings pure green, the middle of the breast and the tail red, the tail being very long, narrow and pointed. There is also some buff in the plumage, and all the colours blend into each other like those of the prism, in a way not seen in any other equally brilliant bird, while in the American Nonpariel they are boldly contrasted, and look so like paint that a dealer told me once he had been taken to task for exposing for sale "such an obvious fraud" as a Nonpariel he had in his window!

The hens of both species are less gorgeous than the males, the American being merely green above and yellow below, while the Asiatic, though she has a red tail, has no red elsewhere, and but little on the face, while her tail is quite stumpy compared with that of her mate.

A Champion Advertiser.

The recent importation of a specimen of the South American Naked-throated Bell-bird (Chasmorhynchus nudicollis) has given me the chance of suggesting what a noble bird this would be for advertising the business of any enterprising dealer. Put your Bell-bird, when in full song, out in a commodious but cosy cage whenever the weather is fine and warm, and I warrant it will not be long before all the neighbourhood know where the bird-shop is. Nor is the note unpleasant, like a Cockatoo's shriek; it is a loud metallic clang, exactly like the stroke of iron upon iron, so full and loud that it is enough to make one's throat sore in sympathy when the bird is seen to open his wide frog-like mouth and give out the call with a positive crash. At a distance it is really tuneful in its way, and is certainly the most extraordinary call I have ever heard uttered by any bird. The adult cock Bell-bird is snow-white, with a naked seagreen face, the hen being dull olive-green in plumage; its size about equals a Missel-Thrush's, but the tail is quite short. The bird is a tree-dweller, and lives largely on fruit, and will thrive well on this and a good insectivorous birds' food. Specimens have been from time to time on view in the Zoo, and have generally done well enough there.

The Bell-bird.

The Pileated Parrakeet.

As two well-known aviculturists, Mr. H. D. Astley and Mr. W. Fasey, have lately succeeded in breeding this rare and beautiful bird, it may be of interest to give a note about its appearance, as naturally there is more inducement to invest in a rarity when one knows it is likely to be a breeder, and thus, not only more interesting, but possibly likely to enable one to recover some at least of the initial expenditure, provided a pair be obtainable. The Pileated Parrakeet can indeed be described in a few words, for no other bird presents its curious combination of colours—cherry-red cap, yellowish-green cheeks, lilac underparts, and green upper portion of the plumage. In size and shape it much resembles the Rosella. Its scientific name is (Porphyrocephalus spurius), and it is often known as the "Red-capped Parrakeet" instead of the "Pileated."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

A Dead Thrush's Mourners.

Last year my brother picked up a young Thrush. He carried it home, but it soon died, and he threw the dead bird in the garden. We did not trouble any more about it, till the next day, when we saw a large Thrush fly down near the young one's dead body and keep hopping about and making a squeaking noise. Then it flew away and shortly afterwards returned with another Thrush and some worms. They kept on trying to feed it. This continued for about four days. Then I removed the young one's body. The above may at first appear incredible, but it is absolutely true.—Sent by Edward Kelly (age 15), The Green, Pembroke.

*The Kind Crane.

A man out shooting once saw a sight which cured him of wishing to kill birds for sport. A family of Cranes were feeding together, and he fired at them wounding one. Its mother seeing that it was unable to fly, placed herself underneath it, so that its legs rested on her back. In this way they flew, both flapping their wings. The good mother knew very well that she risked her own life by staying behind to help her child, but the sportsman never fired, and she got him safely away. The habit of helping their little ones makes the Cranes show kindness to other small birds. Often when crossing the sea these friendly Cranes will give to tired Wrens and other weary little birds a lift on their backs.—From "Children's Stories," by T. Nelson. Sent by Lorna Ainsley (age 13), Clifton Avenue, West Hartlepool.

*The Good Use of a Parrot.

A Parrot at Islington, by his strange cries of "Mother, mother!" saved his home from certain destruction by fire. Hearing its cries its mistress, on entering the room in which the bird was confined, found the room full of smoke which soon turned into flames. One bird was dead from suffocation, and two others were singed and insensible. The Parrot was rewarded with a premium.—Sent by Esther Stagg (age 11), 415, Portobello Road, North Kensington, London, W.

Wild Bird Life.

The Last of the Flycatchers.

Although the weather has again changed to dull skies and moisture, the graceful Spotted Flycatcher still haunts the roadsides and garden boundaries. Looking across the garden over the top of the fence I can just see a dead branch jutting out from the trunk of one of the elms. Upon this branch a Flycatcher may be seen nearly all day long, and it is interesting to watch him at work; sometimes he rises into the air, returning, of course, to the branch. While doing this he is in full view. But when he leaves it to swoop earthwards he is not seen for a few seconds; he is on the wing; but one is always confident he will return to the branch. While out of view one can in fancy follow his flight. If by any chance he should be absent a shade longer than usual the branch is at once taken possession of by another bird. There are always a dozen or so along the fence, and although to our eyes this position should be as good as any, still the dead branch appears for some reason a site to be taken possession of at the very first opportunity. To retain it these dainty birds do not fight and squabble as Finches would, but appear to simply fly at and buffet each other and then separate. Finches would retain possession as long as possible, and with spreading wings and open beak defy all comers, and fight until worsted.

All day long real fights in the bird world are continually taking place between rival Robins for favourite winter quarters, or so we are led to believe; but while watching them one is inclined to think the fighting spirit is uppermost in the cock Robins at this time of the year, and that the meeting with a rival anywhere is sufficient excuse for a combat, for no matter where we meet them, in the garden, in the wood, or along the hedgerow, it makes no difference. It is supposed that these combats are caused by the parent birds driving the young from the district where they were reared; but this theory would hardly hold good in the case of two I once saw fighting along the sea shore, some miles from buildings or woods. To meet a Robin in such a place was quite a surprise, and much more so to see a couple so engaged.

The Solitary Snipe.

The solitary Snipe visits Great Britain at the end of the summer, and is by no means plentiful. Seldom is more than one bird found at a time, and then it is generally when least expected. It is considerably larger than the "Jack" Snipe, and breeds mostly in Northern Europe.

Where Eagles Once Bred.

It is said that the Sea Eagle formerly bred in several parts of England, notably the lake districts, the Isle of Wight, and Dartmoor.

The Commonest Bunting.

The Yellow Bunting is undoubtedly the commonest of the family in the British Islands, although the Corn Bunting is frequently called the Common Bunting.

The Tuneful Blackcap.

It is thought that the song of the Blackcap inspired Shakespeare when he wrote the following:—

"To turn his merry note
Unto the wild bird's throat."

Tame Waders.

Among the birds of the seashore and moors, which are mostly shy and wary, the Dotterel and Dunlin are both tame and confiding. Unfortunately these ways lead to their destruction.

How Terns Nest.

The Terns seldom make much of a nest, but when they do it is composed of the vegetable surroundings, so that a bunch of dried seaweed or dead grass, which to all appearance is part of the drift upon the shingle, is in reality the sketchy nest collected by the bird. The eggs are barely discernible among this refuse and shingle.

Wandering Crossbills.

Big flocks of Crossbills have been seen in the Orkney Islands, the majority of them being young birds. They have been noted quite a month earlier than usual, and are exceedingly tame.

Gulls at the Nest.

When approached the newly hatched Gull lays as motionless in the nest as an egg. Until the feathers grow, the mission of the youngster is, it seems, stillness. It can do nothing until the wing has formed, and it appears to grow with astonishing speed. And no sooner does the young one launch itself into the air than it is apparently perfect. To the casual observer the young ones are equal to the adult birds in flight.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

goes by but what I publish a whole host of unsolicited testimonials. Have you ever given a thought to this? These people would not write these letters to me unless my goods gave them perfect satisfaction, would they? I don't care how hard a man is to please, if it is humanly possible, I guarantee to do so, that is why I send everything on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and refund money in full if every satisfaction is not given. Clap nets, made from genuine thread, ¾ in. mesh, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair. Kindly note above nets consist of two nets to the pair, and each net is guaranteed full stated measure, not the two nets measured together. All are properly "geared" or "armed," and fitted up complete, with stave poles, pegs, lines, etc., ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10 feet deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-. Batfolding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/6 pair; ditto, on 19 feet poles, 7/6 pair, all complete. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and are warranted to catch uninjured any bird, from Wren to Rook. The only net trap used by Mr. Jeffrey, England's largest Nightingale catcher. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call-bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), warranted to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Japanese birdlime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to hold birds in all weathers, and hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Loose thread netting, specially knit for making all kinds bird nets, ¾ inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½ inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, all post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, often sold as bird netting; full measurement guaranteed to each customer. Catchers' store cages, single compartment 1/- and 1/6 each; ditto, two compartment, 2/- and 3/- each; ditto, three compartment, 3/6 and 4/- each. Russian hemp pull lines, 80 yards long, 1/- each, post free. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, without snarl, or back twist, 68 yards long, and guaranteed strong as boat lines, 1/4 each, post free. Round-topped call-cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; ditto, square-topped, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list, telling you how to make your own nets, etc. See following letters, all guaranteed unsolicited, full name and address given in each case, so that sceptical persons may test their genuineness:—"Bridge View, Calstock, Cornwall, August 9th. Sir,—Last season I had some birdlime from you, and found it as advertised. Yours, W. Wooldridge, jun." "61, Wellington-st., Grimsby, August 9th. Sir,—Please send following. The netting I had last year is as good as ever. I find the things on your price list half the price of others. Yours, F. Gilliespie." "Violet Cottage, Sible Hedingham, August 11th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets quite safe, and thank you for prompt despatch. Yours, A. Bareham." "Bright View, Old Rattray, August 14th. Sir,—Please send lb. lime. I have used your lime for past 5 years, and it is the best I ever used. Yours, W. Honelsroud." "Macben View, Risca, August 20th. Sir,—Please send following." The netting bought from you 4 years ago is perfect now. Yours, S. Sullivan." "Windsor Cottage, Newbridge-on-Wye, August 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets safely, and am well pleased with them. They are good value for money. Yours, F. Probert." "Delhi-row, Pelsall, August 28th. Sir,—Please send following. The pair clap nets I had from you 3 years ago are still in use, and they wear very well indeed. Yours, J. Fallon." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, August 28th. Sir, Please send ¼ lb. lime. I had some from you last year, and I cannot find any better. It is reliable stuff, and it don't matter how it rains, it will catch all the same. Yours, C. Hart." Remember all my goods are sent on approval, cash or deposit, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction not given. See British Bird Column.

Dealers please send stamp for trade prices of cages. For all catching appliances see my advert. in Appliance column. Following few letters prove to you who is the man to give you satisfaction. Notice, full name and address, and also dates:—"34, Belvedere-st., Mansfield, August 10th. Sir,—Thanks for bird you sent. I am very pleased with it. I have found you a straightforward fancier, and wish you every success. Yours, H. Gilson." "Upper Outwood, Anslow, Burton, August 12th. Sir,—birds arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Yours, W. Moss." "Plaistow, Essex, August 14th. Sir,—Two Canaries arrived safe, and I am perfectly satisfied with them. Yours, W. Baker." "8, Park-rd., Henley-on-Thames, August 19th. Sir, Skylark arrived safe, it is a nice bird, and I think will make a good songster. Yours, A. Church." "Wear-terrace, Wilton-le-Wear, August 18th. Sir,—Birds arrived safe, and I am well satisfied. Yours, T. Sowerby." "Gordon House, Shotton Colby, August 19th. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in pink of condition. I am delighted with them, you will receive all orders from me for birds. Yours, Dr. J. W. Cross." "53, Raeburn-place, Edinburgh, August 12th. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived in pink of condition, and is doing well. Thanks for so nice a specimen. The cage is also wonderful value. J. Kirkcaldy." "14, Warrington-rd., Newtown, Wigan, August 19th. Sir,—Birds arrived yesterday, they are a fine lot. Allow me to thank you for the prompt businesslike manner you executed my order. They are far beyond expectation, and all future orders are yours. J. Maddock." "6, Stevenson-st., Oban, August 19th. Sir,— Birds arrived yesterday, but sorry to say one was dead in box. I am delighted with the other four, they are in pink of condition, and took water and seed immediately on getting out of box. This will not be last deal which I shall make with you, as price is reasonable, and the material good. Yours, D. Livingstone." (Now, please note sequel.—W. Gore.) On August 27th Mr. Livingstone writes as follows: "Sir, Just a line to thank you for the bird which you sent (free of cost), for the one which died in transit. I am very pleased indeed with my bargain, they are all now in pink of condition. The Bullfinches are beautiful. You will hear from me again. Yonrs, D. Livingstone." Kindly note, I have no connection whatever with any other advertiser nor do I buy from any advertising catcher. My catchers are stationed in various parts of Worcestershire, and the whole of their catches sent in to me, none being picked out by them at any time. All birds are properly netted, and guaranteed well on hard seed before sent ont to customers.

MATTHEWS SAYS, STOP HERE! HELLO! HELLO! NO WONDER.

Gentlemen, why I keep sending prize winners out every day is because I have the largest stock in the world to select from. This is well known by all the leading exhibitors, contest singers, and Mule breeders. Also the finest aviaries. Mine are not old hen cotes, same as most of backyard dealers. When you come to inspect them, over 2,000 birds to select from; not picked out of a dozen. Also refreshment and teas provided at any hour for all clients. So don't be gulled by so-called specialists. Send to the largest British bird dealer in the world. All at working-men's prices. Linnets, Linnets, Linnets, ready for show bench. Real giants, well pencilled, good ground colour, Norwich type, real gems, same sort of Linnets that have won first prizes all over England which I have sent out, only. 2/-; few extra specials, 2/6; Linnets, for contest singing, all in full song, taught under my well-known Cheshire champion, 1/6; a few extra specials, ready to win contests, 2/-; with book of instruction, new polished singing cage, packet of my extra special seed, 3/-; I can dispose of a few good catching Linnets, all well worked, used to nets, in full song, 2/- each; Goldfinches, English Peartree Goldfinches, all netted from the Cheshire frnit gardens, not foreign rubbish, 300 in stock; few large giants, well buttoned, good broad head, nicely tanned, long Yorkshire type, sure winners, 2/-; a few extra specials, 2/6; also a few Goldfinches, for catchers, used to nets, sure stoppers, in full song, 2/6. Large selection of Yellow Greenfinches, like Canaries, 1/-; grand Yellowhammers, 1/-; large Redpolls, 1/-. Over 500 splendid nestling Larks, real Cheshire Larks, all in full song, 1/-, 1/6; 200 house-moulted Larks, singing, 2/- each; 50 hand-reared young ones, all finger-tame, in full song, ready for contest singing, taught under the champion Lark of Cheshire. 2/6, with cage 3/6; or any other kind you require. Please write for Softbills or Hardbills of any other variety. Gentlemen, read what others say:—"September 2nd, 1909. William Moloney, Boot Merchant, 42, Vicarage-road, Watford.—Sir,—Glad to say the Linnets you sent me have proved champions, and I like them both. I enclose P.O. 2/6 to pay for the extra one instead of sending it back. Thanking you for the kind way you have treated my small order. If I or any of my friends want any more, will sure send along to you, as you are perfectly honest. Wishing you every success." "From Mr. Skelton, Brayton Station, Cumberland.—Sir,—Send me two real Peartree Goldfinches. The last I got from you two years ago is father of nine fine Mules. Wishing you every success." Gentlemen all I send out is on seven days' approval, cash or deposit. I am not a backyard dealer, so beware of imitators. Send to Matthews, Bird Specialist and Judge, 24, Avenue-st. Aviaries, Portwood, Stockport, Cheshire.

HARRY ALLEN.

Look, for over thirteen months I have not had one single bird returned to me; for proof, the Editor of this paper. I have supplied some of the finest and cleverest judges in the world with all kinds of British for exhibiting and singing, all on 7 days' approval. I take keen interest in my business, or I could not have shown this marvellous record. Exhibitors, look out for my A1 specials shortly. Ladies and gentlemen, I have the following for sale: Look, real English pear-tree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, beautiful wing bars and nicely tanned on breast, with grand broad head and breaking into splendid colour, 2/- and 2/6; Linnets, singing grand and very steady, in show condition, with polished cage and my book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6; Linnets, singing grand, with new cage and my book of secrets, 2/6; Linnets that have been hung with the champion Linnet of the world for two months, 1/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world; without a doubt they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest, 1/- each; Larks, singing nice and loud, in show condition and very steady, 1/- and 1/6, a few toppers, 2/6. My new book of secrets, it tells you how they sing at contests and the Linnet rules, and how to save Greypates and Goldfinches from dying when wild caught, price 9d. Six packets of my special mixture, 1/-. Please read what others say:—"Fairview, Milton, Weston-super-Mare.—The two Linnets you sent came duly to hand; they are two nice birds and are doing well; one has begun to sing.—Yours truly, W. Bennett to H. Allen." "26, Winchfaur, Heolgerrig, nr. Merthyr Tydvil. Dear Sir,—I received the bird safely and I think it is the best bird that I have received from any bird specialist; please send me another Linnet as soon as you can.—Yours truly, Thomas Perrin to H. Allen." "7, Gordon-terrace, Westgate, Driffield, Yorks. Dear Sir,—I received bird on Saturday morning all right. I am highly satisfied with same.—Yours truly, T. Brown to H. Allen." "1, Office-row, Barrington, Coll., Bedlington, Northumberland. Dear Sir,—I received birds all right and am very pleased with them; the Goldfinch is a nice-looking bird, as is the Linnet. I have written to the Editor to send you your money.—Yours truly, R. Harrison to H. Allen." Only honest dealing done here. All my birds are on 7 days' approval, cash or deposit, so please state wants and write with confidence to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, bird specialist and judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

MY SYSTEM.

On receipt of 2/6 with order will send one cock or two hens, Norwich or Yorkshires, balance of 2/6 when approved. The quality and exceptional value I offer is unapproachable; 7 years advertiser.—Edgar Broadbent, house decorator, Millhouse, Lime-street, Shellield, Yorks.

UNDENIABLE BARGAINS

1909 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions 5/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now to prove this, I offer to give six months approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms.

Other large birds at 4/3, 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick."

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs matched for Breeding, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6. Travelling Cages, 8d. extra.

Special to Mule Breeders

I visited Mr. Samuel Sperry's bird-room, 133, Curzon-street, Leicester, this breeding season, and was surprised to find he has got one of the best strains of Sib Canaries in England, warranted forty years inbred; he has bred a clear yellow Goldfinch Canary Mule, and one six-point Goldfinch-Canary Mule, and many lightly marked; can be seen any time. The reason I am doing this is because I am pleased with the hens he sold me, which are very good. I should advise all Mule breeders to give his strain a trial.—Yours, W. Lane, 2, Court A, Willow-st., Leicester.

Club Reports.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held September 4th, Mr. P. Whiteley in the chair. The place and classification for October 9th and November 13th shows were gone into. We have been able to secure St. George's School for the October show, which is more central than our old showroom, being about two minutes' walk from the Town Hall. Mr. King then gave his address on "Preparing for Exhibition," which proved very instructive, our members getting the benefit of his 25 years' experience as a successful exhibitor of both Canaries and British. After the address questions were asked which were quickly and ably answered by Mr. King.—J. CHAMBERS, hon. sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

At the monthly meeting, held September 3rd, a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Feeding and Moulting British Hardbills for Exhibition," was given before a good attendance by Mr. G. G. Henderson, who, in a clear and explicit manner, explained the advantages and disadvantages of the different kinds of seeds to the different species of Hardbills. After this a very interesting discussion took place, in which Messrs. Miller, Young, Campbell, and several others took part. Several questions were asked, and Mr. Henderson replied to them to the entire satisfaction of all. Mr. Maxwell (President), in moving a vote of thanks, touched on the fact of the fulness of detail in Mr. Henderson's lecture, and was sure, he said, that all present would be much enlightened by what they had heard. The meeting accorded a hearty vote of thanks, which Mr. Henderson suitably replied to. Classification for annual show was then arranged, and with such a splendid classification we are anticipating a splendid turn-out. New members may be enrolled up to 1st October. All members who have not yet completed annual subscriptions, I hope will do so at next meeting.—J. HENDERSON, Secretary.

RUNCORN C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held September 3rd at our splendid headquarters, Lea's Temperance Hotel. Mr. W. H. Cawley occupied the chair. We had a most encouraging muster of members, who soon got to work, compiling a schedule for our first old bird show, to be held in December; the date is not definitely fixed. As this is our first venture we think it desirable to hold only a members' show this year. Our membership radius is fourteen miles, which includes Chester, Liverpool and Birkenhead, and in passing we would ask intending members to send in their names at once. We are catering very liberally, having 37 classes in our schedule. Mr. H. Abbott, of Widnes, will judge. Our next meeting is October 1st, Friday, when Mr. J. Guy (a once noted Crest breeder, now a Norwich enthusiast) will give a washing demonstration. A rare treat is in store for those fortunate enough to be present. Mr. Guy is well known as a washer of birds, and will, in all probability, give some very valuable secrets away. This is the first time he has consented to give a washing exhibition at any meeting.—T. P. BAXTER, Hon. Sec.

CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

The club guarantees all show committees to whom they grant their support against any loss, exceeding 21s. on the entire section of Crests and Crestbreds. The following silver cups and bowls and cash specials are in competition for 1909-10, with their respective conditions: (1) The Roberts' £25 silver challenge cup for most points scored, and only one bird in each class to count. The four highest receive a gold, a silver and gold, a silver and a bronze medal, with a diploma for each. Only one bird in each class to count, to be won three times. (2) Silver challenge bowl, value £10 10s., for the best current year Crested Canary, to be won three times. Winner at Bristol, 1904, Messrs. Norwood Bros. Winner at L.C.B.A., 1905, Earl's Court, Mr. R. L. Crisp. Winner at Nottingham, 1906, Messrs. Norwood Bros. Winner at Norwich, 1907, J. Tyson. Winner at Gateshead, 1908, Mr. R. Armstrong. (3) Silver challenge bowl, value £10 10s., for the best current year Crestbred, to be won three times. Winner at Bristol, 1904, Mr. T. J. King. Winner at L.C.B.A., Earl's Court, 1905, Mr. G. Colledge. Winner at Nottingham, 1906, Mr. W. Glasscock. Winner at Norwich, 1907, Mrs. Crow. Winner at Gateshead, 1908, Mr. Bewick. The two £10 10s. bowls will be competed for at Cheltenham this season. There are ten specials, each value 21s., for the best current year Crest or Crestbred that has not previously won a first prize, and must be bred by the exhibitor. Purchased birds not eligible. No member can win more than one of these specials during the season, neither can he compete for any of the cash specials offered by the club at any show at which he may have won one of the 21s. specials. One of these will be offered at each of the undermentioned shows. A handsome plated teapot will be given to all novice members who win their three first prizes in any one show season. The following cash specials will be offered at a quantity of shows, viz.: 5s. for the best Crest not the property of 21s. special winners; 5s. for best Crestbred not the property of 21s. special winners; 2s. 6d. for second best Crest ditto; 2s. 6d. for the second best Crestbred ditto; 5s. for the best bull clear body, any coloured Crest; 5s. for best ditto Crestbred with dark or grizzle cap; 5s. for best Yellow Crest; 5s. for ditto Crestbred. Novice cash specials: 5s. for best Crest; 5s. for best Crestbred not the property of above at all shows, providing two novice Crest classes, i.e., one for Crests and one for Crestbreds. N.B.—There must not be less than four competing members in any one class for any of the club's specials, or they will be withheld, and according to the resolution carried at the last general meeting, all specials given for young or current year birds must be competed for by birds bred by exhibitor, purchased birds debarred. It is therefore absolutely necessary to make a declaration on your entry form (breeder or exhibitor) for all shows to be included in catalogue. Failure to comply with this condition will mean not only disappointment, but disqualification. Each of the following shows will receive the 21s. special, the Roberts' cup, and full cash specials:—Bristol, Cheltenham, Cambridge, L.C.B.A., Long Eaton, Manchester, Newcastle, Norwich, Nottingham, Plymouth, and Sunderland. Bournemouth has been allotted two 5s. cash specials only. The Roberts' cup will also be offered at Gateshead. Shows accepting our patronage must publish details in their schedules. Not less than eight classes must be provided.—J. S. CLARKE, Hon. Sec.

DARVEL O.S.

General meeting, held Sept. 14th, Councillor J. M. Cleland, President, in the chair. Secretary reported he had received offers to judge Norwich and Border, cage bird sections, from Mr. Jas. Brown (Sandford), and Jas. Johnston (Kilmarnock), and that he had appointed Mr. Johnston. He also reported on terms to be charged for hall for our proposed members' shows. After consideration these were allowed to drop in the meantime. Schedule of open show on Nov. 6th was finally read over and a few additions were made; it was agreed that specials for inclusion in same were to be handed in by next meeting. In order to have more space in large hall, it was agreed to enquire on what terms we could get lesser town hall for cage bird section. Agreed: "That we procure model prize cards as last year." Secretary was instructed to write local societies re hire of pens. Agreed: "That we solicit subscriptions as formerly," and collecting cards were handed out to collectors in various districts accordingly. Agreed: "That we hold next meeting the last week of September."—J. ROBERTSON, JUNR., Secretary.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

On Thursday, Sept. 2nd, members and friends met to hear Mr. H. J. Hawes' lecture upon "Bird-catching for Amateurs." In the unavoidable absence of the chairman, Mr. E. S. Lugg was elected to fill the post for the evening. In opening the proceedings he called upon the secretary to read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were duly read and confirmed. He then called upon Mr. Hawes for his lecture. Mr. Hawes said it gave him much pleasure to deliver his lecture. He proceeded to entertain his audience. It was one of the pleasantest evenings it has been our privilege to spend. He proved himself thoroughly conversant with the subject, and also proved his real love of the sport of catching birds, the many appliances and devices used proving beyond doubt humane. This showed that bird catching was not the cruel sport some would have us believe. After the lecture a short discussion followed, Mr. Hawes answering many questions, at the close of which Mr. Cunningham moved, and Mr. Cranfield seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to him, to which he briefly replied. The Secretary here reminded members of the meeting next month, when Mr. J. S. Clarke had promised to lecture on "The Crested Canary," asking them to make it known to fanciers so that we might get a big muster on that occasion. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Lugg for his services in the chair closed a most enjoyable evening.—W. HODSON, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held September 4th, Mr. J. Farrar presiding over a good attendance. Letters were read from the secretaries of the Crested Canary Club, English and Welsh B.F.C.C., and the Border F.C.C., stating that we had been granted their patronage for our annual show, November 19th and 20th. This makes seven specialist clubs who are supporting our show. The secretary brought on the question of putting on a class for foul cinnamons, and it was eventually moved by Mr. H. Gordon, seconded by Mr. J. Riseborough, and carried, that such a class be added. Two beautiful silver cups were on view, presented by Mr. P. Hunter (Bombay, India), and the fine workmanship evoked the greatest admiration, and the secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Hunter thanking him most heartily for his splendid specials. It was suggested that the larger of the two cups he presented for the best young bird shown by a member, and the smaller one for most points gained by a member in the open classes, both cups to be won twice in succession or three times in all. This is, of course, subject to the approval of the donor. Will those members who have not yet paid up kindly do so at once, in order that they may be able to compete for these specials? All monies have now been due for some weeks, and I would be very pleased to see all members clear on the books by the end of this month. This will remove all possible cause for complaint from fully-paid-up members, and will also enable them to compete for the many valuable specials.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

STIRLING AND DISTRICT O.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at Douglas Hotel, Mr. Simmers in the chair. After much discussion it was decided to withdraw two young Crest classes (which had been added earlier in the season), owing to poor reports from Crest breeders. It was also decided that we close membership next meeting night, first Saturday in October. Our radius is 10 miles east and south, and as far north and west, so that Stirling is the nearest club that fanciers can become members of. Membership fee, 2s. 6d., and all cage bird fanciers within the radius are invited to join.—G. BISLOP, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Our entry forms for the show are now in the hands of members. Each member is allowed to enter ten birds, as follows: Ten Scotch Fancies, or eight Belgians and two Scotch Fancies. You must not exceed two in each class, one to eight, and four in each class, nine and ten. It is quite optional whether birds are entered for sale or not. We sincerely hope members have had a successful breeding season, so that they will be able to give us a record entry to make a large and attractive show.—J. R. MEIKLE, Secretary.

DERBY CAGE BIRD CLUB.

Meeting held September 4th at the new quarters, the Derwent Hotel, London-road. We decided to hold our members' show on November 27th. There will be classes for old as well as for young birds. Mr. S. W. Birchley will give a limelight lecture in Derby during the winter on "The Birds of our Countryside," and the meeting will be held under the patronage of our club, time and place to be announced later. There will be a washing exhibition on October 30th at the club-room; it will be in the nature of a competition, details of which will be arranged at our next meeting, which is the night for paying up for the young bird classes. The washing exhibition will be a public one, when it is hoped there will be a good attendance of friends who are interested in the Fancy.—W. STEVENS, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.O.

Committee meeting, held at headquarters, the "Feathers," Great Chapel Street, Westminster, Aug. 26th. Present: Mr. Robson (chairman), Messrs. Maxwell, Trower, Askew, Newley, Silver, Dewhurst, Goodchild, Plumbridge, and Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. A letter was read from the Dulwich O.S. It was carried unanimously that the secretaries write to the members of the club who, it was alleged, had not received prize money won at the Dulwich O.S. show and forward names to the said club secretaries. A letter was read from Mr. Fullbrook, and the secretaries were instructed to answer same. An application for the club's patronage was read from Burton-on-Trent C.B.S., and a silver medal was granted. The time granted to Mr. S. W. Birchley to take further proceedings in the case of the alleged stalning of a Linnet at the Bristol Fanciers' Show having expired, and no further evidence having been received by the club, the following resolution was carried unanimously: "That the time given to Mr. S. W. Birchley to prove his innocence of the charge of exhibiting a stained Linnet at Bristol Fanciers' Show having expired, his name be erased from the books of the club until further notice." Notice was given that a discussion take place at the next meeting to consider the advisability of altering the position of the drinking hole in the club show cage. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE and CARR, Hon. Secs.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

In order that the secretaries of the various societies comprising the Union may have a complete list of members up to date, I desire to publish the following list of additional members who have been returned to me since our handbook was printed. Will all secretaries please cut out this list, and gum it in their own handbooks, in order that the new members may get schedules sent to them for the Union shows. Will any member of the Union who changes his address please drop me a post-card to that effect, so that it will ensure every member getting his ballot paper?—H. HILL, Secretary.

WELSH CAGE BIRD CLUB.

Committee meeting held recently at the Ship and Bell, Merthyr, the home of that renowned Scotch Fancy exhibitor, Mr. J. H. Jones, who also is the club's treasurer and ardent worker. Mr. D. H. Tedstone, the newly-elected chairman, took his seat for the first time in his new office. Needless to say he steered the meeting in a manner worthy of himself. In the absence of several committeemen, the proceedings had to be carried out by a few. Still, we were pleased with the presence of that well-known Norwich fancier, Mr. J. Pritchard, who always has the club's success at heart. The following were elected as members:—Messrs. Joshua Parfitt, J. J. Probert, J. Pritchard, and H. Mortimer (all of Abertillery, Mon.), H. Thomas and G. Evans (of Llandudno), and H. Williams (Post Office, Llangoed, Anglesea). The club's patronage was granted to the following: Swansea, Treharris, and Abertillery, cups and medals; Pontypridd and Maesteg, cups only. Will members kindly take note of this, saving much confusion? The secretary was instructed to write letters of sympathy to Mr. B. Davies in his family bereavement, and to Mr. T. L. Castree, who met with an accident. Will members note that the club show is to be held in Merthyr in November? I find that the show secretary is as busy as the "bee," gathering in specials, etc., and I trust the members will give him every encouragement. It is very gratifying indeed to find new members rolling in. Still there is room, and I shall be most pleased to hear from any fancier in North or South Wales who is anxious to joint the club.—G. T. JONES, Arfon House, Brecon.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a meeting held August 31st, Mr. H. Taylor (Vice-President) presided over a good attendance. The business commenced with Messrs. S. Warner, R. Wilkinson, and H. Broadbent being made members. A few more specials were promised, one being for best cock bird at our first show on October 9th, and another for our washing competition on Nov. 9th. Mr. S. Warner was elected Assist. Secretary, and the following gentlemen constitute the Management Committee: Messrs. W. North, R. Wilkinson, B. Wilman, W. Ketteringham, and J. Hodgson. It was decided we should have a tea and concert in January in connection with our prize distribution. A varied and interesting syllabus was then arranged including washing exhibition, judging, pairing, and washing competitions, and at each of these prizes will be given. We have made arrangements for a few good lecturers, and some of the best lecturers have been secured. It was also decided that the cup be at each show for the member who counts the most points with four highest birds. Any fancier desirous of joining the society should do so at the next meeting, or failing this, send in their name and address, as the first show is yet to be held, and any fancier joining before then will be able to compete for any of the prizes offered. The next meeting will be held on September 28th, the opening night of our winter syllabus.—F. GELDER, Secretary.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held September 1st, Mr. Burke (Vice-Chairman) in the chair. Messrs. A. E. Bishop (Worcester), and H. Wainwright having been elected members, the Secretary reported that the Norwich P.H. Club had given their patronage to Birmingham, subject to the classification being amended, which was agreed to; also that Mr. J. C. Barnes confirmed the engagement to judge Norwich classes, together with any other classes the committee might think necessary in order to relieve Mr. House (the other judge in the Canary section). Mr. J. A. Eckersley was unanimously elected President in place of Mr. Griggs (deceased). Mr. S. W. Birchley's letter was read, offering to give a lecture under our patronage, and same was accepted. Will fanciers kindly note that the subscription to end of year is only 2s., and that by joining at once they will be able to exhibit at our open show at a reduced fee, and that this will also entitle them to compete in the members' show to be held in January. The Society has secured the patronage of Norwich P.H. Club, National British Bird and M.C., and Midland Counties Y.C.C., and look to bird lovers in the Midlands to support them in their endeavours to make the Fancy still more popular. Any fancier wishing to become a member can be nominated at next meeting if he will kindly communicate with me. Eight amateur classes have been provided, including unflighted.—J. H. DE MAILLET, Hon. Sec.

The Shows.

TROON AND LOANS.

Troon and Loans cage bird show, held in the Unionist Hall in conjunction with poultry and pigeons. The birds were put somewhat too closely together, for want of accommodation, but Mr. A. Shaw, the secretary, and his committee did their best, and are to be congratulated on the event. Ayrshire fanciers distinguished themselves. Mr. John McLay (Kirkintilloch) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

Twitterings.

We must advise amateurs to send for Peterborough schedule.—(ADVT.)

Kindly note my change of address to 102, Station Cottages, Livingston, by Mid Calder, writes Mr. Thomas W. Peel.

Kindly note, writes Mr. J. H. Jowett, that I have removed from Wapping Works to 31, Westminster Road, Bradford, Yorks.

We had a successful show on August 28th, writes Mr. Andrew Shaw, the hon. secretary of the Troon and Loans Show. All prize money has been paid.

Kindly inform readers of CAGE BIRDS that I have removed from Caerleon Road to the Aviaries, 23, Caerleon Road, Newport, Mon., writes Mr. E. Jones.

We have decided to add a class for "foul Cinnamons" at our annual show, on November 19th and 20th, writes Mr. W. Reid, hon. secretary of the Sunderland C.B.A.

The Bournemouth and District C.B.A. has altered its show date to November 16th and 17th, from November 23rd and 24th, writes Mr. Montague E. Feltham, the hon. secretary.

All inquiries for schedules, writes Mr. W. Clarkson, secretary of the Burnley and Dis. C.B.S., will be supplied as soon as same are ready, and schedules will be sent to all last year's exhibitors at our show.

Mr. C. W. Law, 9, Oak Villas, Archway Road, Highgate, N., has been elected hon. secretary of the Highgate, Hampstead and Dis. C.B.S. in my place, writes Mr. G. H. Neal. All further correspondence should be addressed to him.

Kindly announce that Mr. G. H. Acton has resigned the secretaryship of the Reading and Dis. Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. W. H. Pyke, and that I have taken over the duties of secretary until the next annual meeting. All communications should be sent to me at 25, The Grove, Reading.

If any are desirous of becoming members of the Northern B.B.M. and F.B.C. (radius Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, Westmoreland), the subscription of 2s. 6d. to be paid by September 15th, will they communicate with me? writes Mr. J. Bertram, the hon. secretary, 95, Gainshro' Grove, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

May I further trespass upon your space for an opportunity of reminding bird lovers of the lecture by Mr. Richard Kearton on Thursday, the 16th inst., writes Mr. H. E. Tringham, hon. secretary of the London and Provincial O.S. I have been inundated with inquiries for tickets for this, and have still a few left at the time of writing. Country fanciers will receive a warm welcome on behalf of the society. My address is Old Barge House Wharf, Commercial Road, Blackfriars, S.E.

Our show is to be held on January 22nd, 1910, writes Mr. W. J. Beaglehole, secretary of the Brotton F.S., when Messrs. T. J. Ambrose and R. Cockburn will judge.

The Ayr and Dis. Cage Bird Club are busy looking after specials, and 21 have already been secured, writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, the secretary. So there should be a good list by the time the show takes place (8 weeks hence). Those members whose subscriptions are still unpaid are expected at the meeting on September 20th.

The balance-sheet of the City and Suburban A.C.B.'s Young Bird Show discloses a net loss on the exhibition of 17s.; but as against this there is an entry of £3 8s. 1d. in respect of special prizes, only 11s. 6d. of which was subscribed for privately, the remainder being provided for out of the funds of the association.

The last few numbers of CAGE BIRDS containing coloured plates, were worthy of every praise bestowed upon them, writes Mr. A. G. Boardman (North Fitzroy, Australia), and especially that issue containing also an art supplement (with our "send-off" to Mr. Elliott reported in it). The fanciers here in Melbourne had all the copies of "C.B." it was possible to get.

We have the patronage of the Southern Yorkshire C.C. (both cup and trophy) Southern Yorkshire novice patronage, Border Fancy, C.C. patronage, and also medals from Yorkshire Canary Club for competition amongst the members of the Y.C.C. residing outside Yorkshire, writes Mr. J. Houghton, secretary of the Gloucester and Dis. C.B.S.

On behalf of Mr. Bullions, secretary of the Glasgow and Dis. Derby, and of myself, secretary of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A., I have to record our appreciation of the advertisements which appeared in CAGE BIRDS. They were well worth the money. We are convinced that your columns are the best advertising medium. CAGE BIRDS is read by every real fancier.—THOS. SMITH (Glasgow).

At the last meeting of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club it was pointed out that the societies which had been granted the club's patronage, six in all, had been granted it on the condition "that they refuse to receive entries from the expelled members of our society, viz., Messrs. P. McQuiston and M. Craig," and that failing the fulfilment of this condition their patronage would be withdrawn.

We were favoured last week with a visit from Mr. Winter, the popular and capable hon. secretary of the Scottish National Cage Bird Society. Mr. Winter had just returned, with his wife, from a very pleasant holiday at Southsea, and was making the round of the London sights. He informed us that he had great hopes of the forthcoming Scottish National Show being a bigger success than ever.

Having been away on holiday, and my birds being simply a hobby which I try to make pay its way, I have received an enormous number of letters re advertisements. I wish to apologise through CAGE BIRDS (the paper to which I am solely and alone indebted for the large number of customers I have on my books, and which are increasing weekly), for the unavoidable delay in answering letters and forwarding birds.—ARTHUR O'NEIL, Carlisle.—(ADVT.)

After 22 years living in the South of England and working hard to push the Fancy, having for this last 10 years paid special attention to the Lancashire Canary in trying, not without success, to make it popular in the South, I am now, writes Mr. F. J. Green, late of Redhill, Surrey, removed back northwards, to 54, Frederick Street, Loughborough, Leics., where I hope to meet many new fanciers and still make the fame of the Lancashire more widespread. I should like to thank you for the many kindnesses you have shown me since your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, came into existence.

Lack of time prevents me at present, writes Mr. W. Woodley (Plymouth), whose clear buff Yorkshire Canary is depicted on our front page this week, from giving you a few notes on the management, etc., of my birds, but at some future date, possibly I may be able to do so. I have, I may however say, bred birds for 50 years, but for the last 15 I have devoted myself to the Yorkshire, and can honestly say that some of the finest specimens of the variety have passed through my hands. The bird in question took a second prize at Plymouth, and 1st at the Three Towns Fanciers Society.

Mr. C. Edwards (Bromley, Kent), whose variegated Yorkshire Canary appears on our front page this week, writes in reference to same as follows: I have been successful with the bird both on the show bench and in the breeding cage, he having been 1st at Deptford and Greenwich, 2nd at the Horticultural Hall, 2nd at the Crystal Palace, 1st at Battersea, and 1st at Tonbridge, etc. His father also was 1st at the Crystal Palace (novice section). He is bred from two Yellows, although he came very good in feather, I find that as a rule they come rather scanty in feather, and no doubt the correct way is yellow and buff, and I have bred some nice youngsters from him. As regards feeding, I believe in plain feeding. I use for feeding young thin "Social" biscuits, and a small piece of bread (soaked) and egg well mixed together. After the young are three days old I give them plenty of green food and hemp and rape seed. For colour-feeding I use more biscuit and bread with the egg and colour-food, and a little linseed with the Canary seed. When the shows are on I give mixed seed three times a week, and on other days boiled carrot or apple. I find by reading CAGE BIRDS regularly every week (and I have not missed a single copy since the first number), one is sure of success, and I am also sure the cage bird Fancy owes its growth to its guidance.

Will all members of the East Ham F.S. kindly note that there will be "Linnet-Mule" class for young stock show? Also that only this year's birds will be allowed to be shown in classes under the heading of British birds in the schedule for young stock show.—H. RUTTER, hon. secretary.

The subscriptions of the Lancashire Canary Association are now due, writes Mr. Wm. Adams, the secretary. Owing to the extra 12 silver medals that are given and to societies getting schedules ready, we should be obliged if those who cannot attend the meeting at the Great Eastern Hotel, Yorkshire Street, on September 11th, would send the subscriptions on as early as possible; then we should be in a position to allot some of these medals to several of the early shows. We should also be pleased to hear from anyone who desires to give one of the society's medals as a special, and also the names of any new members.

It is proposed to hold a First Feather Show in connection with the Newton P. and Canary Club (Auckland, New Zealand), at about Christmas-time, which is a new feature here, writes a New Zealand correspondent. The show-cages are all the property of the club, but it is suggested that a larger cage be procured, and that every member should buy his own. Under the present arrangement the exhibitors bring along the birds the night before the show, and are given their schedule as they enter the door, and with the numbers of their cages written on; the cages then are (supposed) all ready in their place on the bench for the reception of the birds. The cages are all one pattern with bow front, for all varieties. We are on the eve of the breeding season, and great expectations are in the minds of a few of us. Unfortunately such are not always realised.

Respecting the picture of my Redwing, which you thought worthy of a place on the front of CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. S. L. Cocks (Peterborough), I may say that Cardiff was the last show he went to under my name, as he went direct from there to a fancier in South Wales. Previous to that he was 3rd Peterborough, 3rd at Battersea, and 1st and special at Swansea. He was never out of the money, the chief difficulty being to find a show where the large Softbill class would stand. I found the majority cancelling them. I fed him upon Spratt's Biscuit Meal and Brand's Meat Meal (for poultry), it having also the clearings-up from the smaller Softbills, and I found that he wanted very little else. He never went out of condition once during the time he was in my possession, and was kept in a box cage 20ins. by 18ins. by 18ins. He had a bath every day. I wish CAGE BIRDS further success.

A washing exhibition will be given by Mr. J. Bailey, of Yorkshire fame, at Lockhart's cafe, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on September 17th, at 7.30 o'clock, writes Mr. T. C. Crawball, secretary of the Northern Yorkshire C.C. Mr. Bailey will commence by washing a few birds, so that those who intend coming should be there to time. Then he will give hints on the proper staging of Yorkshires, and their preparation for show. The Northern Yorkshire Club extends a cordial invitation to all fanciers to see this exhibition by one of the masters of the art.

CAGE BIRDS' "LADDER OF PROGRESS" COMPETITION.

After a very long and careful addition of the number of names and addresses sent in, and the constant checking and re-checking of the figures with a view to avoiding any possible error, we have at last arrived at the result of our "Ladder of Progress" Competition. The number of competitors greatly exceeded our expectations.

The Competition consisted in securing the largest total of names and addresses of keepers of cage birds who had never previous to the time of the competition had a copy of CAGE BIRDS brought to their notice. We offered to send a beautiful coloured picture post-card for every genuine signature sent in to us (which has been done), and in addition offered three prizes, viz., £4 (cash), for the first, £1 (cash) for the second, and a handsome pair of framed plates of birds for the third.

MR. J. HENNERY LEWIS,
Parkside, Owestry.

SECOND PRIZE.
MR. CHAS. CRAIG,
4, Wardlaw Terrace,
Edinburgh.

THIRD PRIZE.
MR. WM. ROBERTS,
55, Haywood St.,
Shelton,
Stoke-on-Trent.

The gentleman who has won the first prize of £4 succeeded in collecting no less than 472 signatures; the winner of the second prize of £1 sent us 156 signatures, and the third prize winner's total was 144.

This result is subject to protests and objections, which must be lodged with the Editor of CAGE BIRDS within seven days of the date of this issue. Another seven days will be allowed to elapse for the consideration of these protests and objections, if any are received, after which the final result will be announced and the prizes forwarded to the winners.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds."

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.U.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

An Unfortunate Slip.

"Vestro."—Your bird should have its perches placed rather low, and in such a position that it can hop from one to another with the greatest ease, and also reach its food and water comfortably. If food and water are outside, it would be as well to put a little food inside as well for a week or two until the bird is able to get about more freely. Keep it as quiet as possible, and avoid causing it to flutter about. The limb should be fairly well knit in a month, but do not tamper with it out of curiosity. Beyond keeping the bird quiet, and making its movements as easy as possible, leave the cure to Nature, and judge of its progress by the resumption of the bird's activity. Feed on a staple of plain Canary, and give separately a pinch of summer rape each day, twice a week a few grains of hemp, and on two other days each week a scrap of bread and milk sprinkled over with maw seed. Give a little green food daily, more or less as appears to be necessary to keep bird regular in habit during inactivity.

An Ailing Youngster.

S. E. Baker.—I suspect the food is at fault, though you give me no idea what it consists of. As a staple give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and separately twice a week a pinch of hemp, every second day a pinch of maw, and on the alternate days between the maw a small piece of bread scalded with milk, pressed nearly dry, with two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped about it, and sprinkled over with soft sugar. Give no green food until quite recovered, but a bit of banana occasionally as a substitute will do no harm. Keep cage and perches quite clean, and the floor strewn with clean gritty sand. See the bird is not exposed to draughts or chills. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of syrup of rhubarb for two consecutive days, and after that twenty drops of whisky, and four of tincture of opium in its water for a few days until the looseness is removed. Finally, give four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid for a few days. Keep the bird fairly warm, as it is very probable it may drop into moult very soon.

Rather Too Prolific.

Old King Cole.—Seeing your hens have, according to your letter, already had five nests each this year, I think you should certainly remove and cage separately the cocks at once until the moult is over, when you might again return them. By this time the hens would probably have lost some of their ardour in the nesting business. But to be quite on the safe side, as the hens are clearly unusually prolific, it would be best to keep the cocks away until next Spring, and during the interval, if caged separately, in an unheated room for preference, would serve the purpose of songsters. If the hens remain well and active, there is no reason why they should not breed successfully next season if the cocks are taken away now to prevent their going on making attempts at breeding all through the winter, which hens of this kind are apt to do as long as the weather keeps the least bit favourable. I have no doubt the reason you have not had better results in the number of young reared is that the aviary is a good deal overcrowded. One cock and two hens are quite sufficient to stock this aviary, so you will see that one of the hens and the five British birds were superfluous and did actually diminish your chance of getting good results.

Undesirable Guests.

Bird Lice.—It is the so-called grey louse with which your birds are infested. Provided the birds have not started moulting and you possess the requisite knowledge and skill to perform the operation, the quickest way to eradicate them would be to hand wash the birds and add a teaspoonful of creolin to the first basin of water, and whilst the birds are drying, clean out the usual cages, wash well with warm soda and water and carbolic soap. This, however, is not advisable if the moult has commenced. As an alternative, see the cages are well cleaned as just advised, then take each bird separately and blow into its feathers by means of a small puff, or bellows, a liberal dose of pyrethrum powder, roll the bird in an handkerchief, leaving only the beak free, and lay it down in a safe place—inside a cage with the door closed is the safest—for five to ten minutes, then liberate it, and after it has shaken itself well, return it to its own cage. Each day afterwards, for a week or so, give a bath and to each pint of water add a small teaspoonful of essence of quassia, or you might add a teaspoonful of the chips to each half-pint of water overnight, and allow them to soak in it until next day, then give the water in the baths. This should thoroughly eradicate them in a short time.

Norwich Gone Wrong.

"Lucky."—Am afraid this bird has not been treated properly, and most likely he has also been exposed to great fluctuations of temperature, or to a much lower one generally than he was previously accustomed to. Keep him now in a comfortable temperature, not necessarily very warm, but still not on the cold side; see he is perfectly free from draughts, and that the temperature is fairly equable night and day. Also see the atmosphere where it is kept is pure and fresh. Feed on a diet of plain Canary only as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and for the first week only a small piece of bread and milk daily. Make latter by soaking a bit of stale bread in cold milk for a few minutes, press nearly dry, sprinkle with a small pinch of maw and soft sugar, and drop three drops of cod liver oil emulsion about it. After the first week give the bread and milk every second day only, and limit diet to these items, with a little green food, or bananas as a substitute, every second day for a month. Stop all other foods and medicines. In the drinking water add six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and after this give twenty drops of whisky, five of tincture of lobelia, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid. Shall be glad to have report of progress at end of fortnight.

Two from the States.

U.S. Canary.—(1) I should not expect the best diet for Canaries in the Northern States differs materially from what is best for our English birds, save that, perhaps, a slightly more liberal allowance of rape might be given, and a little more hemp; say, about a third part of the bulk of rape, or a staple mixture of two parts Canary, one part rape, and a half-part hemp. In addition, you might give a small quantity of egg food or bread and milk once or twice a week, and green food, or sweet fruit when green stuff is out of season, daily in summer, diminishing to three times a week in winter. (2) The lameness may be due to simple foot soreness, even though the feet do not appear sore. What do you use in the cages as a covering for the floor, and what kind of wood are the perches made of? If the sand is very coarse and sharp, or unwashed sea-sand, or the perches too hard, this may account for the apparent lameness and must be remedied before the effect can be permanently removed. Try bathing the feet and legs in a warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid dissolved in half a teacupful of warm water once or twice a week for a fortnight or so; dry gently, and smear them slightly with a little zinc ointment. If this is not effectual, write again.

Mysterious Losses.

No Name.—Your description reads very much like septic fever, but it is certainly curious the deaths should occur with such amazing regularity. I can only account for it by the supposition that the birds were caged separately side by side, and the infection spread from day to day from the occupant of one cage to that of the next, or that you unconsciously spread it yourself by mixing up food or water vessels, or both. In case the remaining bird dies, I would strongly advise you to send it for a post-mortem in order to set at rest all doubts on the matter. Or even if its lives, and remains apparently healthy, I would advise you to test the room and cages before introducing any more valuable birds by keeping one or two of the commonest and cheapest Canaries you can get in them, and see if they become affected in, say, a month or so. Should they do so, get a post-mortem upon one. As you say all your cages, food, and appliances are kept perfectly clean, it seems probable you might have introduced the disease among your birds by a fresh purchase, or by some appliance, if you have been making any such additions of late. In any case, you should, as a precautionary measure, most thoroughly disinfect the room, cages, and all appliances, but for your own satisfaction I think it would be a wise plan to test them as just mentioned before proceeding with the disinfection. For the most effective method of carrying out the latter work you should consult Dr. Clarke's brochure on "Septic Fever," which our manager would send you for 7d., post free.

Canary with Diarrhœa.

G. Hampson.—Why did you not give at least some slight idea how you fed and treated the bird? It should be quite obvious to anyone that in a case of this kind the food and treatment may have a very distinct bearing on the ailment. Withhold green food until the trouble is removed, and give as a substitute a bit of banana about every second day. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only, and every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed and a few grains of hemp. A little dry crushed biscuit may also be given each day for a week or so. Limit diet solely to this until diarrhœa is stopped. For one day give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and six drops of syrup of rhubarb in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, and after this give twenty drops of whisky, five of tincture of gentain, and five of laudanum, in the water two days in every three until trouble is removed. When a cure is effected, give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day for a week. See that all food and water are quite pure and free from contamination of any kind. If any doubt exists about the water, give only that which has been boiled. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean. It would be well to use pine sawdust in cage to absorb moisture, and burn it when removed. Give a supply of clean gritty sand in a tin if you employ sawdust in cage.

Old and Young Dying.

J. A. Ford.—Your method of feeding requires some correction, and it is probable this is the cause of your losses. But still, I would advise you to get a post-mortem examination upon the next that dies, in order to be quite satisfied whether or not it is septic fever, and in the meantime introduce no fresh birds and keep your stock under strict isolation. Observe the utmost cleanliness in cages, food, water and all appliances. Use pine sawdust in the cages instead of sand, and burn it at once when removed. Give a supply of grit in a tin. Boil all food and water vessels that will bear such treatment for a few minutes twice a week, and if the water is not quite above suspicion, use only that which has been boiled. Should a post-mortem reveal the presence of septic fever, get Dr. Clarke's handbook on the subject, 7d., post free, from our manager, and digest its contents. Continue the staple diet of Canary seed, but give a little summer rape daily, and a few grains of linseed twice a week only, and then only a few grains per bird. I suspect you have been too liberal with this seed, and have certainly been giving it too frequently. When the moult is quite finished you might well withhold it altogether and substitute a little hemp instead. Three times a week give a little maw whilst the moult is in progress, and twice a week a little bread scalded with milk, pressed nearly dry, and dusted with soft sugar and a pinch of maw. Give a supply of plantain stalks, seedy chickweed, and shepherd's purse three or four times a week for green food. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, for three consecutive days, and after that give four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Stopped Singing.

A. H. Earlsfield.—If you had given me some idea as to its age, and its present condition, that is, whether it appears in good health or not, and whether plump or thin, I should have been the better able to advise. At the present time the bird should be moulting again, and therefore you cannot expect it to resume singing for several weeks to come, even if it begins before the Spring, which is doubtful. However, keep the bird in a comfortable temperature, quite free from draughts and great variation of heat, but still in a position where the air is always pure and fresh. Examine cage carefully to see it is free from red mites; keep it and the perches quite clean, and strewn with clean gritty sand. Feed as advised "Lucky" for a month, but give bread and milk every second day only from the beginning, and only add the cod liver oil to it once a week. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards twenty drops of chemical food every third day. Report progress in a month and refer to this reply, and if the bird is not better, give the particulars asked for above to enable me to form a better opinion of what is wrong.

Hen Taken Ill.

S.J. (Chester).—Your hen was seized with an epileptic fit, which was undoubtedly helped on by the extra drain on the system caused by the moult. A bird is not necessarily having a very bad time of it when moulting because it loses its feathers nearly all together, and becomes "almost naked." Provided the birds are well cared for and protected from chills this is usually a good sign, but when these precautions are neglected, it is apt to bring about a serious result. Your feeding is not very good. See reply to "Lucky," and feed bird for a month as therein described, with this exception: You must give the bread and milk every second day right away from the first, and only add the cod liver oil to it twice a week. Also give a little green food every day. Keep cage scrupulously clean, well provided with gritty sand, and see it is not infested with red mites. The latter may probably be a contributory cause to the bird's condition. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops each tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid. Should another fit occur, stop these medicines for three or four days, and give instead as much bromide of potash as will cover a sixpence in each two tablespoonfuls of water on each of those days, and then drop this and give the above-named medicines again as advised.

Brevities.

A Lancashire Query (E. G. Calvados).—No; Lancashires are not invariably self coloured. Ticks and marks are bred occasionally, but cannot be regarded as a very common occurrence in comparison with other popular breeds, and when they do occur it is rather as grizzled or grey feathers than the usually understood markings. I should rather doubt the purity of a bird that sported a green crest, and suspect that it contained an appreciable proportion of Crest blood, unless, indeed, in your locality more encouragement had been given to markings in this variety. I believe Blackston says somewhere that dark crested coppies might, and probably would, be bred, though probably not in Lancashire.

A Reputed Cure (Nemo).—Says he has cured a Norwich which was ill, like the birds of some of our correspondents, after many remedies had failed by giving eight drops of tincture of aconite in the water, and a sprinkling of flowers of sulphur in a little egg food until it was well. But as he does not seem to know what was wrong with it beyond that it went light and had diarrhœa, and I have not sufficient data to enable me to make a fair guess even what the mischief was, I cannot advise readers to follow a blind example. This powerful poison has been credited with working marvellous cures in cases where, curiously enough, no one knew authoritatively what was the matter. The explanation probably lies in the fact that the birds were given better attention, and some of them had sufficient strength and stamina to throw off the ailment in spite of the treatment, and would probably have recovered just as well with no treatment at all, save the extra attention to general hygiene and management.

Two Youngsters.

Porthite.—The striped appearance of the young Linnet is due entirely to its age; it is the bird's nestling plumage, in fact. Young hen Linnets are generally more heavily marked than the young cocks. The same remarks apply to the young Lesser Redpoll. Neither bird will be any good for show purposes until it has moulted and assumed its adult plumage, which should take place very shortly now. Of course, it is well to choose a heavily pencilled young bird when having an eye to its future appearance on the show bench; it must also be a big, bonny youngster, and, above all, possess a bold, wide head. Without the latter, it will be useless (more-or-less) as a show specimen. If your two birds will eat a little soft-food, even a little of a good insectivorous mixture, you could give them a pinch of tasteless pepper in it to help the colour.

A Quartette.

Clarendon.—1: Glycerine is used by the majority of fanciers to put in the water used for spraying exhibition specimens. It is perfectly harmless and allowable. Sometimes, however, it is abused, and the bird it is used upon spoiled. This happens through its being used too strong. If the bird is hand-washed, this should be done five or six days before the show. Each day afterwards the bird should be sprayed with the glycerine and water, the proportion being one good teaspoonful of glycerine thoroughly mixed into one pint of water which has been previously boiled. The sprayer should be one with a nozzle which emits the water like mist and not in the form of a jet; further, the bird should not be drenched, but only lightly sprayed. Three or four sprayings serve to get up the "sheen" on the plumage very nicely. If too much glycerine is used the feathers get "clogged," and will not lie properly, this especially being the case round the neck of the bird. Two or three are both covered in the foregoing answer. 4: For the seed-eaters, seed is the more frequently used as a covering for show-cage bottoms; some use oat husks. For Softbills, sawdust (this is an abomination, in my opinion), damped cocoa-nut fibre, or peat-moss dust, (obtainable from florists), or blotting paper are variously used. To my own way of thinking, a sheet or two of blotting paper cut to fit tightly into the cage bottoms is very bad to beat for use in show-cages of all kinds. Of course, proper provision must then be made for the food.

In an Aviary.

T.C.W.—Your outdoor "aviary" is very tiny indeed; many fanciers have their flight cages twice as large. A "house" 3 ft. long by 2 ft. 9 in. wide by 4 ft. high, can only be termed a "toy" house, and the outside flight 3 ft. 6 in. long merits the same description. It would not hold many birds in any case, while for Mule breeding a few hen Canaries and one or two cock Finches would be all you could turn in with any chance of success. I should not like to keep a Thrush in such a place along with smaller birds; they can be very spiteful when they choose, especially if they have been previously in a cage by themselves. I do not know what part of the country you hail from, but even in the sheltered position you describe I expect the birds would find the severe winter weather somewhat trying. It would be an excellent little "flight" to hold a few birds during the summer and autumn, anyway. Some of the tiny Foreign Finches are very hardy, and breed fairly freely; would these meet your views?

From a Beginner.

Leslie Vestre.—1: It is undoubtedly the best, both for song and in the interests of universal peace, to keep Finches caged singly. When in high singing condition, most species get pugnacious and apt to bully their companions. Still, 5ft. 6ins. is a good size for a cage, and in it you can certainly keep the seven Finches you specify. You could, in fact, add a second cock Goldie, and one or two more cock Linnets; but keep Chaffinch and Bramblefinch down to one of each, and even then you may find it necessary to remove one or the other of them. You will certainly get some song from the Linnets and the Goldies. 2: Yes; you could keep your cock Canaries in another such cage. You may get one or two pugnacious individuals amongst them, however. Cock Canaries can fight like game-cocks when so disposed. 3: This is answered in the above. 4: Siberian Goldies would do just as well as British, but Mules are not to be recommended, for they can be very vicious and tiresome towards companions. I hardly think Linnet and Redpoll Mules are so bad in this respect, however, as Goldfinch, Greenfinch and Siskin Mules. 5: You need not fear "disease" if the birds are healthy when obtained, and are kept clean and properly fed. You must, though, at once remove any ailing bird, and cage it alone.

Two Thrushes.

Ignorant Woman.—It does not matter at all aout a bird going "almost bare" when it is moulting. In fact, it is a good sign rather than the contrary, for it denotes that the bird is experiencing no difficulty in getting rid of its old feathers, and is in a fair way to complete its moult quickly and well. It is necessary, of course, that such a bird should be kept out of all draughts, and in a protected (from the cold) place. Softbills are very apt to moult in this way. The Thrush, which "sneezes" frequently, may have a touch of cold, and a harmless and effective remedy is to thoroughly mix a tablespoonful each of honey and glycerine, and to stir a teaspoonful of this into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water for several days (fresh daily, of course). Do not use the refined (clear) honey. As regards the other matter, I feel quite sure the mice are at the root of the trouble. It is well known that the presence of mice is inimical to the well-being of birds, and you certainly ought to stop them from getting into the cages of your birds and eating all their food up during the night. No wonder the Thrush dashes about during the night! Cannot you fill up the mouse holes with a mixture of broken glass and plaster of paris; or put the cages where the little pests cannot get into them; or let the mice have a meal or two of virus? The latter would soon put paid to their account.

About a Hoopoe.

Inquirer.—If your Hoopoe is an adult-caught specimen, then I do not think you will ever get it to eat artificial food (that is, the prepared soft-bill mixture of biscuit, etc.). This is the great drawback to the keeping of this species. You will have to provide it with mealworms and whatever other suitable live-foods you can obtain (small garden worms, beetles, gentles, wasp grub, etc., are all relished). Otherwise you will find the bird "go light" and die. It is a hard job to get even the hand-reared Hoopoes to eat artificial food; their manner of feeding, for one thing, is against them. My own I gave scalded "Melox" reduced to the consistency of paste with a good quality insectivorous food. This I made into pellets (either round or oblong), and gave in a deep jar (an old honey-pot). Whatever was left over each day I fed to my Thrush, or Magpie, or Waxwing. I have had a good number of Hoopoes, and though very beautiful and interesting, I found they required a great deal of attention, and time bestowing on them. I never had one which damaged its beak. The cage should be very large, allowing of a "fly" being taken from end to end. There must be a big sand-heap in it (4 to 6 inches deep), for the birds to dust and play about in. They never seem to drink or bathe, but all mine seemed delighted to be sprayed lightly now and again. They raised regular sand-storms afterwards! With all their faults I loved them, as the poet puts it, They would walk all over me, get into my coat sleeves, and play all sorts of pranks.

Keeping Linnets.

A.G.D.—Evidently the two birds had inflammation of the bowels. I expect they will be dead when you read this reply. It is no use writing for advice, or commencing to treat birds, when they are sitting huddled up in a corner of the cage bottom. They are then three-parts dead. Treatment should commence immediately they are observed to sit looking "puffy" (that is, loose in feather), and dull of eye. A complete change of diet (say, on to niger, maw, and wild seed mixture), with a dose or two of saline medicine (as much Epsom salts as will lie on a shilling in two tablespoonfuls of water) or ten to twelve drops of tincture of rhubarb, will then often serve to put them right. You appear to be putting fresh-caught Linnets direct on to dry, hard seed, a practice I am often warning fanciers against, as this often serves to set up internal trouble, with ensuing inflammation and diarrhœa. They should have a very free supply of seeding shepherd's-purse, chickweed, and plantain to commence with. Soaked seed can easily be prepared. Some of the stock mixture can be left in cold water through the night, and be shaken as dry as possible in a towel in the morning, when it is ready to give to the birds. My own "tit-bit" seed mixture is made up as follows: Thistle, dandelion, lettuce, plantain, gold of pleasure, and sesame, half a pound of each, cornflower and wild mustard a quarter-pound of each. This makes a good quantity and is somewhat expensive (thistle, dandelion, and cornflower being dear), but there is no waste, and, of course, the quantities of each seed can be reduced. I sometimes add niger and maw to it; also occasionally bought some "wild seed mixture"; it is the screenings from threshing machines, and very cheap.

Brevities.

Breeding Goldfinches (No Nom-de-plume).—I hope you will succeed in breeding Goldfinches in a cage. You could try a pair of house-moulted birds, if you choose, but I should personally think two of this season's young birds (Greypates) would be even more likely to bring you success, and they would certainly be less expensive. Get British Finches, by all means.

The Broken Melody (J.H.).—It is not true that if two Linnets are kept in the same room neither will sing. I often have a dozen close together, and they one and all sing stoutly. I should think the explanation is that your bird has ceased singing, because he is falling into moult (it is quite time he did so). When the moulting process has been satisfactorily completed you will get plenty of song once again.

Two Birds (In Doubt).—I. All the Chat family have the habit of "see-sawing" the tail when they alight on a perch. Your description favours the Stonechat in all except size; this bird is but about half the size of a Robin. If it looks as though it has a black (or a speckled brownish-black) hood upon its head, then it is certainly the Stonechat. If not, then it is the Whinchat (a somewhat larger bird). You should get the coloured plate of them which was published by CAGE BIRDS; then you could easily decide. 2. You must say whether you mean the Lesser or the Greater Whitethroat.

About a Nightingale (T.M.).—If you will put to me in the form of questions the points upon which you desire information, I shall be pleased to answer them. We have published many good articles which deal more fully with the Nightingale than I could possibly do here. You should get the numbers of CAGE BIRDS containing those written by Mr. Houlton and Mr. Jeffrey. The temperature of an ordinary living-room is quite sufficient for any Nightingale in the winter, though the cage should be covered whenever the temperature is likely to fall very low in the night.

Goldfinches in Outdoor Aviary (Mixture).—A good seed mixture for Goldfinches kept in an outdoor aviary would be: Hemp and teazle, three pints of each; canary, two pints; linseed, one pint; charlock and summer rape, a quarter-pint of each. It would really be better, however, to give a daily feed of hemp in a separate dish, as Goldies are so fond of it that they scatter about and waste the other seeds trying to find this particular dainty. Quantity, of course, to be regulated according to the number of birds. They should have occasional feeds of sunflower, niger, maw, wild seed mixture, etc., in addition, likewise thistle heads and the other wild seeding plants.

An Indoor Aviary (P.L.D.).—An indoor aviary of the ground space you specify would comfortably hold two dozen birds; perhaps one or two more if kept scrupulously clean. You could put in any members of the Finch family (this includes the Buntings), except the Crossbill, perhaps, though one odd bird of this species might do no harm. It would probably be better to keep cocks only (the hen Canaries could remain, however). If you have cocks and hens, see that the sexes are equal—not two cocks to one hen, or vice versa. Have only one cock Chaffinch, and one cock Bramblefinch in the place, also one cock Yellowhammer. Sanitary distemper is equal to anything for the inside walls and woodwork. Shrubs in boxes, etc., are apt to get soiled, but privet, box, holly, and the like, can all be tried.

A Disastrous Journey (C.L.H.).—Birds will die far more quickly from the want of water than from the want of food, and a twenty-four hour journey by rail, without water, I can well believe would end a Nightingale, especially if the weather at the time was hot and stifling. Softbills should be packed in boxes with gauze tacked over the wired front, or with holes cut in the sides and covered with perforated zinc (the kind used by fanciers to make egg graters). Then they can see whatever food, etc., is placed inside for them.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Treatment for Virginian 'Gale.

St. John.—These are fine, active, and restless birds and need a roomy cage if they are to do well. It should not be less than 24 by 18 by 18in., and the perches should be so arranged that the bird will not damage its plumage against sides, top, or back of cage. Diet: Seeds, Canary, millet, hemp, oats, and sunflower, soft food (see advt. cols.), ripe fruit, green food, and a few live insects daily. Mealworms usually have to be the mainstay for live food, but beetles, cockroaches, smooth caterpillars, spiders, gentles, wasp grubs, etc., are all appreciated. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage, and make some provision for it to have a bath daily, outside its cage for preference. This is a strong and robust species, and providing its cage is large enough to allow the bird to take exercise, it will not need to be kept in a heated room, but it must be protected against draught.

Grey Parrot Sickly.

Aden.—I do not think there is anything seriously wrong with your bird. Give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water for one day, taking away the drinking water overnight, and then the bird will be ready to drink heartily of the prepared water when supplied. Only give this for one day. Put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food for at least a month, well colouring the drinking water with same. Diet: Seed mixture, Canary, wheat, dari, hemp, oats, sunflower seeds in about equal parts. Also supply ripe fruit; you will find apple and pear cores readily eaten, plain biscuit and a few nuts (shelled walnuts are best). Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. As it is so tame and friendly, it would be well to let it come out of its cage a little, at such times as you can keep it under observation, and see that it does not sample your furniture. If it should become worse or very drowsy, you had better repeat query at once with full details.

Treating a Grey.

Anxious.—The dark bird is much younger than your light-coloured specimen, and after the moult it may possibly be twelve months before all the large feathers are reproduced, unless you draw some of the stumps, but only one or two at a time. I should say you have a pair of birds, and the shape of the beak will not influence its power of speech. It is a very risky proceeding to put a newly-purchased bird with an established and healthy specimen. Your diet is satisfactory, but I should keep a piece of clean cuttlefish. You could safely offer the water three or even four times a day, and after about a month it could be left in altogether. You can safely let the birds have any ripe fruit they will take, apple and pear cores are usually appreciated, and grapes and orange in preference to banana, but the latter is very wholesome. As regards the grit, this is better removed, but in the case of birds which are let out of the cage or handled much, retaining the grit secures clean feet. Once a week I should spray them with chilled water, guarding them carefully against draught till dry. Keep the birds where they will not be scared, but where they will hear plenty of conversation, also talk to them frequently, and they will gradually increase their vocabulary and also mimic laughter and any other similar calls, etc., which they frequently hear. The growling will cease as the bird becomes quite tame. Grocer's currants and sultanas, slightly moistened with warm water, are very wholesome and much appreciated by most species of Parrots.

Blue-fronted Amazon.

C. Spray.—This bird has caught a chill somehow, possibly been in a draught while the room has been dusted or aired. I should give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia and get from your chemist the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts; put a teaspoonful of the mixture in one ounce of water and let the bird drink as much as it will at least three time a day, removing the drinking water for a time; give it a drink of clear water once during the day; continue this treatment till the cold yields, after which put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food for a month. A little eucalyptus on a piece of cotton wool, just under side of cage tray, where the bird cannot get at it. If any running appears at the nostrils, spray with diluted glyco-thymoline. Keep it out of draught and in your living-room, where it will get the benefit of a little warmth, but it must not be subjected to extremes of temperature.

Green Budgerigar Unwell.

J. H. P.—I fear by the time this appears in print your bird will be dead. However, there is no telling, and if it still lives, cage it separately for a time and give it two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to its beak; this is easily done from the end of a feather, and if the feather is placed up against the beak the bird will suck it in; repeat the dose after an interval of two days. Diet for Budgerigars: Canary, white and spray millet, a few oats, green food (seeding grass, lettuce, etc.), a small piece of ripe apple, pear, or banana may also be given with advantage. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in their enclosures. They are small drinkers and only take a few sips at intervals. A few pieces of plain biscuit thrown in occasionally make a change for them. Whenever you notice a bird really indisposed in future, cage it up at once, as there is a risk of contaminating healthy stock. Your birds are out of condition, and that is quite sufficient reason to account for their not breeding; moreover, these birds mostly take a few months to settle down.

Australian Magpie.

J.H.—These birds are almost omnivorous, and can have table scraps, soft food, ripe fruit, such insects as you can capture for him, such as grasshoppers, cockroaches, beetles, spiders, etc., and when these fail, mealworms; scraps of cooked meat may also be given, also mice, and it should be allowed a regular bath. At the present time do not subject it to a variable temperature, and see it is kept out of draught. Put one teaspoonful of the under-mentioned mixture for a few days, or till the cold yields, to each ounce of the drinking water. A few drops of Parrish's Chemical Food on its soft food mixture daily will also be a help. It is more than probable that owing to domestic details the temperature of your kitchen is very changeable, and that to regulate same the bird has come in the way of draught; this you must avoid, as no bird, however hardy it may be, can stand this for long. Your cage also must be a roomy one, and will require constant attention to keep it sweet. If the bird is tame a fly round the kitchen or room will be very beneficial; but, of course, doors and windows must be kept closed.

A Troublesome Ailment.

"Thank You."—You cannot do much better than make use of the camphorated spirit in the drinking water; if the bird is no better, try eight grains of borax dissolved in each ounce of the drinking water. You ought, however, to isolate each bird that is so attacked, and not re-admit it to the aviary till it is quite recovered. With all ailing birds the bowels should be kept moving freely, but the voiding should not be watery; the best regulator is Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water. A course of Parrish's Chemical Food is also very beneficial during the convalescent stage. Is your aviary cage kept near a window? If so, when this is open it is a very dangerous position for the birds, as they easily get a chill, and chills are responsible for very many of the ailments caged birds suffer from. A small sod of turf for the birds to pick over is also a boon to birds kept indoors; half a dozen such, with the aid of a watering can and daily changing, would keep fresh a long time. I can suggest no other addition to your diet, which is a very liberal one. When giving milk sop to a sick bird a little Mellin's Food or Scott's Emulsion in same is a great help. A very weak bird is often helped and stimulated by very weak, chilled brandy and water. Hope your birds will soon recover; if there is no improvement in a reasonable time, repeat query with full details.

What Birds to Keep.

"Amateur."—Your proposed aviary should answer well; see your shelter shed is rain and draught-proof, and also well lighted, or the birds will not use it. I do not think one pair of Cardinals—Black-throated for preference—would harm your small birds. Though the Black-throat has no crest, it is a very handsome species indeed, and I have never known it to harm a small bird yet. As regards foster parents, Greenfinch or Bullfinch would be the most likely to succeed, and it would be better to let them hatch out the eggs. It is not well to overcrowd, but you could keep the following in your aviary: One pair either Red-crested or Black-throated Cardinals, and one pair each Zebra, Ribbon and Spice Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins; White Java Sparrows; Common and Green Avadavats; Grey and Green Singing Finches; Rufous and Long-tailed Grassfinches and Zebra Waxbills. These would all thrive on practically the same diet, but the Cardinals should have ripe fruit and several live insects daily. Ripe fruit is very wholesome for all species of birds, and your best green foods will be seeding grass and lettuce, though any non-poisonous weeds may be given for them to pick over. Supply canary, white, French and spray millet, oats, paddy rice, and in small quantities hemp and sunflower seeds, with the usual grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing; this will suffice to keep the above species fit. When they are feeding young, some good soft food mixture should be supplied.

Breeding and Selling Budgies.

B. H. Warbler.—The first step is to get good stock, the largest and best coloured you can procure. You really want two aviaries to be quite successful—one for Greens and the other for Yellows, as I find the varities very liable to cross-pair, and the progeny of cross mated pairs are almost without exception all Greens, and this cross mating in the end results in the plumage of the birds not being of so pure or rich a hue. Again you must adopt some means of keeping the young of the respective pairs separate, so that you may be able to send out unrelated pairs. There are two sources of disposal open to you—either to advertise them yourself, or to arrange with some dealer of repute to take what you breed at a fixed figure. Either way you should make a profit, once you have got up a stock. The points you must note are: You must start with the best, and by the occasional introduction of new blood, keep your stock up to high-water mark; poor stock takes just as much to keep, and is almost unsaleable, and even if you sold a few, would soon close a market against you.

Cordon Bleus and Zebras.

Constant Reader.—I fear space will not permit full details, and, moreover, they need a little looking up, and for this there is not time before going to press. The Cordon Bleu ranges over Western Africa from Senegambia to the Gaboon, and Eastern Africa southwards to Zanzibar. They seem to prefer cultivated districts, and favour the proximity of villages and farms; in wooded country they prefer the banks of streams, etc., their untidy and roughly-constructed nest, which is almost shapeless and domed with a covered sloping passage leading to the nest cavity. Food, indigenous seeds and small insects. The Zebra Waxbill is also an African species, and is usually met with in flocks; it is found over the whole Ethiopian region. It frequents cultivated districts, and the banks of reed-grown streams, keeping to the thick coverts, nesting on the grounds as well as among the reeds in bushes. Food, indigenous seeds and small insects. Both these species, once they are acclimatised, will live out of doors all the year round, and breed fairly regularly in outdoor aviaries, the latter seeming to prefer the long green of a bank to any other nesting site.

Brevities.

Amazon Parrot Lazy (J. Corney).—Your diet is satisfactory, but you would find the following seed mixture more wholesome for the bird: Canary, wheat, dari, paddy rice, hemp, maize, and sunflower seeds in about equal parts. It would be better without the suet pudding; give it a little plain cake instead. The cooked potatoes should be free from fat. Make the drinking water for one day just saline with Epsom salts, and get a bottle of Parrish's Chemical Food and put three or four spots of sauce on each piece of biscuit you give to the bird. There are several other replies re Blue-fronted Amazon in this issue, the perusal of which should assist you in treating your bird. Put it, make a fuss of it, keep it in your midst, so that it will be kept interested and lively, and not be bored into ill-health with ennui. A few nuts occasionally are a welcome and wholesome change.

Treatment for Grey Parrot (W. Hughes).—There are several answers to other correspondents in this issue which should help you. Keep your bird where it will get plenty of company, hear plenty of conversation, getting petting notice, yet not be scared, and be out of reach of draught. Under such conditions it should soon learn to talk, or, if a talker, increase its vocabulary. Diet: Seed mixture, canary, wheat, dari, hemp, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in about equal parts, also ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts, with grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor yet any kind of animal food whatever. A Grey Parrot does not need coddling, but it is better covered up at nights and the cover not removed till the room has received its morning airing; the cover should go all round the cage, but a space about six inches in diameter should be left uncovered on top of cage. Hope your bird will do well.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (Anxious).—This bird died of bird fever and the probability is that your many other losses are attributable to same disease.

Cardinal (Tipperary).—Softening of liver. I think your mode of feeding is the cause of this, and may be considerably improved if you will consult our Mr. W. T. Page. The body was too far decomposed to admit of preserving and mounting.

Canary (W. E. H.).—General debility, ending with rupture of blood-vessel of liver.

Prosecution Report (J. Hennery Lewis).—Please accept our thanks for this.

Illustrated Idea (D. W. Tatter).—This will receive consideration in due course; the ideas are dealt with in order.

Show Report (A. G. Boardman, Brunswick).—We are obliged to you for sending us this, and shall be pleased to hear from you from time to time.

Club Notice (H. Jameson).—The error to which you refer, was, we may point out, not ours; the previous notice distinctly stated Sept. 7th.

Remedy Wanted (J. L. Clarke).—Your letter partakes too much of the nature of an advertisement to allow of its being printed as written. The article should be advertised in the usual way, in the proper column.

Hallam and Eccleshall Show (H. Green).—You ought to take up a position on "Funny Cuts." Your attempt at humour made our office-boy roll on the floor. Whose leg are you trying to pull—ours—Mr. Colton's—or your own?

Drawing of a Yorkshire (Miss H. Walker).—The issue of CAGE BIRDS dated March 28, 1908, contains a drawing of a typical Yorkshire, and a number of faulty representations. The defects are pointed out in the accompanying article. A copy of this issue can be sent for twopence post free.

HIGHGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held Aug. 26th, at headquarters, Spencer Hall, Spencer Road, Dartmouth Park Hill, N.W. Owing to our chairman having claims elsewhere, Mr. Johnson was elected to preside. The secretary reported progress in the case of our esteemed friend, Mr. W. Shakespeare's health, and trusted he would be at our next meeting. The principal business was down in the name of Mr. W. Shakespeare, but as health would not permit his attendance, Mr. G. E. Weston kindly came forward at a moment's notice, and entertained us with a lecture on staging British birds for exhibition. He told us the little secrets that go to attract the judge's eye. His remarks were very much enjoyed by all. Several questions were asked by Messrs. Neal, Johnson, Jones, Mound, and others, and these were answered by Mr. Weston. Mr. Johnson moved, and the secretary seconded a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, who replied at length. The secretary at this point announced that he regretted that owing to business which was taking him to Nottingham he was compelled to tender his resignation as secretary. Mr. Weston said it was a very strange coincidence, but the last time he came to have a talk with us the chairman happened to be judging away, and the late secretary, Mr. Reynolds, tendered his resignation and was off to Nottingham. Nottingham seemed to be in for a fine thing in having such good-spirited fanciers moving into its midst. It was moved and carried that the secretary see our chairman, Mr. Gardner, with a view to calling a special meeting to elect a new secretary.—GEO. H. NEAL, Hon. Sec.

EAGLESFIELD, N.B.

Cage bird show held under the auspices of the Eaglesfield H.S., at Kirtlebridge, on September 4th, and which quite upheld the reputation of former exhibitions. The exhibits were beautifully staged in a tent close by Kirtlebridge Station. Borders made a good show, both in numbers and quality, and were well handled by that well-known Cumberland fancier, Mr. J. Thompson (Wigton). Scotch Fancies and Norwich were very fair, but the Mules, British and Foreign birds were of the highest standard. Mr. J. H. Adam (Glasgow) placed the cards, and appeared to give satisfaction.

Correspondence.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Bishop Auckland.

SIR,—Will you oblige me by permitting me a small space in CAGE BIRDS in order to call a meeting with a view to forming a Cage Bird Society? This meeting will be held on Saturday, September 11th, and will be held at the Fleece Hotel, Bishop Auckland, at 7.30 o'clock.

H. HUNTER, Pro. Sec.

Fleece Hotel, Bishop Auckland.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

SIR,—There are many of us who are indebted to Mr. Chas. Boulton for his advice re mealworms. But there are one or two points I would like to know, and perhaps Mr. Boulton will be good enough to make them clear to me. The first is: How long do the boxes last? Do they have to be renewed, that is, to turn all out and make a fresh start? The second point is: Do the mealworms come to the top of the material, etc., which is placed in the box, as it would be inconvenient to remove it each time you wished to take out a supply? I find mine go damp this time of the year. Perhaps I do not keep them warm enough. I wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, all success.

SUBSCRIBER.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

SIR,—Will you allow me space re the above? For some time past I have read in CAGE BIRDS letters from two parties, and, of course, both parties think they have a grievance. I think both are headstrong. Now, for the good of the Fancy, I would suggest that some true fancier try and get both sections to meet and come to some understanding and unite for this 1909 season. Every fancier knows we are too small to be divided just yet, and if we are divided I fear both will be near death when the shows are over. I hope this will bring about a re-union and that delegates will meet from both sides and patch up old sores for this one year, and perhaps we may see a much brighter side view of things next year. I hope both parties will meet halfway and work together like true fanciers, and have a record show in Dublin this coming season.

A PROVINCIAL MEMBER.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—It may interest your readers to learn that I have succeeded in curing three of my Canaries after they had been very ill for about a week. In each case the symptoms were the same as in the case of Mr. T. Robson's birds. I have sent a bottle of my remedy to Mr. Wilkinson for him to try on his British birds as I have none ill now of my own. I am anxiously awaiting a reply from Mr. Wilkinson. If the remedy proves successful in his case I shall have no hesitation in placing it on sale, as I am convinced that it cured my Canaries, and noticed a great improvement after the first dose.

E. CHARLES.

SIR,—I have been reading in CAGE BIRDS for the last three or four weeks about fanciers losing their birds, and I see that a remedy is wanted to prevent same. A few months ago I stated in CAGE BIRDS that I successfully pulled my Goldfinch through when I had almost given him up. The very same remedy I use for all my birds, with equal results. The following is the remedy which has been applied in the case of Linnets, Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and Canaries: Tincture of rhubarb one ounce, tincture of gentian one ounce (half teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water). Since using this remedy I have not lost a bird. Only to-day a fancier told me he had lost his Linnet, while three others told me a similar sad story two or three weeks ago. This remedy may be of use to those requiring one, but if anyone tries it, give it the birds as soon as you notice anything wrong, and it will soon pull them round. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success.

F. PRATLEY.

SIR,—Since I wrote the letter which appeared in CAGE BIRDS of July 31st, I am pleased to say many fanciers have replied to it. Some of the suggestions are, of course, very weak; as if, for instance, an "Old Breeder" would think of using brass or copper drinking or seed vessels. At first I thought it was the seed which might have been kiln dried, but after testing about fifty seeds in a flower pot, I found they all germinated, so I could not lay it at the door of the seed. Neither was it the egg food, which might have become contaminated by passing through a machine, as I always chop it with a knife and give it in clean glass vessels. The water was not the cause either, as it comes from the pump. Some years ago I did lose a lot of birds by giving them soft water from the water tubs, it having been out in the sun and become stagnant. The cages were well disinfected and cleaned before and after each breeding season; so I could not blame the cages. The remedies I have tried have all ended in failure. There is something in Mr. Oddy's sulphur treatment, I feel certain, although I have not tried it. I should have done so had I the convenience, as I know what benefit it is to vines infected with red spider; but it was not the rock sulphur that was used for them, but the flowers of sulphur. I have given the flowers of sulphur in small and large quantities in the egg food to see if that would have any effect, but it had none that I could see. I am sorry to see that Mr. Robson's birds have had the disease so badly. I hope even yet to see some of our medical fanciers give their opinion of it, and, maybe, suggest a remedy. I anxiously look forward each week for CAGE BIRDS to see what answers and suggestions your numerous readers may give.

OLD BREEDER.

SIR,—I have been very much interested in the correspondence which has been going on for these last few weeks re "Fatal Diseases," and I feel it my duty to help my fellow fanciers if I can. For two years I have tried a new method of feeding with such good results that I can safely recommend it to your readers. In 1908 I put up twelve pairs and bred 88 young ones. This year (1909) I put up twelve pairs, but unfortunately I lost one hen, which left me with eleven pairs, and I bred 94 youngsters. During the last two years I only lost one young bird after they had got on "sticks," and that happened whilst I was away on my holidays. My method of feeding is as follows:—I use hard-boiled eggs (let them be new-laid) with bread-crumbs, a good supply of milk sop, which I put on boards, as it keeps better this way than in the ordinary egg glass. I also give a good supply of hemp seed, also plenty of green food—dandelion, or watercress or lettuce. When I take the youngsters away I give them milk sop three or four times a day and a good supply of crushed hemp seed about twice a day; no egg food whatever, no soaked German rape seed, the only diet being milk sop and crushed hemp. I fill up the seed hoppers with Spanish seed. I also give them water to drink as soon as I take them away with a teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food to one quart of water. This prevents their drinking a lot of water, but what they do drink will do them good. I keep this on all through the moult. My experience of over twenty years teaches me that egg food and the drinking too much water causes inflammation of the bowels—some call it septic fever. Immediately the bird shows any sign of being ill you should examine it to see if it is red and swollen on the stomach. If that is the case, get about one square inch of lard, or vaseline, or olive oil, and as much hot cayenne pepper as you can scoop up with a sixpence. Mix the two together into a salve, then apply with your finger to the affected part. This will remove the inflammation. During moulting I feed my green Yorkshires with some fancy loaf which contains egg, my wife baking these loaves in the ordinary way as for the table. This takes the place of colour food. I wish every success to your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, which I have read from the first copy.

C. PICKUP.

The Glasgow & District Derby and its Membership.

SIR,—The membership of the Glasgow and District Derby is far down. The Secretary has done all he can to dispose of the tickets. He tells me that fanciers to whom tickets were sent put them into an open envelope and returned the tickets without any indication where they came from. Such a callous method is unbusinesslike and, worse still, is discouraging to a hard-working secretary. Another official had a similar experience, and one of the defaulters was the secretary of another society, and the President of the same association has never accounted for the membership tickets sent to him. This discourtesy will "knock the bottom out" of the Scotch Fancy Canary hobby by-and-bye, and no society will eventually be able to get suitable men to take office. The publication of these facts may cause the discourteous to think, and in future show some consideration to our secretaries.

Successful Catching with Spring Net Traps.

SIR,—Will you please allow me space in your grand paper, CAGE BIRDS, in answer to Mr. J. Knight, under the above heading? I have got seven of these traps, and find them of great use all the year round. I am only a novice at bird-catching, but I can always get a good catch with these. I have tried trap cages, but Finches fight shy of them. I always thought that these traps were for Nightingales only, but I have caught all kinds of birds with great success.

An Australian Hybrid Breeder's Difficulties.

SIR,—I have bred two very nice Hybrids, a cross between a Zebra and an African Silverbill, and another cross between the Blackheart (or Long-tailed Grassfinch) and a Nutmeg Finch. I entered them in two shows out here in Melbourne, Australia, but, unfortunately, the judges are not proficient enough for that class of bird. Give them a common everyday Goldfinch and Canary and it appears they are all right. It is very disheartening to Hybridisers in Victoria. Hybrids are not very easy to obtain, as no doubt you know. At one show at which I entered them, in a class of eight, they were "wrong classed"; in the next show I entered them in the dark class but they "wrong classed" the one, and the other was not looked at. The Zebra cross has distinct white markings on him and is a very good specimen. I am sorry I haven't got photos of them for you, as you would be able to form an opinion of them. I have had quite a number of fanciers visiting my aviaries to see them. These few lines may prove interesting to your English readers. I wish CAGE BIRDS all the success it fully deserves.

A. G. BOARDMAN.

Insectivorous Birds and Soft Food Mixtures.

SIR,—No one seems to have commented on Mr. Finn's recent advice to aviculturists to attempt rearing the young of insectivorous birds on a soft food mixture; but I think his remarks should not pass unchallenged, because it appears to me they hardly do justice either to the modern school of aviculturists or to himself. Mr. Finn urges us to be "experimental," as though we were obstinate people tenaciously adhering to certain antiquated ideas; but, as a matter of fact, our whole hobby is one long experiment, and certainly all the successful aviculturists that I have met have been thoughtful people, always reaching for new ideas. The co-called "experiment" which Mr. Finn asks us to try certainly does not seem to be a novel one. Practically every species of British bird has been kept in aviaries at one time or another, and the great majority on some soft food mixture. If, therefore, it were practicable to rear the young of insectivorous species on these "mixtures," we should expect to find that the great majority of British species had been successfully bred. Yet, as I pointed out in a paper I contributed to the Aviculture Magazine some two years since, of all the insectivorous and semi-insectivorous species (including in this category all the Waders, Larks and Buntings, Warblers, Thrushes, Chats and Tits), only 13 species have probably been actually bred and fully reared. The only additions to this list that I have since noted are the Ring Ouzel, said to have been bred by the Zoological Society, and the Blackcap and Cirl Bunting, bred by myself. It seems not unreasonable to infer that possibly this want of success may be due to the very system which Mr. Finn recommends, namely, that of expecting our birds to rear their young on the artificial and unnatural foods on which the adults have—often with much difficulty—been "meated off." I certainly am not one of the aviculturists to whom Mr. Finn alludes, who cry "impossible!" but I must say that when I come to examine the facts on which Mr. Finn bases his argument, they appear to me to be entirely exceptional and inadequate. He gives us this one instance of a young Bank-Mynah being reared to the age of fourteen days at the Zoo without the addition of live insect food to the ordinary diet. I was at the Zoo the other day and made some enquiries about this case, and ascertained that the young Mynah had not at that date (29th July) left the nest, so we do not as yet even know if it will reach maturity, and also that this occurrence had taken place in the very large and lofty central division of the Western Aviary, where the parents could easily have found a large number of insects if they had foraged for themselves. Assuming, however, for the moment that this young bird really was fed on artificial food alone, and assuming that it will reach maturity, your readers will be able to judge how exceptional this event is when I say that Mr. Sutton, who used to be the keeper of the Western Aviary, and whose experience of that institution extends, I believe, over a period of more than 20 years, tells me that in the whole of that period he never remembers a single instance of any young of any species being reared on artificial food alone. I think, as I said above, that Mr. Finn hardly does justice to himself when he puts forward an isolated occurrence such as this as a basis for further experiments in this direction. He does not seem to see that the principles he derides are not the fads of a few aviculturists, but the outcome of the exhaustive experiments of Nature herself extending over a period of time of which the human mind can form no just conception, because we must all have observed that not only the "Softbills," but also the majority of the smaller "Hardbills" rear their young almost entirely on live insects, and only breed at that period of the year when such insects are procurable. But this is not the whole of my objection to Mr. Finn's precepts. I have spoken above of the "modern school of aviculturists." I am not sure that I have any right to use so magniloquent a phrase, or even whether there is such a thing as a school of aviculture at all, seeing the unfortunate differences of opinion among aviculturists; but after making due allowance for these differences and bickerings, I think we are gradually reaching a consensus of opinion which we may express in the following terms:—

(1) That birds should be kept under as natural conditions as possible, and

(2) That they should be fed on the simplest and most natural foods.

When, therefore, Mr. Finn advises the use of meat and egg he appears to me to be leading us backwards, and not forwards. For instance, all the old books recommend meat and egg for the Nightingale, yet we do not hear of much success in keeping this species. Last year I had a Sprosser (or European Nightingale) which sang for 49 weeks without intermission of a single day, and this summer a Nightingale sang in my birdroom from 14th April to 2nd June. This Nightingale and another, caught in April, have just moulted well, yet they have never had (nor do I ever use) meat, egg, or mealworms. I will not discuss the question whether meat and egg are good foods or not: I merely say that they appear not to be indispensable. The use of vegetable foods is also an old idea; for instance, in all Bechstein's "mixtures" we find "grated carrot" included. Mr. Finn's argument is certainly a quaint one. Because insectivorous birds eat caterpillars, and caterpillars contain some undigested vegetable substances, therefore the latter should be included in the diet of the former. As well might one argue that because mice eat cheese, and Tawny Owls swallow mice whole, therefore cheese must be good for Owls! Probably many of the insectivorous birds besides the fruit-eaters do consume some vegetable matter, and I have myself seen the Chiffchaffs in Italy in the winter picking at the withered olives, but it does not appear to be a necessity for such species as the Nightingale, at all events, and it adds considerably to the time expended in preparing the food. I have thought it advisable not to let Mr. Finn's remarks pass without comment, for two reasons. In the first place, they give a false idea of what aviculturists are doing nowadays. We do not waste our time in "expelling Nature with a fork" (as the Latin proverb puts it), but at the same time we are all of us constantly trying to ameliorate the conditions of keeping and feeding our birds, while adhering as closely as possible to "first principles." I have also another reason, namely, that I think if this advice were carried out it would lead to unnecessary loss of life. I well know, however, that Mr. Finn is as anxious as any of us to improve the conditions of aviculture, and I feel sure my remarks will be accepted in the friendly spirit in which they are made.

NORWICH CANARIES

By C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

A Skylark of Sixteen Summers.

SIR,—In reference to Mr. Watson's notes on the Lark Family, and more especially in reference to the Skylark, he says that they do not live to a great age. I, however, have a Skylark that is 16 years old, and is a contest bird. He won the championship this season, and has sung many a time this season. He is through the moult now and is singing again. He has sung altogether in 220 contests, and has been in the money 200 times. He has won eight copper kettles from the Bradford and District Skylark Singing Society. The bird's name is "Boldys Tug," and my address is 33, Mount Terrace, Eccleshill, Bradford. INTERESTED.

The First-Year Experience of a Novice.

SIR,—I am writing to let you know my experience as a novice during my first year of breeding Canaries. I started with five birds—three hens and two cock birds—in March. The first young ones were hatched in April, and the last on the 1st of August, and I had a total number of 63. I never had an unfertilised egg, nor have I lost a bird, thanks to information gleaned from CAGE BIRDS. I made my own cages. They are 3ft. long, 11in. wide, and 20in. high. I use sawdust and sand mixed for the cage floor. I give them fresh water and seed every morning, and sometimes I give the water twice a day. I feed the birds on white seed when the hens are sitting. I give them egg food on the 13th day of incubation, and then I give a little dandelion when the young ones are three days' old, hemp when they are four days old, and I continue with a pinch of maw seed until they are twenty-three days old. Then I place them in a double breeder until they are seven weeks old. I also feed them on egg food twice a day, crushed hemp and white seed ground to a flour until they are able to crack the seed for themselves. I find they are able to look after themselves at the age of seven weeks, when I place them in a flight which is 4yds. long, 4ft. 6in. wide, and 4ft. high. They bathe every morning and can take a little green food, that is, dandelion twice a week. I have had ten nests of young ones, five nests of seven, three of six, and two of five, making a total of 63. I had one young one hatched with one wing; there is no sign of any other wing, and it is now nine weeks old. It is a cock bird and is singing and doing well. Is this not a record for a novice? May I wish success to CAGE BIRDS? It has been my only guide.

The Appeal for an Old Fancier.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space to thank those who have so kindly supported me in my appeal on behalf of Mr. W. Shakespeare, in his time of need. I am glad to see our old friend about with us again, and I am sure Mr. and Mrs. Chillcott, of Southend-on-Sea, will receive their reward for the excellent way they entertained our old friend free of all cost. Also Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery, of Paignton, South Devon, and the members of the Highgate and Hampstead and District C.B.S., who came forward so nobly at the meeting with £1 6s. 2d. are deserving of special thanks. Other donors were: Mrs. G. E. Weston 5s., Miss N. Nickels 5s.; Mr. W. G. Byne 5s., Mr. C. W. Law 2s. 6d., Mr. Reynolds 1s., Mr. Oldaker 1s., Mr. G. Wood 6d., making the grand total of £2 6s. 2d. Our old friend would be glad to do any work that would come his way should any brother or sister fancier require any assistance in any shape or form. A post-card to W. Shakespeare, 233, Kentish Town Road, N.W., would find him. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my children ye did it unto me." Thanking you for your kind support in giving space in CAGE BIRDS.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

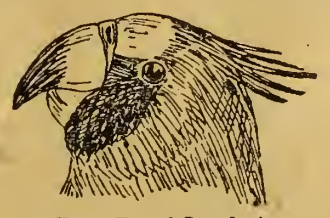
Author of "The World's Birds."

The Monkey's Bane.



Mr. Kipling says in his delightful "Jungle Book" about the great python, the most fascinating character—in more senses than one—of the story, to my way of thinking, that the whisper of his name makes the monkeys' wicked tails grow cold. In the Philippine Islands the monkeys have got another enemy to shiver over in the person of the terrible Monkey Eagle, which is now creating such a sensation at the Zoo. This awful bird is more like a giant Hawk than an Eagle in shape, but his beak is an exaggeration of the Eagle's, being long, narrow, exceedingly deep, quite bill hook shaped, in fact. One can well fancy how, when a wretched monkey has been gripped by the powerful talons, this fearsome instrument will "cut cleanly through his cervical vertebræ." Another notable point about this bird is his great mop of a crest, striped with brown and white, under which look out a pair of eyes as cold and cruel as a leopard's. Truly, a monkey's life is not all nuts and apples!

A Pigmy Fiend.

A contrast to this Eagle in size, but equalling him in ferocity, is a South American Pigmy Owl, which was recently imported, and has passed into the hands of a well-known aviculturist. This malevolent midget is only about as big as a Hawfinch, but its yellow eyes gleam with ferocity, and from the way in which it endeavoured to intimidate observers by rolling its head about and puffing out its plumage, it might have been the Monkey-killer itself. It is this bird, or an allied species, which is credited in Chili with attacking and killing a large Ibis. Attacking its victim on the ground, it fastens it under its wings, and the big bird, maddened with terror, flies up and up, till at last, exhausted, it falls to the ground a prey to its tiny tormentor. If this really happens, what occurs no doubt is, that the Ibis ultimately overbalances itself in its flight, and turning over and over strikes the ground and is killed by the fall. It is curious that a rather similar story is told by the natives in India about a Pigmy Falcon and the great Sarus Crane, which is what makes me inclined to believe that there is some truth in both tales.

Rarity and Hardiness.

Speaking of rarities reminds me what a curious thing it is that many species which are quite rare in aviculture, are hardier in captivity, and even, often, much more inclined to breed in that state than allied species, which are abundant both in the bird trade and in a state of nature. For instance, the rare Violet-eared Waxbill seems to be a better liver than the common Cordon Bleu; the choice and valuable Parrot Finch lives far better than the common, if more beautiful, Pintailed Nonpariel, and breeds quite freely; the Silver-eared Mesia is much hardier than its relative, the Pekin Robin; and, while that bird is very disinclined to breed, the Mesia has in every case where it has been given the opportunity of doing so, tried to nest, though owing to accidents no young have been fully reared; while, last of all, we have recently had proof that the Black-faced Lovebird has a very strong tendency to reproductions, and may in time rival the Budgerigar in this respect, while the Peach-faced Lovebird, also comparatively rare, is another good breeder.

How to Colour-Feed.

By the time your young birds of the first round are from nine to ten weeks' old, you must prepare for getting them on to colour-food. It is advisable to lay in a stock of colour-feed that will see completely through the moult all the birds you may have, if you wish to ensure equal strength for all periods.

A dozen birds can, as a rule, be successfully moulted on one pound of colour-feed, and each pound of colour should be composed of 14ozs. of sweet pepper and 2ozs. of hot. Then add to each 4lbs. 1lb. of ground linseed, or, as it is called, linseed meal. Get this mixture ready at least a fortnight before it is required, so that the colour will get struck into the linseed meal. The idea of adding the meal to the colour is based on the fact of linseed being absolutely the best thing that can be used during the moulting season to get the feathers off, besides furnishing the new ones with oil for proper growth, at the same time giving the birds assistance in getting that desirable sheen so much admired. Many birds will not eat linseed when it is given in the whole seed, and this, therefore, gets over the difficulty.

When your birds are from ten to twelve weeks old you must begin by giving a small quantity of egg food slightly coloured with pepper, gradually increasing it until the quantity added gives the food a bright and solid red appearance, taking care that the strength does not vary much day by day. Then when the blood is thoroughly impregnated it does not matter how quickly the feathers come off—the quicker the better, in fact. You can rest assured the colour will then be alright.

Young birds show the new feathers breaking through at each side of the body and wing shoulders, and as a rule they look very brilliant in contrast with the nest feathers, which are usually pale. The body feathers gradually spread until they meet at the breast, and by this time the soft feathers on the back will be on a long way towards renewal, working up towards the neck and down the centre of the head.

"Tailing" and "Flighting" the Young.

When this stage is reached it is usual to "tail" the Yorkshires, and maybe "flight" them also, but the latter is not desirable, except, perhaps, where an extra good bird has got the flights badly broken, when it is permissible.

"Tailing" is quite easy to attend to. Practically only one care is required, and that is to pull the feathers slightly inwards—the feathers on the left side to the right and those on the right side to the left. The reason for this is that should you pull the feathers outwardly the tail root is disturbed and widened, and is apt to cause the tail to grow wide, instead of being (as is termed in Yorkshire) "like a pipe stopper"; that is, like a pipe stem, very narrow and compact.

Should "flighting" be absolutely necessary, great care must be exercised, and you must not by any means attempt this operation if you are not thoroughly used to handling birds. Also you must not suffer from "nerves," as the merest slip will result in either a broken or a strained wing. Catch the bird, hold well in the hand, place the wing where the feathers grow from between the finger and thumb, and then draw with a gentle pull the few feathers you wish to remove. Return the bird into the cage, but first lower the perches within easy jumping distance of the cage bottom, so as to enable it to get a little exercise without any risk of damaging itself.

When and How to Withhold Colour.

When all the longest feathers on the body appear to be pretty well grown, and only the short ones about the head and neck remain yet to moult, you can begin to slightly wean the birds from the colour. Miss giving it, say, twice a week, as by this time the blood will be thoroughly impregnated, and will only need a small quantity to fulfil the requirements.

Another thing about this matter is that colour-feeding, as a rule, and particularly when used in a moist state, is apt to keep birds a trifle on the soft side, and it is impossible to get birds into good, hard condition, fit for showing, until the colour is absolutely stopped. Should you be using moist food, it is better at the latter end to gradually work the birds on to dry food, as they will then get into condition much quicker.

AUGHTON (Ormskirk).

The Aughton Society held their 15th annual open show of cage birds, etc., in four large spacious tents in a field adjoining the Town Green Station on September 1st. The cage bird section comprised eight classes, and these brought out over 40 exhibits, which were better in quality than at any show before, and must be counted extra good just now when so many birds are in the moult. The British birds were good all-round, and Mr. Walker's winning Nightingale, and Messrs. Johnson Brothers' winning Bunting were both about perfect in every feature. The Linnets were above common, too, especially the winner. The hybrids were a strong class, and several promising young Goldfinch-Canary, Linnet-Canary, and Goldfinch-Greenfinch Mules were on view. Only a few Yorkshires, Norwich and Borders were staged, but the winners in these were very neat specimens. It was a fine show taking all sections, and only the weather spoilt the gate, which no doubt would have been a big one had it been fine. However, the committee and officials all worked hard, and were very cheery, especially the chairman, who gave his men every encouragement. Mr. S. F. Anderton, the live stock hon. sec., is a very capable man, has had great experience, and knows exactly how best to get through his work. This show has great patronage from all the leading local gentry and fanciers, which means a lot, for here are some of the finest all-round exhibitors to be found in the kingdom. You only need to mention "Ormskirk," and it is a guarantee of something out of the common. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged the cage birds, and gave apparent satisfaction. In spite of the weather there were quite a host of motor cars bringing the gentry from all around, and Bold Lane was quite en fete all the afternoon.

Critique.

BRIT. SOFTBILL (5): 1, 2, 3, Walker, very smart trio, two Nightingales, and a Yellow Wagtail, all in very tight condition and well shown; r, Bell, a good-sized Robin, looking a bit thick or soft when we were taking notes. HARDBILLS (9): 1, 2, Johnson Bros., perfectly-feathered Bunting and a good Hawfinch, latter hardly so good in feather as former; 3, r, Moss, moulted Bullie, in grand feather, very pale yet on breast, and a large Snow Bunting, in good feather and condition; vhc, hc, c, Bell, Bullie, Yellow Bunting and a Goldfinch respectively, hardly up to the form of others. LINNET (6): 1, Moss, fine size, shape and markings, in rare health and condition; 2, Price, deeper colour, good in markings, nice shape and showy on perch; 3, Crompton Bros., upstanding deep bolour, fine quality and condition, good markings; r, Tiffin, fine chested bird, deep colour and glossy, hut equals on heels a bit to-day, or might have gone higher; vhc, Johnson Bros., big bird, but would not take perches.

RUTHIN.

A most successful show was held in connection with the Horticultural Exhibition at Ruthin Castle Grounds, on September 2nd. The weather was very favourable, and the attendance good. A most enjoyable day was spent, the park being open to the public all the time. The arrangements were well carried out, and a splendid marquee was adapted for the purpose. The efficient secretary, Mr. T. Roberts, and the officials were a good staff of experienced hands, and had everything in order. The Yorkshires had almost all the classes to themselves; they were good in quality and in numbers. British and Mules were not so numerous; a few good ones were shown, however. The majority of the classes were for young birds, and a few of the promising youngsters no doubt will be heard of again. Mr. W. C. Roberts (Llandudno), made the awards.

CAN.: 1, O. H. Williams, cl. yell., nice length, stands well, beautifully fed, wings well up; 2, J. W. Hughes, cl. buff, good type, close feather; 3, J. O. Williams, variegated, promising youngster, well through moult, Harlech winner; res., J. O. Williams, wing mkd. buff, grand length, style and quality. MULE: 1, T. Williams, four-pointed Linnet Mule, nice size, quality, well shown; 2, J. H. Davies, variegated Goldfinch Mule, good size, and markings; 3, W. P. Davies, variegated Goldfinch-Can., runs 2nd close; res., R. Williams, very good dark Siskin Mule, in the opinion of some should have been higher. BRIT. (Goldfinch excluded): 1, D. Williams, Bullfinch, grand size, good cap, in nice form, not started to moult; 2, Master J. Williams, another Bullie, lovely type, deep in moult; 3, R. H. Hughes, good Chaffinch, beginning to moult; res., Pinnington, Hawk, very steady, well shown. BEST FIRST FEATHER BIRD: 1, J. O. Williams, cl. yell., rare length and feather, very promising; 2, J. Hughes, already noticed, 3 cl. buff, close feathered, stands well; res., W. P. Davis. GOLDFINCH: 1, 2, D. E. Williams, good Finch, square blaze, fine moons, very steady, 2nd good size, colour of blaze, will improve, 3, R. H. Hughes, good-coloured bird, condition against him to-day; res., R. M. Roberts, heavy in moult.

A TRIO OF AUSTRALASIAN SHOWS.

NEWTON P. AND CANARY CLUB.

Twentieth annual show held in the Foresters' Hall, Edinburg-street, Newton, Auckland. This show is considered the Crystal Palace of New Zealand, being until recently the only Pigeon and Canary show south of the line. There were 168 entries in the cage bird section. The Scotch Fancy was represented by four specimens, Mrs. Bane capturing the special for best in the show in that variety. In the Yorkshire clear yellow class (14) Mr. Hanson won 1st and special, and Mr. Vercoe 2nd. In the other classes, Hanson and Vercoe usually came out on top. In the Norwich classes C. R. Duncan was very much to the front with his noted winning team. P. R. Syers also did well, J. J. O'Rorke won special for best clear buff, Syers and Coleman for best yellow and marked, Duncan for best clear yellow with a lovely model, the winner of the cup at Auckland. In the Crests, W. A. Hanson won the North Island championship with a lovely green specimen, whilst C. Otto scored special in Crested-bred. P. R. Syers came on top with Cinnamons. In the Lizards, Ben Lee had five entries. The judge congratulated him on the quality of the birds, and was sorry there was no competition. Cage of four birds any variety, J. Williamson, 1st and special with four splendid Crests, Vercoe 2nd with four Yorkies, P. R. Syers 1st for light Mule, whilst J. J. O'Rorke 1st and special for the best dark Mule (6). Goldies (6), L. Binns, 1st, Tait 2nd. Hybrids, Syers, with a Greenfinch and Goldie cross. What in New Zealand we call a Greenfinch is about twice the size of the English bird, and altogether different. Any Variety Finch, Syers, with a Greenie, 1st. A. E. Henley had a very pretty Ribbon Finch. The usual dinner was held, and the club is to be congratulated on its prosperous state.

NORTH SUBURBAN CANARY I.S.

The above society held their 14th annual show of Canaries, Finches, and Pigeons, in the Brunswick Town Hall, on June 17th and 18th and 19th. The society is to be congratulated upon another very successful show, the exhibitors numbering 675, this being a considerable increase on the number obtained the previous year. It was, in fact, the largest number of exhibits since the society's formation. The public patronised the show in considerable force; in fact, there was hardly room enough on the last night of the show for them to see the exhibits comfortably. The show was opened by the Mayoress, who was presented with a Canary and cage, nicely draped, by Mrs. G. Whaley. The exhibition was excellently managed by Mr. C. F. C. Rose, who proved himself an ideal secretary, and by Mr. G. Ward (president); these were ably supported by their capable committee, Messrs. Alder, Boardman, Baillie, Lockington, Whaley, Stevens, and Thompson, who had everything in capital order, and were courteous and obliging to all. While these gentlemen remain at the helm, there is small chance of any hitch occurring in the arrangements. The exhibitors, no doubt knew this by the way they sent their best birds to the show. The quality of the exhibits was tip-top, and in some of the classes deserved all credit. The first thing that caught the fancier's eye on entering the hall was the Victorian challenge shield, very nicely draped, and no donht they are proud to be in possession of it. This is the first time that it has been won from the Victorian Canary Society, the North Suhurhan Canary Society gaining 34 points as against 11 of the V.C.S., which speaks volumes for the North Suhurhan fanciers. The 25 guineas, open Crest was won by S. Chambers; 15 guineas, open Crest-bred, G. Whaley; 10 guineas, novice Crest, H. Hagg; 5 guineas, novice Crest-bred, J. Wales. The other principal prize winners were: W. H. Stevens, for variegated Crested Norwich; A. B. Mason, for green Crested cock, a real beauty; G. Whaley and S. Chambers for Crest-bred; Norwich challenge trophy was won by G. Whaley, who had some first-class birds on the bench; Norwich Plainhead, Warner and Rose, F. White, C. E. Schieferdecker, and E. Baillie; Cinnamons, W. L. Thompson; Yorkshires, W. J. Myring, G. Worthington and F. Wenk; A. G. Boardman, 1st and special for a lovely pair of Starfinches, and 1st and special for best collection of Finches. Some very rare specimens of Foreign birds were staged by this exhibitor. Messrs. E. Sharpe, G. W. Alexander, A. G. Gardner, A. S. Hyndman, F. Belcher, and G. A. Keartland judged.

AUCKLAND AND SUB. P.P. & C.A.

The association held its tenth annual show in the Choral Hall on June 10th, 11th, and 12th, 1909. The exhibits in the cage bird section were not so numerous on account of the biggest exhibitor selling out this year, he sometimes having about 60 or 70 entries; hut this circumstance brought to the front a few young fanciers who are just making a start in the hobby. There were 85 Canaries, three Hybrids, and three Finches entered, which accounted for a magnificent display of quality. There were only three colour-fed birds. Most fanciers here appear to be prejudiced against them. Only one Scotch Fancy was shown (Mr. A. J. Vercoe's flecked yellow, a well-known winner). There was strong competition in the Yorkshires, Messrs. W. A. Hanson and A. J. Vercoe being the chief winners, Mr. Vercoe winning the North Island championship. In Norwich Plainheads Mr. C. R. Duncan was very much in evidence, winning the cup for best bird in show, which becomes his own property now, he having won it last year. It was a real typical bird, and the award was rightly placed; it was a good, big clear yellow, standing well up, had a lovely head, nice short tail, and tight feather, was a regular model, and well shown. Mr. P. R. Syers had a number of good birds here. In the Crested, Mr. W. A. Hanson had a number of first-class birds, and won special for best dark Crest with a real beauty, while Mr. W. H. Hammond captured the Light Crest honours. In the Crested-bred, Mr. J. Williamson was awarded the special with a very good specimen. In the Cinnamon classes, Mr. P. R. Syers scored the special, and in every class got home first; there was not much competition, but still there was quality. There were no entries in Lizards. In the colour-fed classes, Mr. Syers again got the special, and also in the Mules, but Mr. J. Williamson some thought had hard luck, and if there had been a better light the judge might have reversed his decision. Mr. T. W. Brown judged all classes. On the Friday night of the show the annual dinner was held, and the visiting fanciers had an opportunity of speechifying. The usual toasts were gone through, and many nice things were said. The Mayor (Charlie Gray) was in the chair, and stated that he had been president of our society for 13 years, and had seen it when it was not in the prosperous condition of to-day. He was pleased, he said, to see the improvement in the quality of exhibits. The exhibitors who failed to come to the top this year were given words of encouragement, and advised to "go in and beat 'em next year."

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

This past breeding season has not been a very favourable one for our district, so far as numbers are concerned. However, quality is again well to the fore, and with a favourable moult a fair number of champions should be heard of during the coming show season. This town has well held its own for some considerable time now in the Border Fancy line, and also in Norwich varieties. Mr. P. McKenzie comes first on the list, as he always does. Somewhat shorter he is in numbers than last year. He has secured 45 Borders and 3 Norwich. Mr. W. Mather has about 30 Borders, Mr. J. Allan 28 Borders, Mr. A. G. Cameron 36 Norwich, and, lastly, Mr. H. Bennet with 155 Borders and 1 Belgian. The above Border teams contain a good mixture of all colours of this variety, and the Norwich are looking well up in size and type.—A LOVER OF THE "WEE GEM" (Kelso).

In the Courts.

A Box of Finches.

Patrick Stanton (30), of 3, Court, Bloomsbury Street, and John Arkinstall (39), also of Bloomsbury Street, were summoned under the W.B.P.A. for having four Goldfinches in their possession.—P.S. Reynolds said that on the 20th ult. he saw the defendants in the Codsall Road, Tettenhall, and seeing that they had a box in their possession he accosted them, and in reply to questions they told him they were carrying some "joeys." Witnes asked to be permitted to see the birds. Defendants at first objected, but subsequently the box was opened, and it was found to contain twenty-five Linnets and four Goldfinches. Also in a basket was a bird net. When asked if they knew they were doing wrong in having the birds, defendants replied that they did not. Defendants said they had caught the birds at Wheaton Aston. On examining the box at the police station witness found that one bird was dead and another had its wing broken, done, it was stated, by the net. Next morning another bird was dead, and witness liberated the whole of the remainder. —Defendants were each fined 5s. costs, and the police were ordered to take possession of the net that was seized.

Cruelty to Birds at Nottingham.

An extraordinary case of cruelty to birds was revealed at the Nottingham Police Court on September 6th, when Henry Swift, alias Tindall, of 13, Pump-street, a bird dealer, was summoned.—On Saturday week Swift sent a boy with four boxes of brown Linnets to the Midland Railway Station to be sent away. The boxes were ordinary chocolate boxes, about a foot long, 9ins. wide, and two or three inches deep. The lid of one of the boxes was broken and overlapped in the middle, and in the crevice the railway clerk noticed one of the birds was trapped and its head smashed. The clerk pointed this out to the boy, and sent him back with the box, and shortly afterwards noticed also the condition of the birds in the other three boxes. He sent for the police.—Police-Constable Sanday told the magistrates on Monday that he obtained a cage and took the birds out of the boxes. In one box there were twenty birds. Most of them were dead. In another box there were seven alive and four dead, and in the third box only three were alive. The live birds recovered well when given water, and later, as the defendant refused to fetch them away, the Midland Railway authorities liberated them. The officer said he went to see the defendant on the Saturday night, on the Sunday, and again on the Monday, but although he admitted sending the birds to the station, he declared he had nothing more to do with them, and would "reserve his defence if there was any trouble." A veterinary surgeon (Mr. Johnson) said that to keep birds in such small unventilated boxes in which the birds could not stand, and must have been tightly packed, was gross cruelty. —Swift, in his defence, produced several boxes of birds. He placed the latter in the previous night, he said, and he wanted the magistrates to see how lively they still were. The magistrates declined to look at them, and fined the defendant 15s. or seven days.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

Blackbird's Artistic Taste.

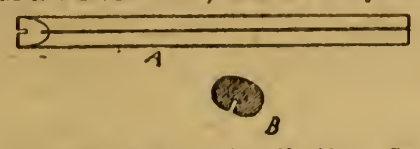
A Blackbird commenced building her nest in the gable of our washhouse, which is thickly covered with ivy. On taking in the bleeching from the green close by a lace doily was left by mistake. On the following morning the doily was discovered neatly arranged round the nest in a most artistic manner, and the Blackbird apparently well pleased with the adornment.—Sent by R. Hay Fenton (age 10), 73, Fonthill Road, Aberdeen.

*"Let 'em Wait!".

A young couple once had a Parrot, which was kept in the kitchen with the servant. One day the gentleman thought he would like Polly upstairs, so he sent for her. She was very quiet at first, but when her master and mistress were having their dinner, and rang the bell for dessert, she startled them by making the following tell-tale remark: "Let 'em wait." The couple then knew what had been said by the servants whenever they rung for pudding.—Sent by A. Kemp (age 9), Nineveh, near Hayle, Cornwall.

*The Kindly Robin.



A Redbreast was a few months back seen to do a kind act to a young Starling one very cold morning. In vain kind people offered the Starling bread, but it refuse to eat till a little hungry Robin came on his daily visit to the house. The bird, on seeing the baby bird, flew away and soon came darting back again with a worm, which was gratefully accepted.—Taken from "Chatterbox," and sent by D. Jodrell (age 11), 5, Orchard Terrace, Waley Bridge, Cheshire.

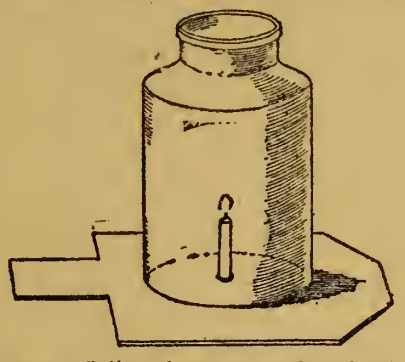
A Red-mite Trapping Perch.
Sent by Mr. David Jones, c/o 49, The Inhedge, Upper Gornal, Dudley, Worcs.



Although many devices for trapping and killing red mites have been published from time to time, not one has been so simple and generally applicable as the special perch here shown, whilst I can vouch for its being extremely effective in operation. It consists of making a longitudinal sawcut on the under side of one or more of the perches, preferably the perch which the bird usually roosts on at night. The depth of the cut should be about half the thickness of the perch, and must not be more than a sixteenth of an inch wide. This forms a darkened recess, which is peculiarly attractive to red mites, which harbour in it very freely. The perch should be taken out about once a week, and a match stick trimmed small enough to fit in the space, drawn through from end to end a few times, when the deadly effect of the perch will be soon be self-evident. Such a cut should be made by a tenon saw; or a small penknife might be used. Sketch A shows the underside of one of these perches, with a notch in the end to engage with a wire in front of the cage; B is a section of the perch, showing size and depth of the sawcut.—DAVID JONES.

A Lamp for the Bird-room.
Sent by Mr. W. Stapleton, Gwinear Church Town, near Hayle, Cornwall.

I enclose a sketch showing the way to make a lamp for the birdroom, which I find very handy; and when one is going from one house to another it will stand any rough weather and won't blow out. The idea is very simple. Get a piece of wood, 1ft. long by 8ins. wide; measure off 4ins. from one end, and cut off 2½ins. each way to form the handle; and to make the thing look neater, mark off 2ins. each way on the other end, and cut off the corners as indicated. Then get a 3-lb. glass jam pot, and break out the bottom by putting boiling water into it. To make the socket for the candle drive in three nails. The pot is placed over the candle to act as a globe. When the candle is alight it will burn even in the hardest of winds. Don't forget to drive in four or five nails outside the pot to keep it from falling off.—W. STAPLETON.

Under the White Rose.

THREE more weeks and we shall have the shows with us for another season, and surely the amount of competitions we have will produce some good effect on the entries. Practically every sub-variety of the "Yorkshire bird" has something to go for, the novices all through being exceptionally well catered for. One thing we shall miss, and that is the Green Yorkshires. For several years this variety has had one or two shows (with the Green Canary Association's patronage) in the West Riding districts, but up to the present they are wanting. The British birds, etc., have a nice lot of shows to run through, all with very good classifications, and the "Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C." are to be complimented on at last awakening the interests of those societies who are known to be very strong in these classes, and without a doubt it will do much to strengthen, both numerically and financially, this enterprising club.

IT is with great regret that I have to mention the fact that the popular secretary of the Harrogate C.B.S. has been seriously ill, having been laid up with that dread complaint, pneumonia. But having taken precautions in good time, our friend is now in a fair way to a rapid recovery. A speedy return to his usual alertness and health is my sincerest wish, and I am sure he will have the same good wishes from all who know him personally, and all who have come into contact with him at their shows.

THE Bankfoot C.B.S. are making great efforts to secure their fair share of the patronage of fanciers in the districts. At their last meeting the membership was still further increased, as was also their prize list, and they have decided that at the end of the season they will have a tea and concert in connection with the distribution of prizes won during the current season. A syllabus of lectures, shows, washing competitions, etc., is to be issued shortly, and for these they have secured the very best talent available.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Meeting held in the Institute, Bathgate, on 4th September. Mr. Arrighi (President) in the chair, before a very representative number of members from various districts. The following new members were admitted: Messrs. Jamieson (Glasgow), R. and P. Gentleman (Avonbridge), R. Jamieson, jun. (Linlithgow), R. Kirkwood (Falkirk), W. Bishop (St. Ninians), Telfer Bros. (Douglas), J. Clark (Rothesay), T. Sharp (Uphall), W. McLaren (Broxburn), W. Smith, Geo. Haldane, and J. Hossack (Bathgate), and R. McKay (Edinburgh), which is very gratifying. Patronage was a record this year, no less than 18 clubs applying for same, which says a lot for the growing popularity of this Society. After every one was fully discussed, the following were successful: City of Glasgow (medals and trophy), Avonbridge, Stirlingshire (medals and trophy), Broxburn (medals and trophy), Scottish National (medals and trophy), Bathgate and Dundee (medals). All the societies were granted patronage on condition "that they refuse to receive entries from the expelled members of our Society, namely, Messrs. P. McQuiston and M. Craig," failing this condition, the patronage will be withdrawn. The Secretary then read the correspondence passed between himself and Mr. D. Smith re the McQuiston case. All present duly endorsed the terms of the Secretary's reply to Mr. Smith. After some discussion it was unanimously agreed, no member present in any way dissenting, that we had heard no satisfactory reason why we should in any way alter the decision which was come to at the annual general meeting in March last in connection with same. The Secretary was also instructed to forward a communication to the Secretary of our sister Society—the National British Bird and Mule Club. This being all the business, a hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman brought a very enjoyable meeting to a close. There are still a few members to pay their subscriptions yet, which they might kindly do as early as possible, and oblige. Will be pleased to give intending members any information. The President, Mr. Arrighi, has very generously agreed to withhold his entries, this oncoming show season, for competing for the S.B.B. and M.C. handsome trophy.—A. W. WATSON.

Wild Bird Life.

September Bird Notes.

The wet weather has retarded the gathering of the harvest, and consequently the birds are having a grand time of it, for somehow they seem to prefer to feed from the standing stocks to seeking a meal on the ground. It is astonishing what a quantity of good sound corn is scattered by the process of cutting and gathering. One has only to carefully examine a square yard of the stubble to be convinced of this, and all along the footpath crossing the field the golden grains are scattered broadcast; and so there is food in plenty for all the vast flocks of Sparrows and Finches which will roam the fields for some months, possibly, until the winter snows cover the ground and drive them to the rickyards. Around the old country lanes, where the wide farm waggons trundel with heavy loads, the sides brush the luxuriant bramhles, so that after the carting the hedgerows are quite yellow and untidy with the corn stalks. All this will in time be eaten by the birds. Although insect life is still plentiful, the Starlings cannot resist the tempting elderberries; these they devour as soon as they are ripe, picking off the black ones and leaving the red until later. And so numerous are these greedy birds, that cottagers have some difficulty now in collecting enough for the making of wine. I have noticed, year after year, that these berries are the first to go, for other birds besides the Starling are fond of them.

Most of our Warblers have left us. We can see nothing of them in their accustomed haunts, but the Reed birds are still here. The reeds have now grown to their full height and are heavily laden with brown seed tops; when the wind sweeps across the marsh, they bend and sway in all directions, much resembling the waves on the seashore. The more the wind blows, the louder the Reed birds chatter. Their peculiar song appears to atune well with the rustle of the stalks, although a very indifferent performer, as we measure bird song. No other bird's notes harmonize so well with these surroundings. Could we but hear the full-throated Blackcap warbling among the reeds we should consider him out of place, and wish him back in the copse or garden. There is a small patch of marshland adjoining the river with a few stunted bushes growing along the mud wall, where that rare bird, the Marsh Warbler, is to be found year after year. He is so tame and confiding, appearing so interested in your visit to his haunts, that it is almost impossible to miss seeing him.

Considerate Fowlers.

In the West of Ireland the fowler cannot be induced to shoot at a Swan, for the general belief is "that whoever should be so unlucky as to meddle with them would pay for his temerity by the forfeit of his life ere the year had elapsed." Swans enter largely into mythology and were generally credited with being the souls of maidens who could assume human form at will.

The Nest of the Buzzard.

A few years since an experiment was made to reintroduce the Great Bustard into East Anglia. They were gradually killed off, until only a pair remained five or six years afterwards. These nested and sat upon two unfertile eggs. The nest was a large shallow hollow, scraped in the ground, and sparsely lined with dry rye grass. The depression was irregular in shape, enlarged upon the side used by the bird in going and coming. It was about 20 inches across. The eggs were strong, large, and well coloured.

Breeding of Wild Creatures.

We look upon the spring and summer as the time of reproduction of birds and animals in a state of nature. So regular are the nesting habits of birds that we can almost tell to a day when to look for a nest of any given species. With animals there is no fixed season; young rats, mice, and rabbits may be found in mid-winter. Hares, hedgehogs and otters are governed a good deal by the state of the weather. Domestication of both birds and animals increases reproduction.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

goes by but what I publish a whole host of unsolicited testimonials. Have you ever given a thought to this? These people would not write these letters to me unless my goods gave them perfect satisfaction, would they? I don't care how hard a man is to please, if it is humanly possible, I guarantee to do so, that is why I send everything on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and refund money in full if every satisfaction is not given. Clap nets, made from genuine thread, ¾ in. mesh, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair. Kindly note above nets consist of two nets to the pair, and each net is guaranteed full stated measure, not the two nets measured together. All are properly "geared" or "armed," and fitted up complete, with stave poles, pegs, lines, etc., ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10 feet deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-. Loose thread netting, specially knit for making all kinds bird nets, ¾ inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1¼ inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, all post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, often sold as bird netting; full measurement guaranteed to each customer. Catchers' store cages, single compartment 1/- and 1/6 each; ditto, two compartment, 2/- and 3/- each; ditto, three compartment, 3/6 and 4/- each. Russian hemp pull lines, 80 yards long, 1/- each, post free. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, without snarl, or back twist, 68 yards long, and guaranteed strong as boat lines, 1/4 each, post free. Round-topped call-cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; ditto, square-topped, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list, telling you how to make your own nets, etc. See following letters, all guaranteed unsolicited, full name and address given in each case, so that sceptical persons may test their genuineness:—"Bridge View, Calstock, Cornwall, August 9th, Sir,—Last season I had some birdlime from you, and found it as advertised. Yours, W. Wooldridge, jun." "61, Wellington-st., Grimsby, August 9th. Sir,—Please send following. The netting I had last year is as good as ever. I find the things on your price list half the price of others. Yours, F. Gilliespie." "Violet Cottage, Sible Hedingham, August 11th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets quite safe, and thank you for prompt despatch. Yours, A. Bareham." "Bright View, Old Rattray, August 14th, Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. I have used your lime for past 5 years, and it is the best I ever used. Yours, W. Honeisroud." "Macben View, Risca, August 20th, Sir,—Please send following. The netting bought from you 4 years ago is perfect now. Yours, S. Sullivan." "Windsor Cottage, Newbridge-on-Wye, August 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets safely, and am well pleased with them. They are good value for money. Yours, F. Probert." "Delhi-row, Pelsall, August 28th. Sir,—Please send following. The pair clap nets I had from you 3 years ago are still in use, and they wear very well indeed. Yours, J. Fallon." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, August 28th. Sir, Please send ½ lb. lime. I had some from you last year, and I cannot find any better. It is reliable stuff, and it don't matter how it rains, it will catch all the same. Yours, C. Hurt." Remember all my goods are sent on approval, cash or deposit, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction not given. See British Bird Column.

SAM CAPSEY, BARDNEY,

has plenty of the following Britishers for sale. Send direct to the catchers. Linnets, warranted cocks, 3/- dozen; picked birds and been caught longer, 4/-; these birds I guarantee to be well over the moult. The birds around Lincolnshire are noted for size and quality and plenty of song. I have a few very large, steady, young Linnets, house-moulted, that I have had caged off since the beginning of July, to make good mulers for next season, 2/6 each; also some two-year-old catchers that will earn more than their cost first time taking out, 5/- each. Greenfinches, 1/- dozen; a few monsters, with splendid colouring, for exhibition, 1/- each. Starlings for shooting, 2/6 dozen; picked ones for exhibition, very large, with plenty of lustre and marking. I catch more of these birds than any man in the country; therefore, know the sort that is wanted, from 1/- to 2/6 each. Skylarks, cocks, 4/6 dozen; picked birds, very large and singing, 1/- each. I will be pleased to exchange any of the above birds for good young singing cock Canaries, or Mules; no rubbish sent or wanted.—Sam Capsey, Birdcatcher.

G. ROSTRON.

I have at my disposal moulted Linnets, 7/6 and 10/-; young Linnets, starting to sing, taught by my champion, with polished contest cage, 3/6; send 1/- P.O. for packet of special mixed seed for moulting.—G. Rostron, 86, Victoria-st., Blackburn, Lancs.

GOLDFINCHES. GOLDFINCHES.

Grand English 1909 large selected cock Goldfinches, sex guaranteed, 1/9, 2/3, specially selected for singing, showing, muling, 2/9, 3/6, travelling cages 3d. extra; guaranteed healthy and extra well on seed.—B. Soanes, 92, Bevan-st., Lowestoft.

I HAVE ONE THOUSAND

British birds on hand to select from; all birds I guarantee to send away same day as ordered; please notice last week's advertisement for prices.—Thomas Hughes, 65, Saltley-rd., Birmingham.

MATTHEWS SAYS, STOP HERE! HELLO! HELLO! NO WONDER.

Gentlemen, why I keep sending prize winners out every day is because I have the largest stock in the world to select from. This is well known by all the leading exhibitors, contest singers, and Mule breeders. Also the finest aviaries. Mine are not old hen cotes, same as most of backyard dealers. When you come to inspect them, over 2,000 birds to select from; not picked out of a dozen. Also refreshment and teas provided at any hour for all clients. So don't be gulled by so-called specialists. Send to the largest British bird dealer in the world. All at working-men's prices. Linnets, Linnets, Linnets, ready for show bench. Real giants, well pencilled, good ground colour, Norwich type, real gems, same sort of Linnets that have won first prizes all over England which I have sent out, only 2/-; few extra specials, 2/6; Linnets, for contest singing, all in full song, taught under my well-known Cheshire champion, 1/6; a few extra specials, ready to win contests, 2/-; with book of instruction, new polished singing cage, packet of my extra special seed, 3/-; I can dispose of a few good catching Linnets, all well worked, used to nets, in full song, 2/- each; Goldfinches, English Peartree Goldfinches, all netted from the Cheshire fruit gardens, not foreign rubbish, 300 in stock; few large giants, well buttoned, good broad head, nicely tanned, long Yorkshire type, sure winners, 2/-; a few extra specials, 2/6; also a few Goldfinches, for catchers, used to nets, sure stoppers, in full song, 2/6. Large selection of Yellow Greenfinches, like Canaries, 1/-; grand Yellowhammers, 1/-; large Redpolls, 1/-. Over 500 splendid nestling Larks, real Cheshire Larks, all in full song, 1/-, 1/6; 200 house-moulted Larks, singing, 2/- each; 50 hand-reared young ones, all finger-tame, in full song, ready for contest singing, taught under the champion Lark of Cheshire, 2/6, with cage 3/6; or any other kind you require. Please write for Softbills or Hardbills of any other variety. Gentlemen, all I send out is on seven days' approval, cash or deposit. I am not a backyard dealer, so beware of imitators.—Send to Matthews, Bird Specialist and Judge, 24, Avenue-st. Aviaries, Portwood, Stockport, Cheshire.

A FEW OF MANY

reasons why you should purchase your birds from me. All are warranted Worcestershire caught, and this county is noted for producing best birds throughout England. Accurate description is given in each instance, all are sent on approval at my risk, and fullest satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded in full. I was the first advertiser to send all wild birds on approval, and also claim to have more Worcestershire birds through my hands than all other dealers together. (Imitators please copy, as usual.) I have a splendid lot of Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in pink of health and feather, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, 12 12/-; specially selected larger cocks, to moult for show, or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, 12 16/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, 12 7/-; grand large cock brown Linnets, every one warranted nut-brown backs and rose-red breasted, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, 12 4/-; specially picked cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, and warranted now in song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, 12 6/-; two-year-old cock Linnet, splendid call-bird, 2/-; cock Bullfinches, in perfect health, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, 12 4/-. Few exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Young cock Thrushes, guaranteed well on food, 1/6 each; cock Blackbirds, 1/6 each; hand-reared cock Thrush, finger-tame, and now in song, 3/-; magnificent lot cock Skylarks, steady and clean moulted, 9d. each, three 2/-; few guaranteed in free song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each; young Canaries, sex not guaranteed, 2/6 couple; Linnet, Goldfinch, or Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark cages, 6d., 8d. and 10d. each, 3/6, 5/- and 7/- dozen; Redpoll cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; single trap cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 8/- dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 11/- dozen, all with separate compartment for call-bird; singing box cages, 1/-, 1/4, 1/6, 1/9 and 2/- each; Thrush cages, 2/9 each; bow-fronted Lark cages, 2/- each. Dealers please send stamp for trade prices of cages. For all catching appliances see my advert. in Appliance column. Following few letters prove to you who is the man to give you satisfaction. Notice, full name and address, and also dates:—"34, Belvedere-st., Mansfield, August 10th. Sir,—Thanks for bird you sent. I am very pleased with it. I have found you a straightforward fancier, and wish you every success. Yours, H. Gilson." "Upper Outwood, Anslow, Burton, August 12th. Sir,—birds arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Yours, W. Moss," "Plaistow, Essex, August 14th. Sir,—Two Canaries arrived safe, and I am perfectly satisfied with them. Yours, W. Baker." "8, Park-rd., Henley-on-Thames, August 19th. Sir, Skylark arrived safe, it is a nice bird, and I think will make a good songster. Yours, A. Church." "Wear-terrace, Wilton-le-Wear, August 18th. Sir,—Birds arrived safe, and I am well satisfied. Yours, T. Sowerby." "Gordon House, Shotton Colby, August 19th. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in pink of condition. I am delighted with them, you will receive all orders from me for birds. Yours, Dr. J. W. Cross." "53, Raeburn-place, Edinburgh, August 12th. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived in pink of condition, and is doing well. Thanks for so nice a specimen. The cage is also wonderful value. J. Kirkcaldy." "14, Warrington-rd., Newtown, Wigan, August 19th. Sir,—Birds arrived yesterday, they are a fine lot. Allow me to thank you for the prompt businesslike manner you executed my order. They are far beyond expectation, and all future orders are yours. J. Maddock." "6, Stevenson-st., Oban, August 19th. Sir,— Birds arrived yesterday, but sorry to say one was dead in box. I am delighted with the other four, they are in pink of condition, and took water and seed immediately on getting out of box. This will not be last deal which I shall make with you, as price is reasonable, and the material good. Yours, D. Livingstone." (Now, please note sequel.—W. Gore.) On August 27th Mr. Livingstone writes as follows: "Sir, Just a line to thank you for the bird which you sent (free of cost), for the one which died in transit. I am very pleased indeed with my bargain, they are all now in pink of condition. The Bullfinches are beautiful. You will hear from me again. Yours, D. Livingstone." Kindly note, I have no connection whatever with any other advertiser nor do I buy from any advertising catcher. My catchers are stationed in various parts of Worcestershire, and the whole of their catches sent in to me, none being picked out by them at any time. All birds are properly netted, and guaranteed well on hard seed before sent out to customers.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved?" For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

WIVELISCOMBE.

This show was held on September 9th, and was a great success, the weather being splendid, and the attendance large. Messrs. Denling and Morant made a most excellent pair of secretaries, and they were ably assisted by a good staff of stewards, who looked well after the exhibits. Only two classes were given. Mr. T. Broomfield judged. We understand a protest was lodged against the 1st and 2nd in A.O.V. class because they were pairs.

CAN. (10): 1, spl, Mrs. Southcombe, Nor., nice colour and bloom, sweet head, wins well; 2, Robinson, Nor., nice wings, good colour, lovely feather; 3, r, Wehher, buff York., nice length, good tail and wings; vhc, hc, Gilling. A.O.V.: 1, spl, 2, Southcombe, grand pair of White Java Sparrows, lovely colour and feather; 2nd, Yellow Budgerigars, good condition; 3, Pitman, nice Goldfinch Mule; r, Ardagh; hc, Smith; c, Vickery.

GAERWEN (Anglesey).

Show held at Gaerwen School, September 11th, in connection with the Flower Show, etc., but only one class was provided for cage birds, the same as in previous years. We hope to see a few more classes in time to come. The show was held in the centre of Anglesey, a most convenient place for exhibitors. There were a good many visitors for this time of the year. Mr. Lewis, the energetic secretary, as usual, had everything in good order. Some excellent birds were brought together. Mr. Gladwin (Mottingham) judged, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. W. H. Williams (Llangoed) won the special with his well-known Crest.

CAN. (11): 1, spl, W. H. Williams, wing mkd. dark Crest, immense size and quality, good radiated crest, well through moult; 2, vhc, J. O. Williams, wing mkd. buff Yorks., rare length, style and quality, in grand form, vhc cl. ycll. Yorks., plenty of length; 3, Miss L. Roberts, Nor. cl. yell., nice type, well over perch; vhc, R. W. Roberts, wing tkd. Yorks., buff, good length, 2nd at Vaynol; vhc, Jones Bros., buff Yorks. hen, wing and neck mkd.; vhc, J. Williams, varieg. Yorks. Cin. green, plenty of length; hc, W. Roberts, Yorks. yell; hc, Jones, same variety, deep yell.

GLASGOW DERBY.

Under favourable weather conditions on September 11th, this annual show was held in the Grand National Halls, Main-street, Glasgow. Entries were about the average in number, and the members who took part in the competition in the judging. The worthy president was in attendance, and had a genial smile for everyone, and the painstaking secretary, Mr. Bullions, had the business well in hand. All that was required was three times the membership, and at least double the entries. We are glad, however, to learn that the leading fanciers in Glasgow have been awakened by this event, and have resolved to make an effort to intensify the interest in the Scotch Fancy Canary. The cup and gold medal were won by the president, Mr. Black, with an ideal model of a buff piebald hen, the runner-up being a yellow hen of Mr. Clarke's. The judges, Messrs. Nisbet (Galston) and Carlaw (Falkirk) officiated, and got through the work easily, their awards giving satisfaction. Among the visitors were the president of the City of Glasgow O.A.; Mr. McLellan, president of Glasgow Southern Confined; Mr. Fleming, secretary of that society; Mr. Hart, honorary president of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A.; Messrs. Brown (East Kilbride), McIlwain (Mount Florida), Ferguson (Renfrew), Calder (Springburn), Orr (Glasgow). Lang (Rutherglen), and others. The fair sex graced the show by their presence, and took a keen interest in the exhibits.

Club Reports.

WHITBURN AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

At a meeting of the above club held on September 10th, it was agreed to hold our first show on October 2nd, confined to a five-mile radius. The membership fee is 1/, and the entry money for show 3d. each bird. J. FORREST, Sec.

ASHINGTON AND HIRST C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held August 24th, at Station-road, Ashington, Mr. Thompson in the chair. Annual club show is fixed for November 13th, and will be held in the Harmonic Hall, Ashington. Mr Thos. Dixon (Bedlington Station), is expected to place the cards. We are to have a prize drawing in connection with show, 15 Canaries (singing) to be given away; tickets, 6d. each, which entitles holder to participate in draw, and also admits to show free.—G. R. HENDERSON, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting held at Nag's Head Cocoa House, September 7th, Mr. Crane in the chair. The schedule for annual show, after a slight addition, was passed. The Secretary read a letter from Mr. S. W. Birchley respecting his lime-light lecture on "The Birds of our Countryside," and asking for the co-operation of the members. We are now awaiting particulars re date, etc. The lecture should prove interesting and instructive to fanciers and non-fanciers alike. The discussion on the classification as per schedule was of a very animated description, and we are looking forward to a record entry, as we are catering very liberally The members all report a very successful season, and our extended radius should meet with a good response. The Secretary will be pleased to forward full particulars to anyone desirous of joining.—JAMES SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting held in Rooms, 142, High-street, Edinburgh, on September 4th. The president, Mr. John Young, was in the chair, others present being Messrs. W. Aitchison, J. McLay, J. Smeaton, J. Winter and the secretary. The president intimated that he would provide a president's prize, value £2, to be competed for at the patronage shows during the coming show season, and Mr. Aitchison offered to provide three novice prizes of 12s., 8s., and 4s. for competition at same shows. Both offers were accepted, and the donors were thanked for their gifts. The secretary read applications for club patronage from 13 societies, and, after due consideration, the following eight shows were selected, viz., City of Glasgow, October 15th and 16th; Dysart, October 30th; Kilmarnock, November 19th and 20th; Inverness, November 24th; Dundee, November 26th and 27th; Aberdeen, December 17th and 18th; Scottish National, December 31st and January 1st; Bathgate, January 15th. Points will count at each of those shows for the president's and novice prizes, and two silver medals will be granted by the club. In addition, two gold medals will be granted the club show at Aberdeen on December 17th and 18th. The international contest takes place at Preston on November 12th and 13th. A number of members have not paid their subscriptions yet, and I shall esteem it a favour if they will kindly do so as early as possible. I would also remind members of the existence of the special prize fund, and hope it may be considerably augmented ere the show season opens. Inquiries are invited from intending members.—J. BROWN, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Old Boar's Head, Manchester, on September 11th. A goodly number of members attended from Oldham, Glossop, Manchester, Middleton, Shaw, Hazel Grove, Rawtenstall, etc. No doubt we should have had even a larger meeting if it were not for the unfortunate clashing with a meeting of the Lancashire C.A. on the same date, some members belonging to both societies. A successful evening's business was gone through, a pleasing feature being a remark from our esteemed Chairman that our membership had exactly doubled since last season, and as we have several novices of the right stamp, prospects are very brigbt for the old Society. A letter from the Rochdale Good Intent O.S. was read, asking for special prizes, a hearty response coming in promises of specials from Messrs. Dewsnap, Garner, Fuller, Hampshire and Rukin. The last-mentioned gentleman's special of a cock chicken brought forth several jocular remarks as to age, etc., Mr. Dewsnap especially relating a good story as to the age of lamb some time ago sold at Glossop. Several pointed remarks were brought forward regarding the length of time it took the Secretary to get home from last meeting at Glossop. It was decided that the Secretary send a letter of thanks to Mr. S. R. Compston for his excellent lecture on the Lizard Canary. Novice classes for Lizards and Lancs. are promised for Rochdale Good Intent, and novice Lancs for Manchester, so that the novice will be catered for even better than last season, and possibly classes may be promised for other shows yet. So, novices, buck up and show what you can do to keep these classes. We have 37s. 6d. promised for a new Lancashire challenge cup; of course, much more is wanted, and I shall be pleased to receive any contributions to the cup fund from any fancier, and credit him with the same through the Fancy Press. Promised to cup fund: Mrs. J. Rukin 2/6, Messrs. John Garner 5/-, A. Wellings 5/-, J. Vickers 5/-, J. Dickinson 2/6, J. Swalwell 5/-, J. J. Brookes 2/6, J. Oldham 5/-, and J. Rukin 5/-; total, 37/6. The next meeting will be at Glossop on October 2nd, at Nelson's Hotel. I trust all members will try and attend, as some important business will by that time he ready. Subscriptions should be sent on to me at once, to be in time for special prizes. Still plenty of room for new members; subscription, 5/-, and many valuable cups, medals, etc., for competition. A vote of thanks brought an enjoyable meeting to a conclusion.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

Twitterings.

I should be glad to receive schedules of any future show, writes Mr. P. Crowther, 502, Ashton Road, Oldham.

I have moved to larger premises from No. 7, to No. 15, Back Lane, Barking, writes Mr. H. W. Barnard.

My address now is 279, Crow Road, Partick, Glasgow, writes Mr. Alex. Macdonald, secretary, Scotch Fancy Section of the City of Glasgow O.A.

The report of the Mule class at Ruthin Show, writes Mr. J. Williams (Ruthin) should have read: 1st, T. Williams, six pointed Goldfinch-Mule.

Kindly note for the convenience of secretarics that I have removed from Lochief Street, Glasgow, to Cart Land, Main Street, Bushy, writes Mr. Hugh Jardine.

I have received a grand lot of postcards for schedules, which I shall send out this week, hoping fanciers will excuse delay, writes Mr. Enoch Tams, show secretary, of the Longton C.B.S.

I have only just been able to execute the orders from my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. Brown (Whitchurch). I received in all 109 orders from the one insertion, thanks to your paper.

You will be pleased to know, writes Mr. J. Stredwick (Wood Green, London, N.), that I have received a nice order from Switzerland for my Yorkshires, as the result of my last advertisement in your paper, CAGE BIRDS.

All entries for the Edinburgh O.S. Club Show on October 9th, writes Mr. W. Macdonald Campbell, the hon. secretary, must be received by September 25th. Entry forms may be had of me, at 14, Clerk Street, Edinburgh.

Kindly thank all who made inquiries in answer to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, as I could not reply to the dozens who wrote me, writes Mr. D. Carstairs (Perth). It says a lot for CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium.

Mr. Sam Cook, Norwich Plainhead Cup Winner, 1908-9, writes last week: "Send 12lbs. of Royal Red; birds coming a grand colour." So don't forget Sandiford's Royal Red to finish off your birds. Price, 2s. lb., 2lbs. 3s. 5d., 5lbs. 7s. 6d. Hot Natal, 2s. lb., 2lbs. 3s. 8d. See other advertisements.—(ADVT.)

At the meeting of the London and Counties O.S., to be held on September 20th, at the Sessions House Hotel, Clerkenwell Road, E.C., writes Mr. W. Gilbert, the hon. secretary, a number of entirely new photographic slides of ornithological subjects will be shown. Fanciers and other friends are invited, and especially ladies.

The Green Canary Association have issued a syllabus of their 1909-10 events in the handy form of a pocket card. On September 23rd Mr. F. Handley is down to deliver a lecture on "Preparing Birds for Exhibition." Particulars of the monthly meetings may be had of the hon. secretary, Mr. S. Hadwin, 28, Pembroke Place, Liverpool.

Will all members of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S., writes Mr. H. W. Cook, secretary pro tem, kindly make a special note that the next meeting on September 23rd will be an extraordinary general one, at which we shall have under consideration a letter received from the secretary resigning his position, and the drawing up of the annual show schedule.

Mr. G. Crabb, our esteemed friend and treasurer, writing to me from his holiday retreat in West Runton, near Cromer, says that up to the present he has seen and noted no less than 38 different species of birds. This may interest your many readers, and that is the reason I ventured to send it along.—H. E. TRINGHAM, hon. secretary of the London and Provincial O.S.

I have found your paper, CAGE BIRDS, a great help to me, a novice. I read a year or two ago a reply given to some querist about feeding Greypates, to keep them in health. It read: Give inga and maw seeds at first, gradually weaning them on to crushed hemp, and that advice is worth being recorded in every bird-lover's book. It is a great success.—THOMAS CROWTHER (South Shields).

It may be of interest to the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Joseph Dawson (Carlisle), to know that a pair of Yellowhammers were found nesting at Belle Vue, near Carlisle, on September 9th. After disturbing the old bird, with a view to looking into the nest, it was found to contain only one egg. Surely this is rather late for this to happen? I shall certainly watch to see how they go on.

The Ayr and Dis. C.B.C. are only in their second year, and have been most fortunate in the matter of their patrons, writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, the hon. secretary. Mr. Robt. McKay, hon. president, has presented a cup for most points, and Mr. Christie (Glasgow) one for Crests. We have also been presented with a few medals. Mr. Dan Swan gives a washing exhibition at our meeting on September 20th, when we hope to see a great turnout of members.

Will those fanciers desirous of becoming members of Doncaster and Dis. C.B.S., please do so at once, writes Mr. G. Bescoby, the hon. secretary, as the entrance is free until October 1st. Afterwards 1s. entrance and 1s. per quarter will be the fee for membership, which is open to 5 miles radius. It was proposed at our last meeting to hold a members' show some time in November, date, etc., to be decided at our next meeting, October 13th, when we hope to have members' rule cards ready.

The 1909-10 rule-book, with the names and addresses (96 in all) of members of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, has just been issued. It is nicely produced, and contains, besides the rules and the members' names and addresses, the standard of excellence and scale of points, a grand list of trophies, money and other valuable specials for both open and novice competition, and a balance-sheet for the season 1908-9 showing funds in hand to the extent of £1 3s. 6d. The hon. secretary is Mr. O. Mitchell, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford, from whom particulars of membership, etc., may be had.

A very tastefully produced booklet, containing the rules and the names and addresses of the members, has been issued by the Yorkshire Canary Club. Members will note that the cups, medals and specials to be offered by the club during the forthcoming show season amount in value to no less a sum than £43 17s., on which they are to be congratulated. The club, judging from the 1908-9 balance-sheet, is in a flourishing condition, and the list of members is a really splendid one. The hon. secretary is Mr. John Greaves, to whom applications for membership should be made at 279, Hollings Road, Bradford.

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

Members of the Stratford and East London F.S., writes Mr. W. Maxey, the hon. secretary, are requested to note that there will not be any meeting on September 23rd, it having been cancelled on account of a local young stock show being held on that date, and the majority of members wanting to visit it. Our committee meeting, October 14th, will be changed into a general meeting, when it is hoped a good muster of members will be present, as our members' young stock show is arranged for October 26th. The following gentlemen have recently joined the society: Messrs. F. Wilson (Plaistow), J. Reed (Leytonstone), E. Oakes (Ilford), and G. Kempton (Romford).

The many exhibitors who have written for schedules will have them forwarded in due course, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, managers, Dulwich O.S. Show. (These applications prove the benefit of having show dates in your Fixture List.) The D.O.S. Show should prove especially interesting to Yorkshire fanciers, as both the Y.C.C. and S.Y.C.C. are supporting us, and that popular judge, Mr. W. Mundell, officiates. With Messrs. Vardy and Gardner judging the Norwich sections, and Mr. W. H. Vale the British and foreign, we think exhibitors, remembering our difficulties, will rally round and help us to make the show a record one. Novices will be specially looked after.

The following gentlemen have joined the Norwich Plainhead Club, writes Mr. J. Hopkins, the hon. secretary: Messrs. J. Wileock, E. W. Smith, J. Ellison, R. Anderson, A. Hirst, G. Bateman, Harrison, and Raynor, W. Midgley, A. Williams, F. Turner, W. Halls and J. Norman. Will any other intending members kindly let me have their names as early as possible so that they may be in time to compete for the grand list of specials (including the £1 1s. cash special for new members only), offered by the club, full particulars whereof they will find in CAGE BIRDS issue of September 4th? Will those members who have not yet paid their subscriptions oblige me by letting me have them at once? I am particularly anxious to have money matters straight before the show season opens so that there can be no question of anyones's not being eligible to compete for specials.

The Crested Canary Club.

In view of the generous programme placed before the Fancy by the Crested Canary Club, I venture to appeal to all members thereof, and any lady or gentlemen interested in the variety, to support our "Special" prize fund. I am pleased to acknowledge a subscription of 10s. 6d. from that well-known fancier and judge, Mr. Thomas Heath. Will any members who desire an advertisement in the club's rule book kindly communicate with me at once, or it will be too late.—J. S. CLARKE, hon. secretary and treasurer, "Sunnyside," Prospect Road, Woodford, N.E.

I have taken over the whole of the stock of Messrs. Bailey and Swanger (Bradford), writes Mr. J. Bailey (Bradford), and shall show in future as J. Bailey. I have close on 400 young birds; we have had a record breeding season.

The Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A., writes a correspondent who signs himself "A Scotch Fancy Breeder," have close on 250 entries for the annual event in the Grand National Halls, Main St., Gorbals, Glasgow, Saturday, September 18th, and quality is of exceptional merit. The classes throughout are strong, and competition will be keen. Mr. Wright, of Greenock, the esteemed president, has stuck well by the association, and he and his colleagues have done much for the Scotch Fancy Canary. To know Mr. Wright is to appreciate him.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a seporote sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no cose must the oddress appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries reloting to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt af a postol order for sixpence and an addressed stomped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling ond o stomped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards ore not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARY QUERIES.

Seed Samples, etc.

J. Tweedale.—The sample of Canary marked A is a very good all-round quality and quite good enough for anything. Sample B is smaller, rather thinner, and not so well ripened, therefore, although quite sweet, is inferior to A. For feeding Rollers add to the Canary a third part its bulk good summer rape, and give as a staple diet. Give separately twice a week a pinch of hemp to each, and vary this occasionally by giving instead half a teaspoonful of a mixture of hemp, inga, maw, and a sprinkling of linseed among the bulk, and now and again a kernel or two of sunflower or safflower seeds, broken into bits which the birds can manage. Twice a week give also a few crumbs of sponge cake, which you may vary by occasionally substituting a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, or a little egg-food. Give a little green food every second day as long as the weather is mild and no frost about from now until spring, and daily during the summer months. When green stuff is not available, or the weather renders it inadvisable, give a little sweet fruit as a substitute. Keep cages clean, well supplied with gritty sand, and free from draughts, but in a fresh, pure atmosphere.

A Question of Diet.

Hilda.—A staple diet of plain Canary only is best throughout the winter months. This should be given in unlimited quantity in the seed boxes. Give separately in the egg drawers a pinch of rape about every second day; twice a week give the cocks a half teaspoonful of hemp, and the hens a pinch of inga, and occasionally vary this by substituting a half teaspoonful of a mixture of hemp, inga, maw, millet, linseed, and now and again a few broken kernels of sunflower, or a few crushed oats or coarse oatmeal. The last two items, however, should only be given with any freedom to birds in large cages or flights. Once or twice a week give a little bread and milk, varied occasionally with egg food. Give a little green food three times a week when the weather is quite mild and free from frost, and when these conditions do not prevail, substitute a little banana or other sweet fruit. Birds should certainly not have iron in the water all the year round, nor at any time as long as they keep well and healthy. If run down and loose in feather, and at the close of the moulting season, a small crystal of sulphate of iron may be dissolved in the water two or three times a week with advantage, but the constant use of any drugs without real necessity is to be avoided.

Five in One.

J. W. Bolton.—(1) Yes, the weed is shepherd's purse, which is a great favourite with Canarics, as well as many British birds. (2) It is not in the least necessary to employ any heat at all to dry plantain stalks for use in winter. If you gather them in dry weather when they are getting brown or purplish with ripeness, spread them on a sheet of paper in the sun for an hour or two, then tie the stalks in bunches, put the heads in paper bags and suspend them from the ceiling in a dry and airy place; they will keep in perfect condition and finish ripening the seed, a large proportion of which will drop out into the paper bags, so do not omit the bags if you wish to save all the seed. Personally, I never found Canaries very partial to this seed when fully ripened and cleaned of the husk. (3) Where one finds tincture of aconite so freely prescribed, the ordinary tincture is obviously meant in the absence of any indication to the contrary. But as I very rarely advise the use of the drug, I cannot take responsibility of saying what anyone else may mean. (4) Syrup of buckthorn is a very safe and useful aperient which may be used when necessary to relieve constipation. It is most effective when the bird is out of order through too high feeding, or the excessive use of egg food. (5) I cannot tell whether black rape, English rape, and cole seed, are one and the same thing. The two former might be synonymous, but cole should certainly not be the same thing as rape. But one can never tell. An old friend of mine planted some "rape" seed and grew from it, if my memory serves me rightly, something like a dozen different species of plants, including such things as cabbage, cole, and turnip.

Started Moulting Again.

Miss Woodward.—It is most likely the moult last June was interrupted by some means towards the close, and that the bird is now simply completing the normal moult. As it appears in good health there can be nothing seriously wrong, so beyond taking ordinary precautions against draughts or chills you need not worry. Keep him in a fairly warm place until moult is quite finished, but see the heat is regular night and day, and the air pure and fresh. Avoid any position near the ceiling, or over a burning gas or lamp. Allow him to bathe as often as he likes, if he does not seem affected by it afterwards; otherwise only allow the bath in nice mild weather. Whilst it is moulting you might with advantage add to its present diet a piece of sponge cake about the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with maw seed twice a weeek, or, as a substitute, a bit of stale bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw seed. In about a month hence, or as soon as the feathers have ceased dropping, stop the maw seed, and give instead a pinch of hemp and a pinch of inga each once a week for a time. Keeping the seeds in a tin will not affect them in any way.

Norwich and Yorkshire.

Anxious.—You are quite on the wrong track. Instead of the birds suffering from diarrhœa, as you imagine, they are troubled with constipation. Unless you err in the quantity of different seeds given, I cannot see how your diet can be the cause of this, and suspect you must give something not mentioned. Have you been giving any egg food of any kind, or any iron in the water? The latter in particular might well be the cause. The following will put matters right in a short time: Plain Canary as a staple, half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, a fairly liberal supply of green food daily. Limit diet solely to this for a week, unless you are colour feeding the birds, in which case you must, of course, continue the daily supply of colour and soft food. In the drinking water give daily for three days, and every second day for the remainder of the week, ten drops of glycerine and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. At the beginning of the treatment catch the birds and drop one drop of olive or castor oil in the vent. Do this once only. Keep cages nicely strewn with clean gritty sand. If you have been giving iron of any kind in the water, stop this for the present, and only give it in considerably smaller quantity in future.

Hen Dying and Young Moping.

Peter.—Am strongly inclined to think the illnesses and subsequent death of your hen were due to a sudden chill either by being temporarily exposed to a cold draught, or by being in a situation exposed to draughts in certain conditions of weather. The cause of the young dropping their wings and seeming "thick" at times may also be accounted for by the same means, but in their case moulting would naturally make them appear rather thick and loose in feather, though thickness that is due to the moulting should be permanent rather than periodical whilst the moult lasts. The first and principal thing to do is to see the birds are fully protected from cold draughts at all times; that they are not exposed to sudden and violent changes of temperature; that the room and cages are quite free from damp; and that the cages are quite free from red mites. Then if any of those that remain show similar symptoms, you must move them to a fairly warm and comfortable place, being careful that the warmth is regular, and not hot during the day and cold at night. But see the air is pure and fresh, and not the exhausted emissions from around burning lamps or gas. Give first, by way of treatment, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb in the water daily for three days, and after this go on with twenty drops of whisky, and six each tincture of gentian and oxymel of squills in the water two days in every three for a week. Also add three drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the soft food every second day for a week.

The Value of Discretion.

Constant Reader.—Your letter ought really to have been sent to our Mr. Weston, but as it refers almost solely to my recent article on moulting, I will reply to it. In the first place, I am afraid you cannot have read my article very carefully, as I do not think you will find anywhere in it the advice which you say it gives, viz., "that birds accustomed to outdoor life should be left there all through the moulting season"—without some unmistakably qualifying term. Read the article again and see if you cannot find in the very first paragraph and right through the first instalment, qualifying expressions on the subject. Then under the heading "Abnormalities Considered," you will find certain instances referred to wherein it distinctly states that the subjects should not be put outdoors at all except for an hour or so when the weather is warm and sunny. I see nothing in your letter that is not fully replied to in the first instalment of the "Moult" article. Birds in cages are in a very different position to those in large aviaries as regards taking exercise to resist the effect of cold, and consequently cannot he so fully exposed to the elements, and all the vagaries of a fickle weather clerk, with safety. Certainly I should not advise you to hang out birds permanently, night and day, in hard frosty weather. I should rather regard it as refined cruelty to treat birds in cages in this way. Provided the weather is fair and sunny, your birds might be put out in the middle of the day during frost, but must not be left out permanently in such conditions.

Crests Going Thick, etc.

T. Williams.—The fact that one young bird is going thick after singing right through the moult until now, when it is nearly clean moulted, certainly does not show that the liberal dietary recommended is too rich. On the contrary, the diet has probably hitherto quite warded off the depressing effect of the moult. I should rather suspect it was suffering from a little constipation. Give it six drops each of syrup of buckthorn and syrup of rhubarb daily in the drinking water for two or three days, as may seem necessary, and after this give six drops tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water two days in every three for a week. Give pure water each third day. Do I understand you to say you give egg food three times a week, and also "sop food" twice a week? This is a little too often. Three times a week would be sufficient to give soft food in addition to the liberal seed diet advised, so that when you give sop it should be as a substitute for, and not an addition to, egg food. Stop the millet and coarse oatmeal, for a time at least, and reduce the linseed to a very light sprinkling; very few grains of this are sufficient at a time. The birds that have not quite recovered from the coughs will probably go on coughing a little, more or less, according to the prevailing weather, until the moult is finished. See there is no down-draught in your chimney to send fumes from the lamp into the room at intervals. Stop the medicines and give instead twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week after, if necessary. Also add two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion to their soft food each time for a week.

Red Mites and Asthma.

Cingalee.—Although you say you cannot find any trace of red mites on the bird, even with a lens, I think these pests are partly the cause of his condition. It is useless looking on the bird for them unless you looked a few hours after it had retired to roost. Examine the cage carefully, probing any small hole or open joint with a pin, and if you find the pest established, eradicate it as a first step. Keeping the cage in the window is doubtless the remaining cause. The fluctuations of heat and draughts, which are almost invariably very great in such a position, must be avoided at any cost if the bird is to recover. Having attended to these points, feed as frequently advised here for song birds, but instead of egg food give a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed twice a week. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of syrup of rhubarb daily for three days, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give twenty drops whiskey, six of oxymel of squills, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together. If the bird is not quite well in that time continue the last-named medicine, plus six drops of malt extract, for another week, or write again, referring to this reply. Of course, you must not expect it to sing until after the moult.

A Wrong Diagnosis.

A.M.J. (Cricklewood).—You were very decidedly on the wrong track in treating the first hen for egg-binding. I feel quite convinced that the sole cause of her trouble was over-feeding, and probably constipation as a natural consequence. Put her now on a diet of plain Canary only, with half a teaspoonful of summer rape on two different days, and a supply of green food daily, for one week. During this time give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and six drops of syrup of rhubarb in the water every second day. After this initial treatment give in the water for one week more six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and add to the staple diet of Canary half a teaspoonful of rape, given separately, every second day, a few grains of hemp or linseed once a week, and a half teaspoonful of egg food, or bread and milk, once a week. Give a little green food four times a week as long as the weather is favourable, and afterwards substitute a little banana, apple, or carrot, two or three times a week. This you will see is considerably modifying your present regime, but you should adhere to the scale given for the winter months with this hen, and also the rest of your stock. You ought not to have had any birds breeding now. Should the eggs now due to hatch prove unfertile, separate the birds at once; and even if young are hatched, should the hen show any signs of beginning to nest again, take away the cock if the young cannot do without the hen, or if the young are beginning to get out of the nest, and the cock feeds them well, leave him with them, and remove the hen right out of sight and earshot.

A Pumping Action.

Tom.—The birds are practically certain to be suffering from exposure to draughts, chills, or damp, or a combination of these. It is also likely the exposure is very great, or constantly recurring, otherwise it is difficult to account for birds of the year being already so afflicted. You ought to have given me some idea how they are fed and treated. However, first of all, place the affected birds in a fairly comfortable position, quite out of the reach of draughts, but yet where the air is pure and fresh, and the warmth regular—not hot by day, or in the evenings, and correspondingly cold at night. The temperature need not necessarily be high so long as it is regular, and not really cold. Keep cages clean, and nicely strewn with clean gritty sand, and see they are perfectly free from red mites. Only allow the bath in quite mild weather until the birds are better. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple, and give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of summer rape to each. On the alternate days give a small piece of banana instead of green food, and a bit of bread sopped in hot milk, sprinkled with a little soft sugar and a pinch of maw seed. Limit diet to this for two or three weeks. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and six drops syrup of rhubarb daily for three days, and after this give twenty drops of whiskey, five each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week or fortnight afterwards as may appear necessary. If the birds are not quite well after this write again, referring to this reply. Also say how you have been feeding them, and where they were kept, prior to this.

Brevity.

Not Singing (Ignorant Woman).—It seems clear the bird has been ruined by violent changes of temperature, and probably draughts. It is very doubtful whether he will ever recover. To give him the best chance, keep him in a fairly warm place to advance a speedy and good moult, but see the warmth is regular night and day, and do not move the bird about. Strictly avoid chills, and any situation exposed to the heat and fumes of a burning gas or lamp. See the cage is perfectly free from red mites. Feed as frequently advised for song birds, and keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of buckthorn daily for three days, and after this twenty drops of whiskey, five each tincture of lobelia æth., and oxymel of squills, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, two days in every three for a fortnight, and every second day for another fortnight. Report progress at end of month, and refer to this reply.

A Starling's Troubles.

L. Watkins.—If you really think there is something in the Starling's throat, you might try dipping a smallish feather in salad oil, putting it well down the throat and turning it round once or twice. This will aid the bird to throw it up, and do no harm, anyway. Get someone to hold the beak widely open. If the bird has only a slight cold, then well mix a tablespoonful each of thick honey (not the refined) and glycerine, and stir a teaspoonful into each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. You can't sex young Starlings with any certainty. The adult hen carries much larger spangling than the adult cock, and is much duller in sheen, while the latter in the spring has a yellowish bill, and his spangling then is often very minute in character.

Siberian Goldies Abroad.

U.S.A. Goldie.—I have never had the pleasure of visiting the United States, but cannot see that Russian and Siberian Goldfinches would require any different treatment out there than they get here in England. These foreign Goldfinches appreciate the same seeds and delicacies as our British Finch, but need indulging less freely with fattening, stimulating foods—especially so during hot weather. A good stock mixture would be hemp and teazle, three parts each, Canary two parts, and linseed one part, with just a sprinkling of charlock and summer rape. Give a little maw and niger frequently, also a good feed of white sunflower seeds (cracked if necessary) —not all at one time, of course, but one or other daily. Thistles, hardheads, dandelion, flowering groundsel and chickweed and other wild seeds, are all good for them, and appreciated. Many Siberians are lost through wrong treatment when first bought. They are immediately put in a cage with food and water hung outside, consequently they may starve or die of thirst, never before having seen a waterhole. Seed and water should always be put inside to them, and it should be seen they get at the same. Inga (niger) seed is their staple food during importation, and they must have an unlimited supply of this, and maw seed, at first. When they have got the taste for sunflower seed (it comes quickly, for they are very fond of it, and it is a grand food for them) gradually wean them off the niger. Also, don't give grit freely at first. They will simply "gorge" it; and then comes trouble. (2) Either kind of teazle can be used, providing it is well ripened and free from mustiness. (3) You can only spray him. He will bathe in the hot weather. Different kinds of bathing utensils might be tried. (4) The above feeding should be sufficient, with, in addition, the special mixture advised "A.G.D." last week. (5) With regard to the bowel trouble, should a bird seem to droop at any time, give it at once a dose of sulphate of soda for one day, as much as will lie on a shilling, dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water. Repeat the day after, if necessary. Follow this with a course of citrate of iron and quinine crystals, as a tonic, a tiny pinch (just a few granules) dissolved in the same quantity of water. Watch its effects on the bowels; it is constipating when given too strongly.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

The Redpolls.

Novice.—A Redpoll, whether the Mealy or the Lesser, should be moulted on the same lines as the Linnet. One of the best possible seed mixtures is: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, summer rape and charlock one part each, linseed half a part, by measure. During the moult add one part of hemp, and towards the finish of the moult increase the proportion of linseed to one part. Also give a little maw seed now and again, and a little niger, too, while wild seed mixture is very much relished, and can be given freely during the moult. Seeding green food, such as shepherd's-purse, chickweed, knotgrass, plantain, etc., is very good for them, and these things, too, require to be given more freely during the moult than at any other period. In fact, it is a free supply of them, and a free use of the bath, which put colour into, and gloss on to, the plumage. These wild seeding plants should be gathered fresh as often as possible, and the more minute, crawling insect life there is about them, the better for the birds. Redpolls also like thistle and hardheads. On such a diet they will come into condition and on to song at the earliest possible moment after the moult is over. To "force" them, use the special mixture advised "A.G.D." last week. A Mealy Redpoll must certainly not be colour-fed; the bird should be, in my own opinion, mealy in colour, as its name indicates. No doubt many Lessers get some colour-food given them (see other replies given recently concerning colour-feeding), but it is not essential, by any means. Broadly speaking, the chief differences 'twixt Mealy and Lesser lie in size and colour—the former is a very much larger and greyer-coloured bird.

A Bullfinch for Show.

Puzzled.—A seed mixture alone is of no use in "getting up" a Bullfinch for show; much more depends on the wild seeds and berries and the way in which he is moulted. Many fanciers hold that it is not necessary to colour-feed a Bullfinch to have him a good enough colour to exhibit, providing one gets hold of the right coloured bird to start with. But I fancy many of the owners of show Bullies give them a little sweet pepper. It can be given amongst their seed (note the many replies on colour-feeding recently given) if the bird won't eat soft food. If natural colouring agents be used, Bullies should have a free daily supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries (in both red and black stages) and privet berries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash (rowan), dew and other berries, black currants, and cherries, etc., to say nothing of the wild seeding plants, I am so frequently recommending, such as ripe plantain, dock, thistles, heather tops (where possible), shepherd's-purse, chickweed, mouse-ear, groundsel tops, etc. Let your bird bathe freely. A most important point in the production of gloss on the plumage is a free use of the bath. A bird which is not a free bather never comes out so polished as one that revels in cold water. If your Bullie is lax in this respect, he must be lightly sprayed every day with a fine sprayer (such as barbers use for bay rhum, etc.), which may be bought from most fanciers' specialists advertising in our columns. Never drench the bird. The stock seed mixture should be canary three parts, teazle two parts, linseed, summer rape and charlock one part each, by measure. Sunflower and safflower seeds should be offered fairly liberally, cracked, if necessary. Don't give hemp. Your Norwich Canary question will be answered next week by Mr. St. John (note rules).

An Exhibition Nuthatch.

Weekly Reader.—It is not easy to give by description an idea of any exhibition bird. For instance, essential points of the exhibition Nuthatch are size, shape, and markings, and these can only be gauged by comparison with other specimens. It needs to be as large as possible, with a bold chest and broad skull (not a thin bird), while the slate-blue and warm brown tints in the plumage must be as rich as possible, the white parts pure, and the eye-streak dense and well-defined. The female resembles the male, but is much paler all over in her colours. Steadiness is another very important show point. There is no regulation size and pattern of show cage. A box pattern cage, about 16in. long by 14 high by 9 wide, would answer well, with a piece of bark (as flat as possible) fixed to the back so that the bird cannot get behind it, and water and food vessels which fit inside, preferably swinging from the front. The inside and wires should be enamelled a warm cream colour. In the stock cage I strongly advise you to have two pieces of cork (or "bark," as some term it) and change them fairly frequently, thoroughly scalding the one last used with boiling water, or stoving it for a time in a fairly warm oven. This is necessary to keep down insect pests. The bird is very fond of bathing, and should be allowed to freely. Its main food should be good quality insectivorous mixture, such as is supplied to small softbill birds, moistened with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, or other green-food. Several very good "soft-foods" will be found advertised in our columns. Suitable live-foods must also be given, according to season, and a few small nuts (cracked, if necessary) and sunflower and hemp seeds. One particular favourite I had, possessed a wonderful appetite, and very varied tastes. He liked (in addition to the above things) hard-boiled eggs, bits of cake, currants and things, all sorts of nuts (especially the mixed shelled nuts from the greengrocers), mealworms, live ants' eggs, wasp grub, gentles, flies and tiny beetles, and many kinds of fruit, peeled grapes being a "speciality."

Brevities.

Colour-Feeding a Goldfinch (Anxious).—I have discussed this matter frequently of late. There is no "must" about it. It is for every owner to please himself. I hold that a colour-fed Goldfinch has no advantage over a non-fed bird for show purpose—very much the contrary, in fact, if the colour-feeding has been overdone. At the same time, if a fancier likes to heighten the colour of the wing bars, he can certainly do so.

A Light Mule (C.E.L.).—Your Mule is certainly very lightly marked, but its value depends even more upon its sex, size, and shape. Hens, for instance, fail in colour and generally in size, and are of small value compared with cocks. There are so many very good light cock Goldfinch Mules being exhibited now. Your bird should certainly be colour-fed for show purposes, whether cock or hen; if the latter, however, it might not be worth the time and cost involved. I hope it may turn out to be a "champion" for you. A Mule requires to be at least two years old before it is really at its best for show purposes.

Identity of Bird (Arion).—I think that for once the catcher was quite right; the description you give leads me to say with certainty that the bird is a Spotted Flycatcher, and not one of the Chat family. If this identification is correct, then the bird will have a very wide gape and very pronounced rictal bristles—hall-marks of the Flycatcher family. I do not think you will get much satisfaction out of it as a cage pet, for the Spotted Flycatcher (unlike its prettier and more rare relative, the Pied) has no song. Its mannerisms, however, are highly interesting.

A Young "Mule Canary" (H. Timms).—I really do not know what you mean by a young "Mule Canary," unless you are under the impression that a Canary having dark feathers is a "Mule Canary." But a Mule is one bird and a Canary another bird; no bird can at one and the same time be both. The notes of all young birds are "weak," and if your own bird was bred this season you cannot expect it to sing out loudly until it has gone through the moult and recovered from the effects of this. A little egg-food twice a week (or one of the "egg-breads" advertised in our columns) will help the bird. You do not tell me how you are feeding it, but a little hemp and maw, with a few cracked sunflower seels, now and again, should be given, as "tit-bits."

A Strange Bird (F. Olley).—Your description is a bit puzzling, but I should hazard a guess that you have come into possession of a young Linnet-Canary Mule. It not infrequently happens that Mules escape from the bird-rooms or aviaries of fanciers and gain the open country, to be then snared by a catcher amongst a flock of Linnets, etc. Still, this is merely a guess. Anyway, I can think of no British bird which fits in with the description you give. Still, you may have come across an escaped Foreign bird of some kind. I may say I have myself this summer had the misfortune to let escape three or four fine young Mules, including a dark Greenfinch, a dark Linnet, a dark Goldfinch, and a lovely cinnamon Goldfinch. Quite an addition to our country's avi-fauna! What has become of them, goodness only knows.

Thrush Not Moulting (Loco H.B.).—It often happens that certain birds are late in commencing to moult, or hang in the moult, although kept under similar conditions to other birds which moult early and without hitch. There is no accounting for individual idiosyncracies of this nature. Of course, it is not particularly late yet; I expect there are many other Thrushes besides your own which have as yet not began to cast their coats. If you were to remove the bird's cage to the corner of a room near a fire (a warm corner), and gradually cover over the cage until the bird is practically in the dark, I think you would find this procedure soon result in the feathers beginning to fall freely. The little unsteadiness you speak of will disappear with the moult, I feel confident.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Treatment for Grey Parrot.

G. Goodwin.—This bird is suffering from the effects of improper diet, and it will be a work of time and patience getting it into condition again. The only method is to diet strictly as below, and to give alternately Parrish's Chemical Food and Dinneford's Magnesia, the magnesia to be given (one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water) every other day so long as the voidings are not watery. When this occurs the interval between the doses must be lengthened. The chemical food may be given in the proportion of one part to three of water. Diet: Seed mixture, Canary, hemp, wheat, paddy rice, small maize, dari, and sunflower seeds; well mix and always keep a supply in the cage; also give regularly at intervals during the day, to vary the diet, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, such greenfood as it will eat, with cuttlefish, grit and water for drinking and bathing. A little cooked potato is permissable, but it must be given free from fat of any kind; bread may be given, but it must not be buttered and should be stale; soaked biscuit is satisfactory, but it should only be moistened (in water) only, and not saturated. Twigs, cotton reels, etc., for the bird to cut up are very useful in such a case as yours. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. See other Parrot replies.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

Hirondolle.—The front of the roofed-in portion should be glazed and boarded up (it must be well lighted or the birds will not use it), with two openings, say, 1½ by 5ft. equi-distant, for ingress and egress and cleaning purposes, etc.; these apertures will not need doors. All glass must be covered with wire netting on the inside, as birds do not appear to recognise glass as an obstruction. You can then leave the birds outside all the year round. You would find my booklet, "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful (see advert.). The Cockatiels are quite safe, but do not let the fine appearance of Budgerigars tempt you to include these, as sooner or later they mischievously kill or mutilate birds of the Finch tribe. Finches: Zebra, Ribbon, Spice, Rufous-tailed, Long-tailed Grass, and Grey and Green Singing Finches. Munnikins: Bronze, Black-headed and Magpie, Grey and White Java Sparrows, Silverbills, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey, Zebra, St. Helena, and Orange-cheek Waxbills. Save for such species as you can purchase from some outdoor aviary where they have been out-of-doors all the summer, you must not put new purchases out-of-doors at this time of the year, but wait till next Spring. Pleased to assist you at any time.

A Northern Aviary.

D.R.A.—I should advise putting in the hot-water pipes as you suggest. Put a shelf over the pipes and then case them in with wire netting to prevent birds perching on the pipes. The narrow shelves will make cosy roosting quarters in severe weather. The East end of aviary should also be board and glass; the front of the roofed-in portion should also be boarded and glazed; it must be well lighted or birds will not use it. Leave an opening in the middle of each section, say 2ft by 5ft.; this will supply the birds with ingress and egress, and also yourself for cleaning purposes, etc. With such provision the birds named below should thrive and increase. Aviary with 8ft. by 4ft. flight and shed will accommodate 40 birds; the other aviary will accommodate three pairs of Parrakeets and three or four pairs of Budgerigars. Finches, etc.:—Ruficauda, Ribbon, Zebra, Spice, Yellow-rump, Long-tail Grass, Red-headed and Saffron Finches, Grey-necked Serin; Diamond Doves, Zebra Waxbills, Common and Green Avadavats, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Java Sparrows, and Silverbills. Parrakeets: Rosella, Red-rump, and Cockatiels, with two pair Yellow and one pair Green Budgerigars; with these you could keep, say, half-a-dozen Cardinals, Starlings and Thrushes, or a mixture of all three. Unless you can purchase from some outdoor aviary, which you should be able to by advertising, you must defer stocking your aviary till Spring.

Brevities.

Show Cages for Rock Parrot and Orange Bishop (C.T.).—You will require a cage for the Rock Parrot not less than 18 inches long, 12 inches deep, and 30 inches high, the perch to be so fixed that head is clear of top and tail of bottom of cage. For the Orange Bishop a cage 10 to 12 inches long, 9 inches deep, and 12 inches high, will suffice. Consult our advert. columns and write one or more of our advertisers for lists. A visit to some local show would also be of much assistance, as you would then see the various types of cages and note how they suited their occupants.

Treating a Sick Gouldian (Foreign Bird).—Your treatment is very satisfactory, but can well be carried further. Keep bird warm and out of draught (yet where it will get fresh air). Keep bowels well regulated by judiciously using Dinneford's Magnesia; also give two drops pure olive oil direct to beak. If it will take it, supply milk sop daily; prepare it with boiled milk, and add a little Mellin's Food or Scott's Emulsion. Supply this till bird is fit again. In addition to Canary, white and spray millet, supply ripe fruit (such as it fancies—try pear, apple and banana), seeding grass, fresh and tender lettuce, paddy rice, and a few crushed oats. The cage should be roomy and fitted with twiggy branches. If bird appears weak, stimulate it with very weak brandy and water. Probably exhaustion from effects of moulting may be responsible.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

An Indisposed Lovebird (E.T.).—I consider it would be best to painlessly destroy this bird, as I fear any recovery can be but partial, and the bird would remain more or less a cripple. However, you can give it Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water), every other day so long as the voidings are not watery. In between, that is, when not giving the magnesia, well colour drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food and continue till the bird is fairly fit again. Of course, it must be caged separately, and a dry turf or piece of peat would be a good feature at one end of cage. But if the bird were mine I should destroy it.

Green Parrot not Fit (Toby).—Heat is not needed so long as it is kept out of draught. Soft food (I do not gather what kind) should not be given, as regards diet. The reply to "G. Goodwin" will fully meet your case; note also warning against slops and table scraps. Give it a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia twice weekly for a couple of months—one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water—in between, that is, when not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food and continue this till the bird is thoroughly fit again. If it is merely partly digested food the bird brings up and then re-swallows, this is perfectly natural.

Rosella Parrakeet with Overgrown Beak (J. Spall).—Overgrown beak usually occurs from a lack of cuttlefish, hard wood, etc., for bird to exercise its beak on. The lower mandible will have to be trimmed, and if you are not accustomed to performing this fairly simple operation, seek the assistance of a "vet.," or some local fancier who is accustomed to trimming beaks of birds. A "vet." should be the better, as he would have proper tools for the operation to hand. In future, keep a piece of clean cuttlefish, small lump of hard mortar rubbish, and a piece of some kind of hard, non-splitting wood in cage or aviary, and the bird should keep its beak in condition on these.

Parrot with Swollen Feet (Elephantis).—Soak feet in hot (of course, not scalding) water for from, say, five to ten minutes, dry them, and while moist paint with whisky, using a camel-hair brush, which should be well cleansed after each occasion. Apply treatment twice daily. Its bowels should be kept moving freely, but the voidings should not be watery. Dinneford's Magnesia is a good regulator, one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water. Do not give this two days running, but merely at intervals as required.

Only Partial Success (J.T.).—I cannot give you really helpful advice without knowing something of the way you feed and treat them, and where they are kept. The cause of your young dying at from 8 to 10 days old may be due to many things, but the most likely is that the hens stopped feeding them, and probably wanted to start nesting. This is almost, if not quite, invariably the result of injudicious feeding and management. If you will send me the above particulars therefore, and also say whether the young usually died with food in the crop, and what green food you gave the parents, I shall be pleased to give you all the assistance I can. The best advice I can give you now is to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from this office, and digest contents. Of course, the birds should be separated, and no further attempts made at breeding until March or April.

A "Stately" Trio ("U.S.M.Q.").—(1) It may be within the bounds of possibility to obtain the eggs you name fresh in England and export them to the States, where they might hatch successfully, but I do not think the probability very great. Anyway, you must not regard it as an easy matter to be accomplished every day. I should say that Finches offer the least and Budgerigars the greatest prospects of success, though it seems scarcely worth while experimenting with the last-named when the birds themselves are so cheap. (2) No, Paprika and tasteless pepper are not the same thing. The former is what one might call a semi-cold pepper. It is warm, but not hot like Natal, nor yet cool like the pure tasteless red peppers. (3) The sample (which you say is known in the States as both inga and thistle) is a rather pure sample of inga.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (S. Thacker).—Bird fever. You seem to be doing everything possible to get rid of the infection.

Greenfinch (Miss Foster).—Softening of liver ending with rupture of blood-vessels of that organ. Nine years is a long time to keep a Greenfinch; but even these hardy birds will not live for ever.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor

Cutting (J.H.J.).—Accept our thanks for your kindness.

Yellowhammer-Canary Hybrids (J. C. Eagleton).—We hope to deal with this matter next week.

Sudden Death to Red Mites (W.E.G.).—We appreciate the joke, but dare not let it see light of day. It might bring the R.S.P.C.A. down on us!

Cage Making (Porter).—The subject of cage-making is dealt with in "Aviaries, Bird-rooms and Cages," post free 2s. 3d. from this office (cloth bound and fully illustrated).

Canaries Wholesale (Roffe).—The absence of replies may be due to the fact that you did not enclose a business (trade) card. You could certainly write the advertiser mentioned and see if he would supply smaller quantities.

In Return for a Loan (M.W.M.).—Not knowing the parties concerned, we are afraid it is beyond us to suggest what "would be considered a fair return" for a loaned Canary. It is one of those things best settled beforehand. Glad to hear of your success.

Prize Money at the Dulwich O.S. Annual Show (M.T.).—It seems to us that the matter of alleged grievances arising out of the above show has now had ample ventilation in the Press. With regard to the Cage Bird Union patronage, this you could very well bring direct to the notice of the secretary of that body to he dealt with by them.

A Remedy (E. Charles).—We do not quite understand your question, but may say that we believe the only way to fully protect your remedy is to patent the same. You can get full particulars by writing the Patent Office, Chancery-lane, London, W.C.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Meeting held September 11th, President C. R. Drysdale in the chair. The entries for exhibition were taken. The following gentlemen kindly volunteered their services as committee for show day: Messrs. J. McLennan, W. Thornton, J. Robertson, J. Dalgleish, P. Blair and P. McNiven. The closing date for receiving entries has been extended to Monday, 20th September, positively the last day, as all matter for catalogue must be in printer's hands then, in order to be got ready in time. The attendance of members was somewhat less than usual, no doubt accounted for by the Budget demonstration in the city. Our general meeting will be held very shortly after show, and I earnestly appeal to members to turn out in large numbers.—J. R. MEIKLE, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, August 26th, Mr. Metcalfe in the chair. It was decided that Mr. Wellings take the whole of the Green classes at Altrincham. The drawing-up of the syllabus for 1909-10 was then proceeded with. A new feature in the shape of a novice night show was arranged, and a host of medals and cash promised for this event, which looks like being very popular. Mr. Brunskill (Darlington) was present, and on being asked to speak by the Chairman, spoke of the pleasure it gave him to be amongst such a sterling lot of fanciers as the men of Liverpool and district, and to receive such a kindly reception when visiting their rooms. Commenting on the syllabus, he said they in the North had a system of novice night shows running through the season, and the points gained in the aggregate counted for a good special given for competition throughout the shows. This had been found a good plan for bringing the members together and for bringing out a good entry at each show. Mr. Brunskill found that judging pairs was a very difficult matter, it being impossible to say what any individual pair would throw without knowing something of the pedigree of the birds. Mr. Brunskill had "knocked about" a good deal lately, and found that whilst in the old days most fanciers kept a little Green blood in their rooms for colour producing purposes, they were now breeding for Greens pure and simple. Whilst recognising the great strides the Norwich Greens had made during the past few years, he did not think the Yorkshire Greens were so good in colour as formerly, this no doubt being due to the introducing of light blood for type purposes. Mr. Brunskill advised the members to visit as many shows as possible and dress the Greens with the visitors. If they did so, they would not only popularise the Green as a variety, but would also open up a market for their surplus stock. He was glad to see the patronage for this year so well distributed.—S. HADWIN, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

West of Scotland N. and B.F.C.M.B. and F.B.A. monthly meeting, held September 4th, in Nelson's Hotel, Glasgow, President C. Hunter in the chair. A large number of cups and trophies were on the table for inspection, and it was agreed to get two silver rose bowls and a silver flower pot for the Crest, Border and Mule sections of annual show. Messrs. W. Woods, F. Haddow and J. Nime were enrolled as new members. An exhibition of cage making will be given at the next meeting by Mr. A. Lennie. Mr. Hunter then gave a washing exhibition, and put two birds through the operation in a few minutes' time, showing and explaining the different positions of holding the birds during the process. The roll book is still open, and fanciers of Crests, Borders and Mules should enrol now to enable them to compete for these handsome trophies.—GEO. SMART, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND

Meeting held August 31st in Duncan's Restaurant, London-street, Glasgow, a good number of members being present. As the club had granted the application for patronage made by the City of Glasgow O.A. for their forthcoming open show, the members were a little disappointed with the classification offered, and after a discussion it was unanimously agreed to withdraw patronage unless that club extended their confined Yorkshire classes by adding a hen class to the two already offered. An application by Paisley O.A. was unfortunately sent after closing date for receiving same. The following shows are under our patronage:—Kelty, October 23rd; Ayr C.B.A., October 30th; Glasgow and West of Scotland, November 12th and 13th; Kilmarnock, November 19th and 20th; Dundee, November 26th and 27th; Alexandria, December 11th; and Aberdeen, December 17th and 18th; with City of Glasgow, October 15th and 16th, providing they accept our terms.—F. BOWMAN, Hon. Sec.

GREENWICH & DEPTFORD C.B.S.

Meeting held September 9th, to consider a letter received from the secretary resigning his position, owing to lack of support. The matter was thoroughly gone into, and it was proposed that the secretary pro. tem. be requested to write to Mr. Hamer, asking him to kindly withhold his resignation until there was an opportunity of calling an extraordinary general meeting, when the subject could be more fully gone into. All present were loud in their praises of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Hamer in the past, and they trusted that, notwithstanding the way they had treated him, he would not resign his position, as if he did, we should lose a valuable servant, and they were sure they could not readily find another equal to take his place. The chairman (Mr. Meades) proposed that the drawing up of the annual show schedule he left over until the next meeting, on September 23rd. The Young Stock Show balance-sheet was passed as read. Seven signed the attendance book; meeting closed 10 p.m.—H. W. COOK, Hon. Sec., pro. tem.

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oaks) O.S.

Meeting held in the Cloak Room, Town Hall, on 4th. Sept., Mr. Johnston in the chair. The following new members were proposed: Messrs. Jarvie, Morrison, M'Kendrick, Kilpatrick, and three others. The show rules were discussed, and adopted, except that the prize money is reduced to 6s., 4s., and 2s., and entry fee to 1s., per bird, as the show is to be a members' show only. The rule governing the issue of prize money in the classes with not more than 7 and 4 respectively, was amended to read "Half prize money given in not more than 7 classes, and half of 2nd and 3rd prize money given to 1st and 2nd prize winners in not more than 4 classes." Morocco cards were also abolished for this show, and the cards issued will be free. Catalogues are to be unmarked this year. Members who are not on duty on the show date will be admitted to gallery up to 1 p.m., after that time they will be allowed into the body of the hall. They must bring their members' receipt, or he otherwise identified before admission. The classification (revision of) is held over until next meeting. The subscription sheets were next discussed, and various alterations suggested. The following gentlemen were appointed the official collectors to the society to receive 20 per cent. on all amounts (except specials) collected: Messrs. J. B. Smith and A. M'Kendrick. This closed a very interesting and instructive meeting. The President and Mr. Haddow occupied the chair during the latter half of the evening.—A. CANT, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger-street, on September 2nd, Mr. Currah presiding. As there appears to be some doubt about the sections novice members can show in at our forthcoming show, they are reminded that they have the privilege of showing in all three sections, i.e., the open, members' and novice members'; but they will not be allowed to make three entries with any one bird. They can show a bird in the open and transfer it into the members' or novice members' class, as they choose. Birds shown in members' classes must be young ones, and bred by the exhibitor, excepting British and Foreign birds. The following were made members: Messrs. G. Graham (Newbiggin-by-the-Sea) and James Parkinson (West Jesmond). Mr. Hutchinson read a letter from Mr. Dodds, secretary of the Northumberland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, re better protection for British wild birds. Our members wish the close season to be extended to the 1st September instead of the 1st August as at present. It was announced that a lantern lecture would be given by Mr. Birchley in the Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook, on 22nd and 23rd of September, when it is hoped he will receive the support of both Newcastle members and members of neighbouring societies. Mr. Currah was appointed show manager. It was arranged to hold meetings fortnightly until our show on October 22nd and 23rd. In the meantime, it is hoped members will do all they can to maintain our reputation for "specials." Those who reside at a distance desirous of giving one, will oblige by communicating with the secretaries.—CURRY AND HUTCHINSON, Hon. Secs.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

Sir,—I saw a letter in your last week's issue from a person signing himself "A Provincial Member." Would he be good enough to state what he is a member of, for I do not think that any Cage Bird Society would care to admit any man who would be afraid to write over his own name. Neither would they be foolish enough to allow themselves to be advised by such a person, although a fool's advice might be the best of any.

Making a Suitable Frame for Punched Bar Cage-Fronts.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space to ask if some of your numerous readers will kindly give an illustration of how they make their punched bar fronts, and what kind of frame they use to fix bars in? I have made a few in frame similar to a picture frame, and have stood the frame up and put wires in from the top. I sawed a slit in the top and middle bar nearly to end of frame, but found when I took the fronts out that they were not upright or level.

One Willing to Learn.

For Members of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S.

Sir,—It is with great regret that I hear of the intended resignation of Secretary Hamer of the above society. I feel sure, notwithstanding the fact that the members have not supported him as well as they should have done, they esteem his valuable services, and would be sorry to lose him. It is to be hoped he will reconsider his decision, and stick to them, looking for better support in the future. Should this letter reach the eye of any member of the G. and D. C.B.S., it would be as well for him to carefully read it through, as I feel sure he will understand how hurtful it is to the feelings of the Secretary to find when he turns up at a meeting that there are only two or three in attendance; and this has occurred, I believe, more than once when a lecturer has been advertised to be present, which is an indignity to the Lecturer and to the Secretary. I understand an extraordinary general meeting is to take place on September 23rd, and it is to be hoped that all members will do their utmost to attend. It has been uphill work for this society this last two years, and the genial secretary, Mr. Hamer, is not to be envied his position during this period, as he has done more for the society than any of the members can possibly conceive. Now, members, turn up in full force on the 23rd, and put on record your appreciation of his services. You cannot afford to lose a valuable servant.

Rearing Insectivorous Birds on Soft Food Mixtures.

Sir,—I was very much interested in Mr. W. E. Teschemaker's letter on this subject. Many of us know he is an experienced aviculturist, and takes the keenest interest in all that appertains to bird-keeping. But his communication, although at first it gives a sweet flavour, ends by leaving a bitter taste behind. He tells us what he does not feed his birds upon. Perhaps he will now inform us what he gives them? If he will, I feel sure every one of your readers will be grateful to him.

Enquirer.

Sir,—Mr. Teschemaker is surprised that no one has taken Mr. Finn to task for his remarks anent the rearing of young Softbills on soft food. I take it there are two classes of people who read his advice—those who know and those who don't know better. Those who know passed his remarks by for what they are worth. Those who do not know would see nothing particularly wrong in them. I agree with every word Mr. Teschemaker says. For years and years I have written the same thing, but in vain. Some people think (who, by the way, have never probably bred a Softbill) that anything they say is infallible. A few weeks ago an "Oddment" was thrown to me anent my Sacred Kingfishers. Why did not Mr. Farrar try raw meat? I might have answered, "Because Mr. Farrar had respect unto his birds." However, I refrained my lips and kept silent, though it was pain and grief to me. But I remember enough of my old friend Juvenal to cry, Semper auditor tantum nunquamne reponam. Must I always be a listener, and say nothing? No; for the sake of the dickies yet unborn, I will join my protest to that of Mr. Teschemaker. As an old, and probably one of the most successful rearers of softbills, I have suffered much from the cabinet naturalists. Again and again I have been refused a medal on the plea that "So-and-so had been bred at the Zoo." It was no good to protest; it was no use to ask where the birds were; it was no use to express incredulity, the birds had been bred at the Zoo years and years ago. I always go to the Zoo when up in town, but I can never see the young birds in evidence, and I know Mr. Sutton well, and have had many a long and interesting talk with him. The treatment I received so annoyed me, that I have long since ceased to bother after medals, and now simply rear for my own amusement. I have said many times, and I now say it again, that Softbills will not and cannot rear their young on mixtures. They require live insects. Nobody, except people like Mr. Teschemaker, knows what rearing a nest of Softbills means; but when I say that the old birds think nothing of taking six and eight mealworms a time to the nest, and that from dawn to dusk, every few minutes, then those of my readers who will listen to common-sense, will understand that "Oddments" is not a bad name for this of Mr. Finn's advice. At any rate, it is so odd that I for one do not intend to follow it. I shall still, like Mr. Teschemaker, "follow nature," and I venture to think that we shall rear more youngsters than Mr. Finn is ever likely to see. I would ask Mr. Finn a little conundrum. While he is experimenting with his mixtures, what about the young birds? They have tender stomachs, and cannot bear a prolonged fast! (Rev.) C. D. Farrar.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Teschemaker's letter, the young Bank Mynah at the Zoo has been out of the nest for weeks; it was not bred in the large high central division of the Western Aviary, as he says, but in one of the three roofed compartments opening into this. The parents were confined in this indoor place all the time they were rearing the young bird, and any insects that got in would have had to run the gauntlet of various insectivorous birds in the outside flight. This was not the only instance of rearing without unlimited soft food which I gave, but it is, I think, needless to worry any more at present about the statements of a writer so careless in investigating evidence as Mr. Teschemaker shows himself to be.

A Skylark that Sings Every Day.

Sir,—During the last few months I have read various notes touching upon the Lark family in Cage Birds. Being a great lover of the Skylark, am pleased to give brother fanciers the benefit of my experiences on Skylark keeping, especially Mr. Harmer, as he wants to know how to make his bird sing. I take a tin of Fox's Insectivorous Food and another of Fox's Egg and Biscuit, and thoroughly mix them together. Then I take a good teaspoonful of cured wasp grub and add as much of the mixed food as will last the bird a day and give it to him. The mixed foods will keep fresh any length of time if kept in a tin with a lid on. Give the wasp grub alive once a week. This diet is for summer time. In winter I give nice young mealworms (three or four a day) with the mixed food. I prefer young mealworms to the big ones, because the latter take such a lot of bashing about before they can be eaten. As to green food, I give every day one or other of the following: Chopped lettuce, chickweed, groundsel, scraped carrot, brussels sprouts, watercress, clover, and grass, as they come in season. I don't often give a clover turf, as the bird's feet get clogged up with excreta, but I give him good road sand and grit half an inch deep, and clean water twice a day. I make a pet of him and talk kindly to him. My bird is now moulting and sings every day. It is kept outside except in windy weather, frosty and snowy days as well. He seems to enjoy being out in a good shower of rain, trying to catch the drops. I have tried many of the Lark foods on the market and find the above very good. My next bird is to be a Nightingale, which I intend to keep on the same food, and I guess I shall have some music. If Mr. Harmer would like to correspond with me I will give him my idea of the best cage for a Lark, which I make myself. You are at liberty to give my address to him or any other Lark fancier.

E. N. Smith.

P.S.—Larks are not seed-eating birds, so take my advice and don't give your bird any seed at all, no matter what other people tell you. I have tried it without the slightest success, and should be pleased to show my bird to anyone. He can be heard three hundred yards away.

"Going Light": Can it be Cured?

Sir,—I have scanned the correspondence in Cage Birds very eagerly, but have failed to see a satisfactory answer to "Nimrod's" question. No doubt there are plenty of fanciers who know the cure for this malady; but they will not divulge. Well, I have only been a bird keeper for 24 years out of my 34, so I am only a novice. However, I can cure the "going light" disease if I can get hold of the birds in the early stages. Greenfinches I have had by the score, and I never lost many through this malady. Prevention is better than cure, and if you feed on natural food, such as shepherd's purse, red neize, and plantain stalks, you won't have many that will contract the disease. Greenfinches are delightful pets, and are worth some trouble. They are very easily tamed British birds. Canaries are carried off by the score by this disease, and it is in regard to them I give particulars of the cure. I saved a good few last year and this (my only two seasons at breeding), and I think what will cure mine will do the same for others. I have 114 young doing well, and nine fertile eggs yet to hatch, so "Going light" has not played the game with me it has with some fanciers, and I therefore willingly give the remedy. As soon as you see the birds dumpy, and sitting a long time at the seed box eating nothing, you must be up and doing, for if the bird gets too thin it is out of the reach of all human aid. Catch it and put it in a cage by itself; put in its drinking water some finely ground Epsom salts (as much as will lie on the end of a teaspoon handle), boil some milk, and let it soak well into some home-made bread; mix well with a few drops of lemon, and make it nice and sweet with glycerine. On the second day remove the water and salts, and keep the bird without water altogether. The milk sop will be nice and sloppy, and the bird will not need it. I have cured five out of every seven birds by these means. Good luck to Cage Birds.

How to Ventilate the Bird-room and Avoid Draughts.

Sir,—I enclose you a sketch which will show your readers how I ventilate my bird-room, thus keeping any draught off the birds. It is very simple and I think will be a great benefit to the Fancy during the moulting season. You cut a board about six inches wide and sufficiently long to allow it to go in between the pulley stiles of the window, then raise the bottom sash, put the board into position (putting it tight up to the parting lath that divides the two sashes), pull down the sash on to same and it is complete. The ventilation passes up to the ceiling between the sashes.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

Sir,—Just a few notes on the Linnet song. A bird that can "ree" and "pee" and "scrape," and change it (all these want changing) is a good one. It is what I call a fine Linnet. About thirteen or fourteen accidental notes, and the ability to change well, make a bird a good fiddler.

Fiddler.

Sir,—I have been very interested in the above subject. Although I have never been present at a Northern contest, I have, through your correspondence, come to the conclusion that the Northerner requires quality and quantity of song. The Londoner wants quantity of song. I have heard some really good racing Linnets (birds that have won) lay on one short "Lym," as racing men term them. The quality of the London Linnet is its pluck, i.e., its endeavour to sing its opponent down. I quite agree with your correspondent, "One Who Does Not Require Teaching," that it is undoubtedly fair. Again, I can assure your correspondent, Mr. Barnard, that the percentage of good birds (one in a thousand) is considerably underestimated as far as London goes. As regards the idea of a mocking bird, your correspondent, Mr. Geo. Rostron, gives us some passages which if uttered by a Linnet are undoubtedly acquired. It is quite easy to prove, as I have done by hand-rearing out of sound of any Linnet song. I heard of a Linnet last summer kept by itself that called; in fact, did everything you would expect from a respectable Sparrow upwards. This bird was not hand-reared, but I believe was caught in July. It not only surprised me but surprised a very old fancier friend (not forty years' experience); not very many people require all that time to gain a little honest knowledge. Again, get a stout old bird and some young branchers from any county, and keep them absolutely within his hearing alone, and nine out of ten will sing his song entirely.

One Who Knows a Linnet From a Crow.

Sir,—In your issue of August 21st, your correspondent, H. Barnard, asks why I don't come out in my true colours, i.e., sign my name. There are two reasons. The first is because others who wish use noms de plume, so why not I? Secondly, I don't wish to be accused of wanting "a free ad." Mr. B. also asks what it matters whether I hail from Jerusalem or Lincolnshire? Nothing at all to him, as I asked "London Fancier" this and not him. I have noticed one peculiarity about Mr. Barnard, it is this: he is so very sure he is perfectly right and everyone else (who does not see eye to eye with him), is perfectly wrong. For instance, all who agreed with him in the recent correspondence wrote (so he says) the only sensible letters; but the other letters were all "swank," and were written by "swankers." Please give others credit, Mr. B., for knowing a little, for no man knows it all in any one business, and never will. Very different are the courteous and gentlemanly letters, written by Mr. Rostron, Fred Allen, and others. Now, I should like to ask Mr. Barnard one thing. He claims that every cock Linnet has its own song bred in it from the nest. If this is so, what makes him keep his youngsters under a good old bird? If the song is bred in them and cannot be improved, what does he want to put them under a tutor for? On the other hand, if they do take the old bird's song, then this proves conclusively they are mocking birds—in captivity, if not outside. Again, if they are not mocking birds, one could put quality-singing Linnets and time-singing Linnets together without fear of spoiling the former; but who is there who would risk it? Not many, I'm quite certain. Would you, Mr. B., keep your racing Linnets with Chaffinches or Goldfinches? I don't think so; yet if they are not mocking birds (i.e., do not take up other birds' notes), why don't you hang them in same room? As Mr. B. does not object to all who use a nom de plume, I will take the risk of again signing myself

Two Crests and a Cup at Far-away Cape Town.

Sir,—Referring to "Double Crest's" letter of August 7th in your valuable paper, and his statement re my bringing forward a witness to prove my case, I may state I thought it absolutely unnecessary, especially as an "expert" was purposely asked to attend and prove the age of the bird; but he having made such a ridiculous blunder in his attempt to prove same, the Committee of the Cape Town Canary Society were not long in arriving at their decision, and unanimously decided that my Crest was a young bird, and correctly entered, and upheld the judge's (Mr. Morton's) decision. I may also draw attention to Mr. Steven's letter in same issue, stating that the bird was without a tail. This I, of course, most certainly consider unjust towards the judge. The bird's tail was perfect in every respect. I appeal for proof to the members of the Committee who were present the evening the bird was exhibited, and they, I am positive, will bear me out. As to the writer's statement about the smoke on the feathers from the ship's funnel, it clearly shows his ignorance of the importation of birds. They are not kept in or near the coal bunk, but are generally carefully looked after by one of the stewards or the butcher on board. Why do these gentlemen write 6,000 miles away, instead of face to face in our local papers? It is a pity some people cannot take a beating in the right sporting mood. Happily I do not enter my birds ono in a class as a money-making concern, and our society, I feel sure, can fortunately do without the services of such breeders and fanciers who seem so proud of boasting the absence of their entries at our shows.

The Scottish B.B. & M. Club's Patronage.

SIR,—With reference to the report of Mr. A. W. Watson, Secretary of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club, I beg to differ from him on the "record" applications for patronage. In 1907 the applications exceeded the number of this year, and more societies received the patronage of the club; in fact, if it is correct that six societies only have this year been granted it, and that conditionally, this is the smallest number for the past six years, if not in the first year of the club, and clearly indicates the true position of the club. And by endorsing their recent decision the club are simply playing into the hands of borrowers and lenders—a matter which is a very important one in the rules of the club. I wish, however, to state, in writing to the Press, that I hope no one will misunderstand my intentions, for the good of my former club friends is my sincere desire.

Morriston Society's Winding-up Order Rescinded.

Resolution to Close Down Withdrawn.

SIR,—At a well-attended meeting of the Morriston and District C.B.S., held on September 11th, to consider the resolution proposed at our last meeting (and published in CAGE BIRDS of September 4th) to wind up the society. After a good discussion, the resolution was rescinded, and it was unanimously decided to hold an open show on the date already fixed, viz., November 18th. Judges for same are Messrs. W. Mundell and H. Norman. The classification for the schedule was decided upon, 35 open classes being provided, and all prize money is to be guaranteed. So we hope exhibitors will not forget us when the time comes, as we are looking forward to having a good show this year and for many years to come.

A Question for Users of Long Clap Nets.

SIR,—Kindly allow me space in CAGE BIRDS in answer to the gentleman who speaks of his experience with spring net traps. I have lately taken up the hobby of bird keeping, but have only bought two birds. I am now the proud possessor of 32. All the others I have caught myself with these traps, and all are doing well in an outdoor aviary. Being a new beginner I wish to thank CAGE BIRDS for the grand hints I have received from it week by week, which have kept my birds from dropping.

F. LIGHTFOOT.

SIR,—My friend, who signs himself "A Member of the Middlesbrough C.B.S.," has been exceedingly kind in publishing diagrams and explanations with reference to the working of long clap nets. I thank him very sincerely for his kindness. Perhaps he will pardon me for saying that I cannot follow him in one particular, and that is with reference to the stout wooden staff G, which he says "should be driven well into the ground level with the cords on the staff." I would like a fuller explanation of this bridle gear, which he says is very useful in windy weather. Does this particular stout staff "G" work on sockets? Or is it an upright peg driven into the ground opposite the socket peg of each net, and around which the arms of the pull line or the bridle cords go? I really do not understand this part of his instructions. How long is this staff G? I quite follow his explanations with regard to the four poles and the eight essential pegs. Shall we agree to call the four stretchers "poles," and all other things driven into the ground "pegs" so as to avoid confusion? I cannot understand "G" nor do I understand the fastening point of the pull line arms. Will our friend explain further, please? He is a "brick" for troubling at all, and I hope he will favour me with fuller details with reference to the bridle gear only. All the rest is plain sailing.

A Useful Lamp for the Birdroom

SIR,—Mr. Stapleton, in last week's CAGE BIRDS ("Illustrated Ideas") gives the method for the making of a handy lamp. I wish to show the best and safest way to get the bottom out of the glass jar. With a drop of gum water mix a drop of thick ink out of the bottom of a nearly-dried-up inkpot; make a series of dots round the bottom of jar where you want to cut it; next take a three-cornered file, and with a sharp light draw stroke make a tiny nick. Next take a stout piece of wire about a foot long, curve one end for about an inch to fit the outside of jar, and then bend over other end to form a handle. Make the curved end of wire red hot, and apply to nick, holding it there firmly till you hear a slight cracking sound. Heat up the wire again, and follow up the crack along the dots which serve as guide till you have gone round the jar; then tap it all round with the back of a table knife, when the bottom will drop off. Rub the sharp edges with a stone.

J. CROWTHER.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I beg to express my opinion on the dying off of young cage birds. It is, I believe, owing to their want of "teeth," or a substitute. Some fanciers recommend sawdust, and others pine wood dust, which should not be used, except for old birds, and only in their case in order to save the eggs if they are dropped from the outside of the nest. When the young leaves the nest it gets into the bottom of the cage and begins to pick about, and if wood dust is about it is sure to get some of it into its crop, and as it cannot digest it, the wood dust is more likely than not to cause trouble. If a little sand is placed in the tin it is knocked out into the wood dust, and the bird is still liable to pick it up. Of course, sand runs into a big item where a number of birds is kept if bought from the corn dealer's, but river sand, from the builder's yard, sifted can be bought for one shilling per bushel, and that quantity lasts a long time used alone, and no doubt the young birds will find plenty of sharp grit (teeth) to enable them to digest their food. Another great danger is in allowing the food which has been knocked out of the vessel to the cage bottom to get dry and hard and sour. Such food is also liable to get picked up, and often sets up inflammation, another trouble. My advice is, see particularly to this wasted food; clean the cage bottom out every day. Where the fancier has to leave early in the morning, and does not get home until late, if he feeds his birds in a small cage outside hung in front of the door, the waste will not get into the breeder. It can too be easily unhung and cleaned out with a shake every evening. This method would only be required for about a week or ten days, for the birds could be fed in the ordinary way outside. Another danger is in having more pairs up than one can attend to. Sixty pairs would take all one's time to attend to, as they should be attended to. Better far try twelve pairs and keep them clean; otherwise you will only breed disease and lose all the birds. Clean water, good, sweet food, little and often, and plenty of river sand are essential; cages should be washed out with vinegar and allowed to dry; then apply some linseed oil with a brush, which application will keep down the red mites.

W. PAVEY.

SIR,—Yes, indeed! some remedy is wanted, and that right away, from some of our old fanciers with regard to the fatal disease referred to above. I have been a breeder (but not of show birds) for the past five or six years, and I may say have been very successful, and especially fortunate in rarely losing any young after they have been parted from their parents. This is my season's work this year, after being up as early as 5.30 o'clock nearly every morning for many weeks, and attending to them as late as possible in the evening. Two months ago I had 29 young (Canaries and Mules), and have had more hatched since. Now I have but nine, all told. The young began to "go off" one by one when about six or seven weeks old; then my hens went, and the last one died to-day (August 26th); the cocks followed (I have one left), and then all my British birds, so that I have lost quite 40 birds, after having tried every possible remedy I could think of. Directly I noticed any signs of illness the bird was placed by itself away from the rest, but I found they would eat little or nothing, and lasted about two days. I noticed that as they began to droop the legs became very white, the rich pink colour seen in healthy stock being entirely absent. I bought several odd birds at the beginning, or soon after the beginning of the season, and conclude that some unscrupulous person must knowingly have sold me contaminated stock. Should I by any means save any of the remainder I shall be terrified to breed with them next season for fear the evil still "lurks within." Do let us hear what some of the "old hands" have to say.

C. K. EATON.

Suggested Treatment During an Outbreak of "Bird Fever."

Readers will doubtless remember the sad tale of losses in his bird-room related by Mr. Thos. Robson in our issue of August 21st last. His letter was accompanied by a picture showing the peculiar position in which the majority of the birds were found after death. Mr. Robson sent two of the bodies for post-mortem examination to a gentleman in every way qualified to undertake this task, and the appended report upon them has just reached us for publication.—EDITOR.

SIR,—I have examined the remains of two Canaries sent me by one of your esteemed correspondents, Mr. T. Robson, when I found the cause of their death to be the microbe of "bird fever." There was no doubt it was introduced into your correspondent's bird-room by the three birds purchased from his friend (?), who should not have sold them when he knew he had the disease in his own bird-room. If your correspondent has not been careful and carried out strict isolation and thorough disinfection, he has in all probability lost the majority of his birds—British, Foreign or Canary. Aerial disinfection, such as sulphur burning or chlorine gas evolution is useless, and no disinfection is of any use as long as the birds have the germs of the disease in their bodies. For to kill the germs in the bird's body one must burn the bird or destroy it with some powerful disinfectant. The birds should be strictly isolated, not changed from cage to cage, unless an apparently healthy bird is put into a thoroughly disinfected or clean cage. The diseased birds should be killed off at once as, as long as they are allowed to live, they are a source of danger to those who have not the disease within their system. If it is possible the birds of a contaminated bird-room should be put into the open and exposed to the sunlight, which is the most powerful disinfectant next to actual fire, or perhaps superheated steam. Many of the so-called chemical disinfectants are not disinfectants at all; they mostly create a stink, and that is the best that can be said of them. The water utensils should not be mixed up together, but washed separately, preferably under a tap, and then immersed in boiling water containing a little washing soda, and kept in it for a short time every day. Care should be taken that the bulk of seed is not contaminated by one's hands, or by mice going into the cages, soiling their feet with the diseased bird's faces (excreta) and then running over the seed. A bird-room or aviary containing mice may be kept comparatively free of mice by the use of Danysz Mouse Virus, used three or four times a year. It is harmless to birds and other animals—semi-domesticated and domesticated. I have used it repeatedly, and have not observed any danger from it. The straining observed in diseased birds is due to soreness of the bowel, which is the seat of acute catarrh. In apparently healthy birds one might try in the drinking water—quinine sulphate 10 grains, dilute sulphuric acid ½oz., and water one pint. Of this solution a dessertspoonful to be given as drinking water every other day. Cages of no value should be burnt. If one does not care to do this, scrub them with boiling water and soda after scraping off the hardened fæces, and then put them in the open, exposed to the sunlight to dry. Keep them there for a fortnight, and then wash them with formalin one part to 40 parts of water. Don't buy any fresh birds after you have paired up your birds. The disease spreads quicker during the moulting season. It is more prevalent during the summer and winter months. It is a preventable disease. It does not arise de novo. Egg food is not the cause. Bird fever is very often confounded with other diseases, especially those caused by exposure, chills, and bad food. It attacks every species of birds, whether they live on fruit, seed or insects. It is regulated by the same laws as other contagious diseases of man and animals.

*A Religious Parrot.

Lord Selborne possessed a valuable Grey Parrot of talking propensities, and one day Polly made its escape and took shelter in the trees of Regent's Park. When Lord Selborne and a crowd collected to capture it, the Parrot put its head on one side, and said very solemnly, "Let us pray."—Sent by Doris Lycett (age 13), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

Story of a Tame Siskin.

During a snowstorm in January a Siskin was driven against our window. Dropping a duster over the bird which was exhausted, I caught it and put it in an old cage. Warmth and food soon revived it, and in a day or two it was quite alright. It is now so tame that it will fly about the room, and, alighting on my shoulder, will peck at my neck till I give it food out of my mouth.—Sent by N. F. *Songs of the Night.

A little brown bird which sang tirelessly from ten at night until three in the morning once became famous. The bird, a Nightingale, took up its residence at Audlem, Cheshire, and each night its thrilling notes attracted to the spot crowds of people, who came from Crewe, Market Drayton, Nantwich, and even from the Potteries to hear the nocturnal song. One Sunday night the bird's audience numbered hundreds of persons. Many motorists and cyclists were among the listeners. Several of the former shone their lamps among the trees where the bird was thought to be, but failed to locate "the platform."—Cutting, sent by Fanny Solomons (age 11), 6, Anthony Street, Commercial Road, London, E.

Author of "The World's Birds."

The Impossible Duck.

I think readers of CAGE BIRDS will be willing to allow that I do not bore them by giving undue prominence in these notes to my especial favourites, the water-fowl; but I venture here to say something about my experience with the Cotton Teal, or Pigmy Goose, of India (Nettapus coromandelianus), because it illustrates the principle I have always gone upon of never being too ready to believe that a thing can't be done because it never has been done yet. This beautiful little duck is even smaller than our Teal, not quite equalling a pigeon in size, and the plumage of the drake is very handsome, being mostly white, with the wings and back metallic green; the duck is soberly coloured with brown and dull white, but is very neat and pretty. When I saw these exquisite little pigmy water-fowl being freely sold alive for food at about fourpence each in the Calcutta market, I was very anxious to keep and send some to Europe; but our leading dealer, the late W. Rutledge, whose experience extended over forty years, told me that he had often tried it, even shipping birds with a specially made cage containing a tank, and then never got them landed alive.

Male Cotton-Teal or Pigmy Goose.

The Modus Operandi.

When I came to try keeping the birds I found there was no difficulty in the feeding; they would readily eat Canary seed and paddy-rice, and soon became steady, being far less shy and nervous than wild ducks usually are. The trouble was that they were very weak on the legs and awkward walkers; but nevertheless, being strong-clawed, would insist on climbing up the sides of their cage and falling down with a ruinous bump time after time. Obviously this was the difficulty in keeping them, and I got over it by lodging them in a metal tank with a wire-netting cover, the tank having about four inches of water put into it fresh every day, the dirty water being drawn off by means of a plug. A platform was placed at the side of the tank furthest from the light, and on this the birds rested. When towards evening they began to get restless, they would waddle to and fro on this and fly up, only to fall back into the water, and as they could get no foothold on the smooth sides, they could in no way hurt themselves. Accordingly they did well, and in order to send them home I devised another plan. Their travelling-cage was a Chinese made cane one, tarred floor, only just high enough for them to stand upright in, and along with this I shipped a tin bath made to fit the bottom of the cage, which could be plunged into it daily to give the birds a wash. Some survived the voyage, and thus were landed the first of this species to reach the Zoo, and though they were not given at all proper quarters there—it was some years ago, before the present management—they survived for some time. Unlike some of our no-egging friends, who are better at carping than at giving practical advice, I told some other people interested in water-fowl of my method, and a few other specimens were imported and reached our dealers, but there is so little demand for rare small water-fowl, however pretty or interesting, that there has been no encouragement to the trade to exert themselves to get any more of the birds over.

Breeding Waxwings and Boarded Tits.

Although there are certain difficulties about keeping both of them, those two delightful birds both have a strong tendency to breed in captivity, though no young have left the nest in either case so far. It would be a good plan for any admirer of these delightful species to devote a small aviary to a pair of each; they are always worth having even if success be not obtained in breeding them, and they ought to do well together, having habits so very different that they would not interfere with each other, while in one way they are similar in their requirements—they must have a good insectivorous mixture, but not much rich food like egg and bread crumbs or biscuit, owing to their tendency to over-fatness. Such an aviary should have a couple of trees at opposite ends for the Waxwings to fly to and fro between, while the ground should be planted with dwarf bamboo to imitate a reed bed and well grassed, as the Tits feed much on grass seeds. Currants and bananas are good food for the Waxwings, and if the Tits partook of these they would come to no harm thereby.

Horned Parrakeets.

The importation of some specimens of the Uvean Horned Parrakeet (Nymphicus uraeensis, illustrated in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, deserves note, as both this and its relative, the Nymphicus cornutus are very rare in aviculture. The Uvean species comes from the island of Uvea, in the Loyalty group; it is about as big as a Rosella, and similarly shaped, but green in general colour, with a red forehead and black mask. On the head is a weedy-looking straggly crest of a few feathers. The other species is very similar in general appearance, but has a much more remarkable crest, of two feathers only, long and narrow, but expanded at the tips, which are red. Both species have been on view at the Zoo, but not of late years.

Go for the Blue Beak.

In these Parrakeets—the Uvean species, at any rate—the beak is blue-grey at the base, and black at the tip; so it is in the Zealand Parrakeets (Cyanorhamphus) and in the rare Racket-tailed Parrots (Prioniturus). It is therefore a wise proceeding to keep an eye on all Parrots about Rosella size with a blue bill, as all those I have mentioned are very rare and desirable acquisitions. New Zealand Parrakeets used to be not uncommon, but are not to be had now so far as I know, since the export of all New Zealand birds has been prohibited, with the exception of the Kea Parrot (Nestor notabilis), the notorious sheep-vivisector, and the Weka Rails (Ocydromus), which, though unable to fly, are as mischievous and destructive as Carrion Crows.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A

Farewell "Smoker" to the late Assistant Secretary.

A farewell gathering was held in the Waggon Inn, Low Walker, to bid God-speed to our late assistant secretary, Mr. J. R. Cox, who leaves on Monday night for Johanneshurg. Mr. Cox is well known on Tyneside, and has left several birds in the care of Messrs. Ronald and Affleck. He expects these birds will hold their own at the local shows, especially three of them—an uneven marked Border, a Siskin, and a big Siskin Mule, which was an easy 1st at our Nest Feather Show. Mr. Cox takes six Norwich birds with him, and is likely to join the Rand C.B.A. Mr. Cox's kindly disposition made him many friends, and there was a full turn-out of members at the "smoker." Mr. Macdonald (in the chair) made a few choice remarks in opening the meeting, and wished our friend every success in his venture, and also remarked that such men as Mr. Cox were the men for our Colonies—honest and straightforward, and always ready to do anyone a good turn if it lay in their power. We shall miss him at our annual show, as he was a very hard worker, but we hope that he may improve the Fancy in Africa, and that we shall soon hear of his doing as well as we wish him to do. After a pleasant musical evening we ended by singing "Auld Lang Syne," all shaking hands and wishing him good luck.—W. G. RICHARDSON, Sec.

NORTHAMPTON (H.-in-H.) C.B.S

A ramble of the members of the society took place on September 11th. The start was made from the Midland Station, by the 2.20 train for Horton Station, from which place the ramblers walked to Piddington. The first thing that attracted our attention was a very splendid pair of gates, and railings which stand at the entrance of Mr. Winterbotham's estate. We were told these were all made by hand, therefore taking a great length of time to complete. After this the party journeyed to Salcey Forest. The weather being most beautiful, a most enjoyable ramble was made. A most interesting feature was the collection of various seeds which will come in most useful during the coming months as tasty meals for the different specimens of birds. The beautiful birds which came under observation were the Blackbird, Thrush, Starling and that well-known bird, the Woodpecker, with his rap, tap, tap, on the tree. Upon a former occasion one of the members saw a most determined fight between a Woodpecker and Starling. After spending some hours in the forest, the journey home had to be resumed, and, calling at Mr. Howe's, "The Spread Eagle," Piddington, a well-earned meal was greatly enjoyed; our thanks to the host and hostess for the kindly manner in which they entertained the party, sending them on their way with flowers and apples, free of cost. Quite a race had to be made to catch the train. How those birdy men wished for the wings of a bird just then, they alone know best! Had it not been for the stationmaster catching the notes of those poor birdy men, and in his most kindly manner holding the train in hand for a few seconds, they would have come off badly. Their song would not have been so sweet had they had to walk back home with the return half of their railway ticket laughing at them in their pockets. So ended a most enjoyable ramble. All thanks are given to Mr. W. Tahor, our forest guide and conductor, for his most useful information and experience.—A. W. LAW, Hon. Sec.

No. 344.

An Improved Division Board.

Sent by Mr. A. Newcombe, 49, Gloster Road, Barnstaple.

I enclose a sketch of a division board which I find a great improvement on the ordinary grooved ones generally used; there is no harbour for dirt or red mite. A and B are plain pieces of wood about ⅜ of an inch thick, with the ends bevelled, as shown in the sketch. They are fastened to the top and the bottom of cage. The slide should be clamped, that is, narrow slips about ¾in. wide and ⅜in. thick should be nailed on to the ends across the grain, as in C; this prevents the slide from warping, and also enables it to slide better on the bevelled runners. It should then be cut at a V shape on the ends to fit A and B, as in D.—A. NEWCOMBE.

No. 345.

Useful Combination Stove.

Sent by Mr. A. Nickelson, 34, Bicester, Road, Aylesbury, Bucks.

I send you another sketch of a combination stove, which I have used with success. In fact, I have not taken it down this summer. Of course the stove is portable and can be used in an outhouse or shed as well as in a birdroom if required. In the bowl shown at top of sketch water can be used for a moist air, or sand for a dry atmosphere; or it can be disposed of altogether and a hand lamp used instead of the oil stove if needed. The whole thing is made of sheet iron, and does not cost so much as hot-water pipes to be fitted in one's birdroom for the winter. The pipe marked A carries the fumes through the pane of window; B is the bowl before referred to; C is a door (of sheet-iron) made to let down over D, a glass door, which latter can be dispensed with altogether if necessary. The whole structure should, of course, be lifted on to a stand so as to be off the floor. The combination consists of heat, light and moist air. Of course, the light is wanted to feed birds by at night, when the days are shorter.—A. NICKELSON.

Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week end quality singing contest, held at Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane. Result, very good singing, and keen competition: 1st, Soloman's Derby Winner; 2, Mr. Farrer's Mug Catcher; 3, Mr. Farrer's Snatcher. Two consolation prizes were given to Mr. Martin's Laugh-Laugh, and Mrs. Kendall's Mad Jack. Judges, Messrs. A. Lorriman and T. Johnson.—J. HARGREAVES, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-st., September 11th, when 15 birds sang: 1, Hardcastle; 2, Farrer; 3, Stead. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Johnson. Also on September 12th, when some very good singing was heard, and 20 birds faced the judges, Messrs. B. Mawson, A. Jennings, and W. Naylor. 1, 3, Hardcastle; 2, Wigfield.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

In the Courts.

Taking Goldfinches in the Close Season.

Edward Powell, labourer, Frankwell, Shrewsbury, and Jerry Burgwin, labourer, Frankwell, were charged with being in possession of eight Goldfinches at Meole Brace.—P.C. Evans said he saw defendants in a field. When they saw him they ran away, but he caught them and found in their possession eight Goldfinches.—Powell said he was not aware that it was the close season, or he would not have taken the birds.—Powell was fined £2 and costs, and Burgwin £1 and costs.

A Trapper Trapped.

At the Machynlleth Petty Sessions recently, John Coakes, gamekeeper, Llanbrynmair, was summoned by Samuel Burroughs, 43, High Street, Dover, for a breach of the Wild Birds Protection Act.—Mr. Edmund Gillart appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. H. Meredith Roberts for the defence.—Mr. Burroughs said he was an inspector under the Society for the Protection of Wild Birds, and was at Llanbrynmair on August 11th. Passing through a field, his attention was drawn to a steel pole trap set for catching birds. Shortly afterwards he found two more traps which were closed, but in working order. He considered this quite sufficient for his purpose. Later he met the constable and in consequence of what he told him they went back and informed defendant, who said, "you are mistaken." Defendant told him Mr. Downing had seen the trap. He (witness) came to Llanbrynmair to carry out his duties. He had seen traps before.—Defendant said the pole was about three feet in length and the chain about a foot; but the bird caught would hang on the ground.—Mr. Gillart said the Society wanted it to be known that these practices were not allowed, and it was time the law was recognised. It was the duty of the keepers to know this. The trap was produced in court.—Replying to Colonel Norton, defendant said he did not use the trap often, and knew it was against the law.—Fined 5s. and 9s. costs.

The winter passed, as is usual in birddom, with nothing happening. It is a time that has to be lived through, but with the advent of spring I always grow excited, because then from day to day we never know what is going to happen in the aviary. I got such a surprise one fine morning in late March. The weather, though cold, was fairly open, and I had noticed that for some days the Crimson Wings had been uncommonly noisy, and that the cock was continually chasing the hen about, and that she received his advances coyly, yet evidently with considerable pleasure. I saw also one day that the log had been receiving attention, as there was quite a heap of chips below, so I began to hope that last year's experiment was to be begun over again. It seemed as if the "Fortunate Gods" were going to favour me.

The log was a very big one that I had got out of the woods, and ripe rotten inside, so that the hen had no difficulty in excavating it to her liking. She worked away most industriously for days, often coming out with the fruits of her labour evident in the shape of fragments of chips on her back and wings. The cock, so far as I could see, did nothing. but sit and look on.

After a decent interval in arranging the log to her taste, Mrs. Crimson Wing disappeared in the log, and then there was "a long wait." I often wish I had the receipt for fern seed to walk invisible and see how things are going on; but, alas! I had it not, so had to possess my poor soul in more or less patience.

The love-making of Crimson Wings is very funny. The cock spreads out his wings and ambles along the perch, and the hen coyly retreats before him, rubbing her beak along the perch; this goes on until she thinks he has been sufficiently tried, and then at last he is made happy. If she is too long about it, he opens his beak savagely and goes for her, and then she thinks better of it and becomes amenable to discipline.

For three weeks nothing happened. The hen had disappeared in the log, and the cock sat in sulky silence always exactly on the same perch, dozing away his time. Once or twice I caught a glimpse of the hen, after evidently just returning from the seed tray; but it was only a glimpse, as she was gone like a flash and into the log. The whole performance was lifted into what is called in the theatre a situation of suspense.

At last one morning I saw the cock sitting on the branch outside the log, looking very guilty, and as if caught in some unseemly act. I suspected that he might have been engaged in feeding the newly-hatched young, or rather, the hen, for these Parrakeets always begin by feeding the hen, who in turn passes on the food to the babies. Of course it was only a supposition, for he might have been sitting there by accident; still I hoped that my theory was correct, and his sheepish looks certainly made me think so.

After this nothing happened for a week, for, watch though I might, I saw nothing to confirm my hopes. I know of nothing so crafty as a nesting Parrakeet. If ever he betrays himself it is by the merest accident, and you may wait as long as you please, but he will never go near the nest while you are about. It is only by coming silent as a shadow that you will sometimes catch him stealing from the log. Some days later the hen began to come off in the daytime, and once more hopes were aroused, especially as she went back at regular intervals and remained inside. Then one day I heard the peculiar little grumbling sound that young Parrakeets make, and then I knew that I had not waited in vain, neither laboured in vain. Days once more passed, and though as yet I knew nothing definite, I went about with a face as cheerful as the sun.

One morning, however, I received a horrid shock. Looking beneath the log I saw a little Crimson Wing on the floor, kicking very feebly and looking about as uncomfortable as a poodle who has been shaved for the first time. To pick it up and warm it in my hand was the work of a minute. The warmth soon brought it back to life, and then I made a great venture. I opened the top of the log and popped it in. Luckily the hen was off feeding, and I think that in coming out she must have dragged the youngster out, just as hens will sometimes get a chicken caught in their feathers and drag them about miserably.

I am very truthful, and so I confess that I just took a peep into the log, as I felt if I did not something inside me would give way. It was only a momentary glance, and it was dark, but it was long enough to show me three little birds like squeaker pigeons just beginning to feather. They must have been then three weeks old, but then big Parrakeets take a long time in coming to maturity, and this I suppose accounts for their longevity.

I watched my avaries for a time to see whether the hen had noticed my interference with her home. Apparently she had not, or she had confidence in my integrity. At any rate, when next I went round, she was inside the log, and by the contended sounds I knew that she was feeding.

About a fortnight later I observed that both birds had ceased to go near the nest, and I at once feared the worst. I gave them another day, and then I opened the log and looked. Picture my agony when I saw three young Crimson Wings lying side by side, quite dead, but very nearly in full feather, so much so, that it was perfectly easy to see that they had been two cocks and one hen. The cocks are perfectly easy to tell by the wider band of crimson on the wings. I lifted them out of the log, sent for a friend who loves birds, and together we mourned as only true bird-lovers can. However, it was no good to go on mourning, as nothing could alter things. The only thing was to let hope once more set her bow in the clouds, and as the season was still young I did so.

The next time the Crimson wings went to nest they left the log severely alone. Whether they remembered the former mishap or not, I cannot tell, or whether it was pure love of change. But about a fortnight after the late catastrophe I observed the hen busily scratching a hole in the ground at the back of her house, turning round and round just as a dog does before he finally lies down. I thought that she was an exceedingly idiotic bird, but I knew it was no good to interfere, as Parrakeets, like Yorkshiremen, will be led, but not driven. The only thing to do was to make the best of things.

I accordingly put two bricks at right angles in the corner, and in a few days Mrs. Crimson Wing laid an egg in a little hollow, and subsequently two others. She then began to sit like an old broody hen, and at the end of about three weeks I saw something moving under her feathers; just a little fluffy ball, something like a tiny duckling. One other was duly hatched the following day; but the third egg proved clear.

I could see very little of what was going on for some days, except an occasional disturbance of the breast feathers of the old hen; but as she remained on tho nest I felt sure the chicks were all right.

For long weeks she continued to feed them, and it was not till they got quite big that she ever left them. After about a month she came off more, and then you could see the two youngsters quite plainly from the front of the aviary, sitting side by side on the floor, just like a couple of squab pigeons. The old ones both fed them most attentively, and got quite savage if I entered the aviary, even though my intention was merely to supply their wants.

After a time the young began to crawl about on the floor like kittens do when they first leave their nests. I should say it was quite nine weeks before they finally left the ground and began to perch. As I said before, it is perfectly easy to tell the sex of young Crimson Wings, as the red band is quite wide in the young cocks. Mine proved to be a cock and a hen.

YORKSHIRE Canary Club have just issued their year book for 1909-10, containing list of members, rules, the club's standard, particulars of competitions, etc. A grand list of prizes is given for the season's competitions, and should be the means of stimulating the interest of the variety and the club. The amateurs and novices are well catered for, and when the list is seen it will doubtless attract a few new members.

HAVE been favoured with a list of prizes, etc., which are to be given by the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. To the open section 6 good prizes are allotted; to the amateurs (CAGE BIRDS prizes) three, and to the novices no less than seven are given. At each show where the patronage is given, 4 classes for the open and two classes for novices are to be provided, and it is confidently expected the competition will be very strong. The numbers in this society have advanced at a rapid rate since the novices were specially taken in hand, no less than 140 new names being registered, and a very large percentage of them are recruits to the ranks of fanciers of the variety. The secretaries of both of the above clubs will be pleased to forward particulars to intending members, so if anyone would like to be in for some good prizes they had better join at once in readiness for the commencement of the season.

DURING this week I am spending a little time out in the country, where there is a good chance of studying bird life in its wild state. The Swallow family are congregating ready for their departure to warmer climes, but their numbers are not so strong as last year, the season not being quite what is required for them to multiply to any extent. I observed a couple of Hawks one morning hovering at great height, but though I kept them under observation for some time, I had not the opportunity of seeing either of them swoop down for prey. Starlings are greatly in evidence, hundreds upon hundreds of them scouring the fields and pastures, and when they rise in a body the sky seems simply black with them over a wide area.—As the post leaves two hours earlier here, I must close and hurry off.

Wild Bird Life.

Migration of Thrushes.

Signs are not wanting of the autumn migration. We occasionally detect in our gardens birds not generally seen in the district. Large flocks of Missel Thrushes and smaller birds have been seen flying south. My own garden and the adjoining field are crowded with Song Thrushes. Never before have I seen so many of this species together. They line the boundary fence and crowd in the fruit trees and upon the lawn, like House Sparrows in winter time. We have had these visitors with us a couple of days; they are not likely to stay long, and some passing flock will probably entice them further south. All these birds that are now with us have doubtless journeyed from the north. They may have come from one district, or starting with a few may have increased in numbers.

Bird migration may be likened to rivers, the main streams being constantly increased by smaller tributaries. But although these rivers drain the land of bird life as they pass through, corresponding rivers from further north leave of their abundant flood to irrigate barren lands. Thus the fly line that passes over the British Isles deposits large flocks of these refugees that it has brought down from the Arctic regions, no doubt taking up some of the summer migrants to carry them away to more southern latitudes. Our Islands are in the direct line of flight of many species which migrate both Spring and Autumn, and this is one reason why our country is so rich in birds. At no season are we deserted by our feathered allies, because when the time arrives for the Summer migrants to go, it is time for the Winter migrants to come. The food supply is that which determines the coming and going of birds. In the Spring and Summer the plentiful supply of light-winged insects, the various kind of moths, beetles, and caterpillars tempt the Summer wanderers home again.

It is the abundant supply of grubs and larvæ in the soft earth, and berries in the woods and along the hedgerows, that invite our Winter visitors. The truth is, the birds have no other thought than that of their own advantage. They choose the time and season to suit themselves, but their coming and going are equally to our advantage—each species comes when most needed. In the Summer troops of happy Warblers and Swallows keep in check the insects that are so destructive to plants and fruit. The Winter birds in turn dig the grub from the ground, thus saving many a valuable crop.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be Insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

goes by but what I publish a whole host of unsolicited testimonials. Have you ever given a thought to this? These people would not write these letters to me unless my goods gave them perfect satisfaction, would they? I don't care how hard a man is to please, if it is humanly possible, I guarantee to do so, that is why I send everything on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and refund money in full if every satisfaction is not given. Clap nets, made from genuine thread, ¾ in. mesh, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair. Kindly note above nets consist of two nets to the pair, and each net is guaranteed full stated measure, not the two nets measured together. All are properly "geared" or "armed," and fitted up complete, with stave poles, pegs, lines, etc., ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10 feet deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-. Batfolding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/6 pair; ditto, on 19 feet poles, 7/6 pair, all complete. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and are warranted to catch uninjured any bird, from Wren to Rook. The only net trap used by Mr. Jeffrey, England's largest Nightingale catcher. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call-bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), warranted to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Japanese birdlime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to hold birds in all weathers, and hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Loose thread netting, specially knit for making all kinds bird nets, ¾ inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1¼ inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, all post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, often sold as bird netting; full measurement guaranteed to each customer. Catchers' store cages, single compartment 1/- and 1/6 each; ditto, two compartment, 2/- and 3/- each; ditto, three compartment, 3/6 and 4/- each. Russian hemp pull lines, 80 yards long, 1/- each, post free. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, without snarl, or back twist, 68 yards long, and guaranteed strong as boat lines, 1/4 each, post free. Round-topped call-cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; ditto, square-topped, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list, telling you how to make your own nets, etc. See following letters, all guaranteed unsolicited, full name and address given in each case, so that sceptical persons may test their genuineness:—"Bridge View, Calstock, Cornwall, August 9th. Sir,—Last season I had some birdlime from you, and found it as advertised. Yours, W. Wooldridge, jun." "61, Wellington-st., Grimsby, August 9th. Sir,—Please send following. The netting I had last year is as good as ever. I find the things on your price list half the price of others. Yours, F. Gilliespie." "Violet Cottage, Sible Hedingham, August 11th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets quite safe, and thank you for prompt despatch. Yours, A. Bareham." "Bright View, Old Rattray, August 14th. Sir,—Please send lb. lime. I have used your lime for past 5 years, and it is the best I ever used. Yours, W. Houlsroud." "Machen View, Risca, August 20th. Sir,—Please send following. The netting bought from you 4 years ago is perfect now. Yours, S. Sullivan." "Windsor Cottage, Newbridge-on-Wye, August 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I received nets safely, and am well pleased with them. They are good value for money. Yours, F. Probert." "Delhi-row, Pelsall, August 28th. Sir,—Please send following. The pair clap nets I had from you 3 years ago are still in use, and they wear very well indeed. Yours, J. Fallon." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, August 28th. Sir, Please send ½ lb. lime. I had some from you last year, and I cannot find any better. It is reliable stuff, and it don't matter how it rains, it will catch all the same. Yours, C. Hart." Remember all my goods are sent on approval, cash or deposit, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction not given. See British Bird Column.

Few exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Young cock Thrushes, guaranteed well on food, 1/6 each; cock Blackbirds, 1/6 each; hand-reared cock Thrush, finger-tame, and now in song, 3/-; magnificent lot cock Skylarks, steady and clean moulted, 9d. each, three 2/-; few guaranteed in free song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each; young Canaries, sex not guaranteed, 2/6 couple; Linnet, Goldfinch, or Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark cages, 6d., 8d. and 10d. each, 3/6, 5/- and 7/- dozen; Redpoll cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; single trap cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 8/- dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 11/- dozen, all with separate compartment for call-bird; singing box cages, 1/-, 1/4, 1/6, 1/9 and 2/- each; Thrush cages, 2/9 each; bow-fronted Lark cages, 2/- each. Dealers please send stamp for trade prices of cages. For all catching appliances see my advert. in Appliance column. Following few letters prove to you who is the man to give you satisfaction. Notice, full name and address, and also dates:—"34, Belvedere-st., Mansfield, August 10th. Sir,—Thanks for bird you sent. I am very pleased with it. I have found you a straightforward fancier, and wish you every success. Yours, H. Gilson." "Upper Outwood, Anslow, Burton, August 12th. Sir,—birds arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Yours, W. Moss." "Plaistow, Essex, August 14th. Sir,—Two Canaries arrived safe, and I am perfectly satisfied with them. Yours, W. Baker." "8, Park-rd., Henley-on-Thames, August 19th. Sir, Skylark arrived safe, it is a nice bird, and I think will make a good songster. Yours, A. Church." "Wear-terrace, Wilton-le-Wear, August 18th. Sir,—Birds arrived safe, and I am well satisfied. Yours, T. Sowerby." "Gordon House, Shotton Colby, August 19th. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in pink of condition. I am delighted with them, you will receive all orders from me for birds. Yours, Dr. J. W. Cross." "53, Raehurn-place, Edinburgh, August 12th. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived in pink of condition, and is doing well. Thanks for so nice a specimen. The cage is also wonderful value. J. Kirkcaldy." "14, Warrington-rd., Newtown, Wigan, August 19th. Sir,—Birds arrived yesterday, they are a fine lot. Allow me to thank you for the prompt businesslike manner you executed my order. They are far beyond expectation, and all future orders are yours. J. Maddock." "6, Stevenson-st., Oban, August 19th. Sir,— Birds arrived yesterday, but sorry to say one was dead in box. I am delighted with the other four, they are in pink of condition, and took water and seed immediately on getting out of box. This will not be last deal which I shall make with you, as price is reasonable, and the material good. Yours, D. Livingstone." (Now, please note sequel.—W. Gore.) On August 27th Mr. Livingstone writes as follows: "Sir, Just a line to thank you for the bird which you sent (free of cost), for the one which died in transit. I am very pleased indeed with my bargain, they are all now in pink of condition. The Bullfinches are beautiful. You will hear from me again. Yours, D. Livingstone." Kindly note, I have no connection whatever with any other advertiser nor do I buy from any advertising catcher. My catchers are stationed in various parts of Worcestershire, and the whole of their catches sent in to me, none being picked out by them at any time. All birds are properly netted, and guaranteed well on hard seed before sent out to customers.

MOST EXCELLENT OFFER

I HAVE the following most valuable collection of birds, etc., to dispose of: All the British birds have been caged in an outside aviary for the last 18 months, and from the following Bullfinches, Siskins, Goldfinches, Greenfinches and Twite hens I have had eggs this season, and youngsters from the Redpolls, Goldfinches and Greenfinches. The aviary includes the following birds: 10 cock Canaries, seven hen Canaries, four cock Goldfinches, two hen Goldfinches, two pairs Bullfinches, two pairs Siskins, cock and hen Grey Linnet Mule, three cock Chaffinches, one pair Bramblefinches, three cock and two hen Greenfinches, three Redpolls, one pair of Yellowhammers, five grey Linnet cocks, one grey Linnet hen, one hen Twite; also six single breeding cages, and three splendid large double breeders, one exhibition cage, three good cage baths, nest pans, water pots, etc., about thirty to forty different appliances. Will accept £5 10s. the lot.—Cosway, Holmdene, Caledonian-rd., Savile Town, Dewsbury.

MATTHEWS SAYS, STOP HERE! HELLO! HELLO! NO WONDER.

Gentlemen, why I keep sending prize winners out every day is because I have the largest stock in the world to select from. This is well known by all the leading exhibitors, contest singers, and Mule breeders. Also the finest aviaries. Mine are not old hen cotes, same as most of backyard dealers. When you come to inspect them, over 2,000 birds to select from; not picked out of a dozen. Also refreshment and teas provided at any hour for all clients. So don't be gulled by so-called specialists. Send to the largest British bird dealer in the world. All at working-men's prices. Linnets, Linnets, Linnets, ready for show bench. Real giants, well pencilled, good ground colour, Norwich type, real gems, same sort of Linnets that have won first prizes all over England which I have sent out, only 2/-; few extra specials, 2/6; Linnets, for contest singing, all in full song, taught under my well-known Cheshire champion, 1/6; a few extra specials, ready to win contests, 2/-; with book of instruction, new polished singing cage, packet of my extra special seed, 3/-; I can dispose of a few good catching Linnets, all well worked, used to nets, in full song, 2/- each; Goldfinches, English Peartree Goldfinches, all netted from the Cheshire fruit gardens, not foreign rubbish, 300 in stock; few large giants, well buttoned, good broad head, nicely tanned, long Yorkshire type, sure winners, 2/-; a few extra specials, 2/6; also a few Goldfinches, for catchers, used to nets, sure stoppers, in full song, 2/6. Large selection of Yellow Greenfinches, like Canaries, 1/-; grand Yellowhammers, 1/-; largo Redpolls, 1/-. Over 500 splendid nestling Larks, real Cheshire Larks, all in full song, 1/-, 1/6; 200 house-moulted Larks, singing, 2/- each; 50 hand-reared young ones, all finger-tame, in full song, ready for contest singing, taught under the champion Lark of Cheshire. 2/6, with cage 3/6; or any other kind you require. Please write for Softbills or Hardbills of any other variety. Gentlemen, all I send out is on seven days' approval, cash or deposit. I am not a backyard dealer, so beware of imitators.—Send to Matthews, Bird Specialist and Judge, 24, Avenue-st. Aviaries, Portwood, Stockport, Cheshire.

HARRY ALLEN. EVERYBODY IS WELCOME

To see and hear my birds, and can have the pleasure of reading a thousand testimonials, as I only believe in honest dealing. Now, does this speak for itself? For fourteen months I have not had one single bird returned; proof, the Editor of this paper. It has taken me thirty years to make my name by being a true lover of the Fancy. Goldfinches, Goldfinches; real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, with grand broad heads, splendid blaze, beautiful wing bars, well buttoned with grand rich tan on breast. These are the right sort, 2/-, 2/6; a few specials, 3/-. Linnets, Linnets; my A1 specials can beat the world for steadiness, size, colour, and markings; they are the largest Linnets I have ever seen. They have beautiful brown backs and showing splendid white in wing, and most beautifully pencilled, only 2/6 each. Linnets, singing grand, with new polished cage and my new book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6. Look! Fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6; I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days' approval. Linnets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing anywhere, only 1/6; a few extra specials, 2/-; they are grand birds; Linnets from the same place as the champion of the world, without a doubt they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest, only 1/-; I have over 200 house-moulted Linnets, some that will sing in your hand, 10/6 each, they are as steady as rocks; very large cock Bullfinches 1/6 and 2/-, hens 1/-. Larks, Larks. Beautiful cocks, singing grand, through the moult, as straight as arrows and in show condition, and as steady as rocks, 1/-, 1/6; and some extra specials, real knockouts, 2/6. These cannot be beaten. My new book of secrets, 9d. I have hundreds of all kinds of cages and all kinds of bird seed and really good bird tonic. Please read what others say:—"6, Derwork-st., Plaistow, Essex. Dear Sir,—I am well satisfied with the Linnet; it is singing already. —Yours truly, S. Clements to H. Allen." "6, Lower Viaduct-ter., Crumlin, Newport. Dear Sir,—The bird arrived safe and I am quite satisfied with him.—I remain, yours truly, D. James to H. Allen." "680, Brightside-lane, Sheffield. Dear Sir,—I received Linnet all right and in the pink of condition, and I am very pleased with it.—Yours truly, H. Willis to H. Allen." Please state wants and send to the original for honest stuff. Birds sent to any part of the world at my risk on seven days' approval; cash or deposit; hundreds in stock, no waiting.—Harry Allen, bird specialist and judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

I GUARANTEE

Every Bird in the following list to be an unusual bargain. I also now have a few clean moulted birds, and some good show birds that will be ready shortly, please state requirements, and I will book your order; this will insure against disappointment.

1909 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 10s. 6d. each; now to prove this: I offer to give six months approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms.

Other large birds at 4s. 3d., 4s. 6d., and 5s. 6d. upwards. Hens, 2s., 2s. 6d., and 3s. 6d. each. Pairs, 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick."

For other varieties, please send for Free Current price list. All on approval any part of Great Britain.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Bradford East Society have again arranged a splendid syllabus of lectures, competitions and social evenings for the winter session commencing Tuesday, October 5th next. Some of the best known men in the Fancy have kindly consented to give the benefit of their long and varied experience to the members and friends, who, it is hoped, will turn up in goodly numbers and give the officials every encouragement to put the best talent possible before the members. The Society are to be favoured on October 5th by a lecture from Mr. S. Dean on the subject "Faults we don't want in a Yorkshire," and he will be ably assisted in his lecture by Mr. P. Jowett, who will sketch the faults on a blackboard, so that all present may grasp the principles which Mr. Dean wishes to place before them. As a lecturer, Mr. Dean has made a name for himself in his efforts to give to others the knowledge he has acquired through long experience. On October 19th, a members' washing competition should prove highly instructive to those novices. On November 2nd a practical man (Mr. Wm. Cruise) gives his past experience on the subject "Aids to Successful Breeding." Many members of the Society already have him to thank for advice extended to them in times of adversity. On Tuesday, November 16th, there will be a members' show, when Mr. W. A. Cowgill will judge; birds to be staged by 7 o'clock prompt. December 7th, Mr. F. Gelder will give a paper on "Yorkshires," his first attempt, and I can promise a most instructive evening. On December 14th there will be a members' judging competition. December 27th will be the final members' show for the present year, the birds having to be staged by 10 a.m. prompt. New Year's Day promises to be a red-letter day, as our 2nd annual show takes place. The Society hopes by an enlarged classification to secure the loyal support of all Yorkshire fanciers. The Society are determined to leave no stone unturned to make it a sound success. The rose bowl, which was won by Mr. G. Bray, of Holmfirth, last year will be again competed for in the unflighted classes. The Society were highly complimented last year on the management, and hope to eclipse that effort. January 11th will bring the 4th annual general meeting, and on the 18th we shall hold our 3rd annual tea and concert and distribution of prizes, when those who desire to spend a jovial evening with us will receive a hearty welcome. Mr. H. W. Walsh will lecture on February 1st, his subject being "Breeding and Management of Canaries." This should prove most beneficial, seeing Mr. Walsh's past experience. On February 15th Mr. C. Whiting lectures on "Breeding and Rearing the Yorkshire Canary." I have heard it said that what Charlie doesn't know about a Yorkshire isn't worth knowing. Mr. Walsh and Mr. Whiting are new lecturers to our Society, and I feel sure they will receive a hearty reception. March 1st, members' "Impromptu Questions and Answers," this being the opportunity of the novice members to ask questions which may be perplexing them in their hobby. The syllabus will be brought to a close on March 15th by Mr. W. Blakey opening a debate on "Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires." Mr. Blakey has given a great amount of time to the study of Cinnamon-marked, and what he says will be the outcome of sound practical experience. Looking at the various lectures, etc., one cannot help but be struck with the variety provided. The members will do well to try and get to them all (especially the novice members), as there is nothing more instructive than hearing other people's opinions. We have been favoured by these gentlemen, and I hope as an act of courtesy to them that members and friends will turn up in good numbers to hear them. We have a nice comfortable room for our meetings, and the officials give all fanciers a hearty invitation.—H. Hill, Sec.

Twitterings.

Will secretaries kindly send me show schedules, writes Mr. A. Raynes, 34, Beechfield Road, Doncaster.

Change of address: Will show secretaries kindly note that Messrs. Gill and Pethick's address is 1, Elliot Terrace, Plymouth.—(ADVT.)

Kindly note our new address, write Messrs. A. and G. H. Edwards; it is now 106, Vaughan Road, Coldharbour Lane, Camberwell, London, S.E.

I have already received a large number of replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Leahy (Lismore, Co. Waterford).

Will secretaries please send me schedules of shows, writes Mr. H. Wadsworth, Victoria House, Droylsden Road, Newton Heath, Manchester.

Owing to the large circulation of your paper, CAGE BIRDS, I have received orders from Montreal, Canada, writes Mr. E. Smith (Southfields, London, S.W.).

Kindly announce my change of address, writes Mr. F. Gelder, secretary of Bankfoot and Dis. C.B.S., from Centre Street, to 91, Marsh Street, Little Horton, Bradford.

There is a slight printer's error in our schedule, writes Mr. W. Clarkson, secretary of the Burnley and Dis. C.B.F.S. Classes 23 to 28 read as novice, whereas 23 and 24 only are for novices.

Mr. J. Hennery Lewis, of Owestry, writes that owing to a printers' error (which we regret), he was last week made to offer Goldfinches at 1s. 3d. each, when the price should have been 1s. 6d.

The Arniston and Gorebridge O.S. are holding their annual show on November 27th, writes Mr. John Lambie, the secretary, when Mr. Robert Lambie (Whitburn) will judge the cage-bird section.

I notice in your excellent report of our last meeting, writes Mr. John Rukin, hon. secretary of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A., I have given the place of next meeting as Glossop; this should be F. W. Nelson's, Stockport.

Kindly note, write Messrs. A. Emery and H. Hathaway, that we have gone into partnership and will exhibit in future as Emery and Hathaway. All communications to be addressed to 239, Shrobnall Street, Burton-on-Trent.

Provost Smith has kindly consented to present the prizes at the Leith Society's Show, on October 23rd, writes Mr. G. Brown, the secretary, and has generously given £1 1s. as a prize, as this is the jubilee show of the society.

We hear that Mr. J. C. Barnes (Walkley, Sheffield), has experienced a very good breeding season, having reared over 200 young ones (Norwich and Yorkshires), amongst them some fine specimens, which are coming well through the moult.

Kindly note I have been appointed secretary of the South Manchester C.B.S., in place of Mr. Spilsbury, resigned, writes Mr. Fred Washbourne. Communications should be addressed to me at 320, Ashton Old Road, Openshaw, Manchester.

Schedules for Darlington Show have now been sent out, writes the hon. secretary, Mr. R. S. Black. Fanciers who have not yet received one should apply at once. This is the first open show in the district, and we are looking forward to a good entry.

I am so over-run with orders that it will take me a good week to execute them all, writes Mr. S. Capsey (Lincoln). I have had to engage another catcher to help me. I cannot speak too highly of the use of the advertisement columns of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.

We mean to make a name for our show, held October 27th and 28th, and become "the" show of the North, writes Mr. J. C. Bell, secretary, Border City (Carlisle) O.S. We shall provide 46 classes, with good prize money and specials for everything. So we expect exhibitors to rally round.

Kindly notify fanciers that the Kirkstall and Dis. C.B.S. commences the winter session, writes Mr. W. Hornby, the hon. secretary, on September 25th, at headquarters, the Abbey Inn, commencing at 8 p.m. Prize money of last show will then be paid. We wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

I shall be glad to hear, writes Mr. D. Carrall, hon. secretary, Yorkshire Cage Bird Society of Ireland, from those who have not sent on their names for memberships. Our specials will be worth competing for. I shall be glad also to hear from secretaries of clubs wanting our patronage for their coming show. My address is 17, Hamilton Street, S.C. Road, Dublin.

Bird Catching for Amateurs:

Some Characteristics of Different Species.

By H. J. HAWES.

A lecture delivered before the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. on Sept. 2.

The members of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. were on September 2 last entertained by Mr. H. J. Hawes with a lecture on "Bird-catching," which he delivered some time ago to the members of the L. and P.O.S. (then reported fully in CAGE BIRDS). Mr Hawes took along his nets and other paraphernalia and showed the method of working the same, this rendering the lecture more than ordinarily enjoyable. He also added some fresh notes, entitled "Some Characteristics of Different Species." These were as follows:—

While dealing with the many commoner species of the Hardbill, I had almost overlooked one of our most fascinating and pleasing birds, both as a companion and as a fine exhibit—I mean the Siskin. It has as many "nicknames," as there are wooden crutches in a London hospital—Aberdavat, Twister, etc. And I once heard an old gentleman in the Midlands declare that the species is the very origin of the wild Canary, and he was also rather bitter on poor Aberdee, for he said the bird was sent to Scotland with a black cap, and was commissioned to pass sentence of death upon all Nightingales that should venture on those shores, hence his permanent black cap.

Another Peculiar Characteristic.

There is yet another peculiar characteristic about this particular bird, if we are to be governed by the statements of many eminent men who are supposed to be authorities upon the subject. They assert that the Siskin only flies as the Linnets, Chaffinches, etc., do in their migrating flight, viz., once in three years. Be that as it may, I myself have to confess that I am betwixt and between, as it were, to believe that statement, and I venture to state that a very old bird-catcher whom I was speaking with at Barking on Saturday last, asked me if I had a hen Siskin to sell him, as this was their year to fly, and he was going to be after them?

Yet, I can take you almost any year to a spot not a hundred miles from Peckham where you can see as many Siskins in one tree as you would see perhaps in a 60-mile tramp through the country. But, of course, that spot abounds with Aldertrees, and if you want Siskins that's the tree in which to look for them.

How to Catch Siskins.

But, seeing them is not the only thing you're after; you want to catch them. So I would remind you that to do so they want a little "special catering," for the Siskin won't drop into your net as a Chaffinch will, for instance, on to a bit of chaff or earth, for you have never seen a bird the equal in cleanliness to the Siskin.

If you wish to catch him the best way to go about it is to find an old bit of bush or bramble, and put it into your nets, and, placing your call or decoy bird under the shrub or bush; then as soon as she or he hears the "shrwee" of the birds on the wing, sets about business, and down drops your quarry, and you do the rest.

A Saucy Customer.

The next interesting subject is that saucy customer, the Redpoll, who carries the danger flag of his feathered kind. If you chance to be out for a day's sport at catching about the 28th or 29th of September, and you happen to get a dozen or so Redpolls in your net, you can tell your friends, with no fear of contradiction, that birds are on wing, and in the course of a couple of days or so will be on full flight—that is to say, leaving this happy England of ours, with all the troubles of the Budget and dear beer behind, until the following March perhaps.

That is providing you or any other bird-catcher cannot catch them, and from the time the Redpoll is seen in big numbers, that species being the first, until the Twite is seen in a like capacity, you may go into the country at the break of day, almost any morning, and see flocks upon flocks of our feathered pets departing these shores.

They can also be heard travelling at night time. What a fine outlay for an enterprising would-be bird-catcher to hire an aeroplane or a "Wrights," and be like the colonel in the militia when giving his order to his squad, to "meet 'em acoming and giving 'em a poke!"

The Chaffinch's Bodyguard.

Whilst speaking of the peculiarity of birds, I may state that the Bramblefinch, if it does nothing more, performs a part in his life which, if taken on sentiment, is a rather noble one; it is he who acts as a body-guard, as it were, to the Chaffinch. You will always notice, if you catch a Bramblefinch or two, that there are more to follow, and you can bet ears to earwigs that before long you will be paid a visit by a squad of Chaffinches. And the most strange part of it is that these two particular species put together in one cage produce more strife and loose feathers in one hour than a dozen mothers-in-law at Southend would in a day; for I am convinced that a Brambkefinch and a Snow Bunting are the most vicious birds in the feathered world. Yet I love them both, and, to quote Burns, "with all their faults, I love them still."

A Powerful and Deadly Enemy.

There is yet another danger to avoid whilst bird-catching. That is the danger of losing one's braced birds at the hands (or, must I say, to be correct, the feet) of that powerful and deadly enemy of the feathered tribes—the Sparrow Hawk. If you are unlucky enough to have to make his acquaintance whilst catching, you must pit your cunning against the Hawk's. As he hovers you must attract his attention from the birds to yourself, and if that is impossible, look out; for once he starts to strike (and strike he must) this is the time to test one's ability in handling the line and nets. And one must gauge the striking distance to a nicety, so that although the Hawk intends striking the brains out of your valuable trained braced birds, you yourself mean to strike the "stuffing" out of his body, and when he gets, as you think, just inside the net, pull and make sure.

Now, we will presume you have got him. Ah, that is one part; the other parts are not so easy. Now he is in the nets you must get him out, and sharp at that, if you want any net left to go a-catching again at some future date.

So you must imitate Shrubb for the time being, and get to your nets, taking off your coat on the way there; then throw your coat over the Hawk (you will see where he is, where the net is torn most). Then, having got the coat well over him, put your hand down one of the slieves and hold down the Hawk with the other, with the coat protecting it, of course. Then with the hand down the slieve, pull back the topmost net, and try to claim the Hawk by his legs and neck, drawing his neck into the same two fingers as you hold his legs by.

If then you want to keep him, put him into a bag and take him home with you, but don't make a mistake, however, and put him in with your Goldfinches. If you don't want him—well, please yourself.

Catching Wary Goldies.

Speaking again of Goldfinches, some of you have probably tried to catch them at some time or other, and have found them so sharp (that is, extra timid by being snatched at, probably by some inexperienced catcher), that, although your song fetches them down to you as soon as they see those few yards of "twist," they seem to say, "hello, there he is again—I'm off." And off they go.

Here again is where man's cunning must combat the bird's. You must bring into play the method known as "furrowing"; that is, you must, instead of pegging your net down as described in the first part of this article, go directly opposite, and instead of pegging the bottom of the net flush or level with the cheek or shoes where the staff hooks on to, peg the net down directly under the top or armour line, and when that operation is complete, you must get a small spade or garden trowel and dig a furrow parallel with the line, so that all the lines, nets, staff, etc., are buried, as it were, out of sight. Cover them again lightly with some loose earth or leaves, or whatever herbage there is about, and, if catching sharp Goldies, have a running Goldie in your nets with some thistles, also a braced bird. When the "sharp" see this, and hears your song, he thinks things all "O.K.," and in he goes. One sharp pull then, and all is over.

Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrid.

I once had to resort to this method myself to catch some Linnets that were "sharped," and Linnets at that time were fetching 6s. a dozen; so, after I spent a couple of hours digging trenches in a heavy stubble field, and had got things just right for action, the farmer suddenly thought, and expressed the opinion, that if I did not pick up and get home he might imperil my liberty. Discretion being the better part of valour, I took his tip, much crestfallen, only to go next day and be successful.

I would strongly advise any would-be catcher not to have a weak heart, for one often sees notice boards erected by greedy land-owners—"Trespassers will be prosecuted." But one must console himself with the thought that the landowner forgot to say, "If caught."

The Trapping and Keeping of Bullfinches

Although in another part of this article I have already dealt with the trapping of Bullfinches, both by the method of trap cages and by means of birdlime, I may say they can of course be taken by netting in the same way as you would net Linnets, etc.; only instead of laying the net in an open field to catch them, one most find out where the birds are—which hedge they are running in—and use a smaller pair of nets than for Linnets, etc.

You proceed in the ordinary way, using a couple of brace birds, a "runner" and a piper, and as Bullies flit over their ground one has to be smart with the line, or they are in and out again. Just allow them to get a little more than staff high, when, let go the painter, and, if lucky, bag the birds.

Having now caught your bird, the next thing is, as I have before mentioned, to keep him; and if you care to take my experience of the keeping and weaning of Bullies for what it is worth, you are quite welcome to it.

During the first days they are in the cage, my method is as follows: If I catch Bullies on blackberries I get some berries, taking them home with me. If on privet, or whatever I catch them on, I do likewise. I give them a good supply of the berries, also a little crushed hemp and some soaked sunflower seeds. I water the birds from a pot by dipping their heads in, so that they must drink; then I put them away in a light place out of sight of sky for a couple of days. Then I have the chance of saving most of my catch.

Although I mentioned water last, it is far from being the least, in my estimation. I add a few grains of permanganate of potash, and a few grains of moist sugar to their drinking water. These respective ingredients have a very valuable property. The first tends to harden and to prepare the stomach of the birds to perform the natural digestion of the strange food. The other, the sugar, has a gentle and mild purgative action, for I have by experience proved that 99 out of every 100 deaths are due to the digestive organs refusing to battle, as it were, with the strange food, and the birds becoming constipated, which proves fatal.

This peculiar form of death I have found is very common to such birds as the 'Gale, the Blackcap, etc. And in order to counteract this I always, on getting my birds home, put just one drop of oil of olives on the vent, and, in very obstinate cases of constipation, I gently clear the vent of all feathers and moisten as before mentioned.

Methods of Catching Goldies.

The Goldfinch may be caught by the method of birdlime as well as the Bullies, only the difference is that the "Button Jack" or "Red Nob," which are "nicknames," is more frequently caught on thistle and hardheads. They are also caught with cotton bobber made by stretching cotton over a number of small sticks which are stuck in the ground at frequent intervals apart, and baited with hardheads, thistle heads, etc.; then as they fly up they become entangled in the cotton. But neither this method nor the bird lime is to be recommended by which to catch these or any other birds.

Soaked seed should be offered to fresh-caught Goldfinches, and more especially to the Greypates. For removing birdlime I always carry a small phial of vaseline, this being a quick and clean method.

I could go on all night dealing with my favourite sport, and speak of the many other methods of snaring; but being afraid I have already overtaxed your indulgence, with your kind permission I will draw this paper to a close, endeavouring to give you some illustrations of the various methods I have mentioned—bracing birds, setting nets and spring traps, etc. There may be many better methods practised by other bird catchers which I would not attempt to criticise; I only give the methods employed by myself, methods which have proved sufficient for my need, and there is no reason why they should not prove satisfactory to others. I trust this paper has proved interesting and instructive to all, and if any of you feel inclined to try your hand and luck, I hope you may derive the same pleasure I have derived from this fascinating sport, for, personally, I would rather spend one day's holiday at bird-catching than a week by the sea. If there is any point on which any one is not quite clear, or any on which further information upon any subject appertaining to bird-catching is wanted, I should be happy to apply myself to such to the best of my ability. In conclusion, I beg to remain always, "A British Bird Fancier and Amateur Catcher."

At the conclusion of the lecture many questions were asked Mr. Hawes, and ably answered. He said he always used black linenette bags to carry home his birds in, and found them fill every purpose. A bird came to less harm than when carried in a cage. Flue nets he considered most useful for the amateur, besides being inexpensive.—Mr. Lugg, on behalf of the company present, conveyed their heartiest thanks to Mr. Hawes for his able discourse, and a most instructive evening then came to a close.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

Published in two parts.

Either Part, PRICE, 1/1 POST FREE.
Or 2/3 complete, cloth bound.

Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations of birds and cages. Written and illustrated by that practical fancier, Mr H. Norman, these books contain full and up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; and all Fanciers, whether Novices or Old Hands, will find in them extremely valuable hints and instructions.

A postal order for 1/1 for one part, 2/- for the complete manual, or 2/3 bound in cloth, will bring them to you by return of post. Send to

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

In Nature's Fairyland.

A cinematograph lecture delivered before the L. and P.O.S. on Sept. 16, by Mr. Richard Kearton, F.Z.S.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society are to be congratulated upon the eminently successful character of their meeting held at the Institute of Journalists, Tudor Street, London, E.C., on September 16th, when Mr. Richard Kearton, F.Z.S., the well-known and popular naturalist, delivered a cinematograph lecture upon what, for a better term, he called "Nature Studies." This was the first lecture of its kind ever delivered before a cage bird society, and the enterprising spirit of this society, in going to the trouble and expense of providing for it, is to be commended as reflecting the greatest credit on the officials. The one and only drawback of the occasion was the lack of room, the hall engaged, though spacious and handsome, being crowded by the two hundred odd fanciers and their friends who were present.

In his introductory remarks the chairman, Mr. Geo. Crabb, stated that the lecturer's connection with the L. and P.O.S. was an old one; he supposed it was a matter of ten or fifteen years ago that Mr. Kearton was greatly instrumental in their obtaining from Messrs. Cassell and Co. certain Crystal Palace show specials. Since then he had risen to one of the topmost rungs of the ornithological ladder. They had, as a society, brought this representation before the Fancy, thinking they would do it good; and if they could, through this or any other means, obtain recruits to its ranks, they would be only too pleased to welcome them. (Hear, hear.)

Individual Characteristics of Birds.

Before having the lights lowered and the illustrations thrown on the screen, the lecturer said he claimed the indulgence of his audience because this was not one of his ordinary lectures. He had tried in the slides to introduce something of the individual characteristics of birds. He was, he said, a believer in the idea that birds of one species differed as much in individual character as human beings did. Anybody who wished to study wild birds at home, he added finally, could do so with a pair of good field glasses and by means of photographs.

At this point the lights were lowered, the lantern set in operation and the photographs thrown on the screen. Great interest was at once evinced, for not only were the pictures excellently clear and exquisite in themselves, but the subjects were such as appealed to all, and particularly to the British bird fanciers, of whom there were a large number present. The reproductions served, whatever else they did, to show at a glance the extent of the achievements in the direction of bird study by photographic representations.

Bird Pictures 200 Years Ago—and Now.

The first photograph thrown upon the screen was that of a painting of a cock Robin made direct from nature some 200 years previously; it was more than a tolerably good representation, but the next picture, a photograph of another Robin, dating some 30 years back, drew forth the applause of the audience. Still, infinitely better and more appreciated was the slide we were next favoured with, a picture of Robins photographed direct from nature, which was followed by a 200-year-old picture of a Gannet, which was afterwards "put into the shade" by a recently taken photograph of a bird of the same species. The lecturer here remarked parenthetically that it was not necessary to take long railway journeys into the country in order to study wild bird life; a goodly number of the photographs that were to be shown were, he said, secured within a 30-mile radius of Charing Cross, London.

The theory that flies never alighted on the backs of live birds was, the lecturer proceeded, effectually disproved by the picture then before his audience, which showed a Wood Pigeon with a "blue-bottle" serenely and comfortably settled on the bird's back.

Creatures of Moods.

The camera was a valuable apparatus for settling disputes in the bird world; it was never safe to come back from the North Pole, or from anywhere else, without convincing evidence—(laughter)—and this the camera made possible. The camera, too, served to show that birds, like ourselves, were creatures of mood; they had to accept the circumstances of life in which they found themselves and make the best of them. Photographs were shown illustrative of this.

The lecturer related that on occasion birds of one species had been known to feed the young of another. A gentleman he knew in Cumberland had a Robin which came regularly to his house, and which had only one leg and so, being unable to get married, the bird had to remain a bachelor, but he took to feeding the young ones in a Song Thrush's nest. Another instance was that in which a pair of Robins took care of a young Thrush in the absence of its parents, they themselves having just lost their own little ones.

Some people, continued the lecturer, thought that birds were not capable of any kind of facial expression. This was not so, he said, and the assertion was backed up by some charmingly appropriate illustrations, the first of which was of a mother Missel Thrush anxiously asking questions on the nest. The next showed her with a more subdued look on her countenance, and in the next she was seen trying to take a well earned rest.

Then followed a study in expression. It was a picture of a Brown or Wood Owl asleep, or almost so, in an old barn; but a moment after the same bird was to be seen with an expression suggestive of "Who said mouse?"

The Cowardly Husbands.

The Green Woodpecker was the subject of the following illustration, photographed, we were informed, by the lecturer's brother, Mr. Cherry Kearton. The Curlew was next depicted to the now fascinated gaze of the audience, and then the Wheatear. The Wheatears, he said, were sometimes cowardly in the extreme, and he was sorry to have to admit that it was as a rule the male birds who first showed cowardice at the nest when danger was in sight. He once caught the male bird of a pair in the cowardly act of passing some food he had for the young ones over to the female to carry into the nest, he being afraid to come nearer it than the piece of rock which figured on the screen.

The Sweet-voiced Marsh Warbler.

A photograph of a Marsh Warbler, taken in the West of England, introduced the remark that ornithologists, after long and hard work, had now established beyond doubt that this species bred in many parts of the British Isles. The lecturer stated that he was lying once beneath some undergrowth near a Marsh Warbler's home for a long time, and had then the opportunity of studying their wonderfully sweet song. The Marsh Warbler is, he said, a clever imitator, but he does not splutter out his notes and mix the songs, but will imitate the song of one bird and then pause, as if to allow the effect of the song to "sink in" before starting a fresh song.

Parasites among birds was the subject which next claimed attention. Some birds, we were assured, were thieves. Rooks would steal from the nests of other birds, and even Robins had been known to steal from a Song Thrush's nest; and the Gannet, too, was a thief. Then there was the case of the parasitic Cuckoo, which had been seen to lay an egg on the ground and then carry it in its beak and deposit it in the nest of another species.

The Hungry Cuckoo.

The ensuing pictures gave one an idea of the "hungryness" of young Cuckoos—from the first anxious waiting for the foster parent to the feeding of "the young brute," the parent bird standing on the young one's shoulder. One of the illustrations told its own tale of "a big appetite and no bread." The lecturer here related to the evident enjoyment of all, an incident which occurred when he was lecturing once in the North; when he showed this picture, to his amazement and great amusement, a boy at the back called out, "Come in out of the wet." And certainly it looked as though the poor little foster-mother might easily fall into the cavernous depths of the young Cuckoo's mouth. The Cuckoo photographs were very much appreciated.

That of the Corncrake, taken in the Outer Hebrides, gave the lecturer an opportunity of referring to the fact (published recently in our columns) that the species are now passing over London on their way south. The Corncrake made a comparatively shallow nest, we were told, in which it usually laid some six or seven eggs. But it sometimes laid as many as eleven, in which case a difficulty, with respect to accommodation, arose, which it got over by adding material day by day to the nest until the nest assumed the shape of a basin rather than of a saucer.

At this juncture the lecturer entertained his hearers to a very clever representation of the call-notes of the Corncrake, which was loudly applauded.

As people, he resumed, were very desirous nowadays of flying—(laughter)—perhaps his audience would like to know how to use their wings here or hereafter—(renewed laughter). The picture then thrown on the screen showed a Black-backed Gull in the act of alighting; this was followed by one showing the bird preparatory to a down stroke, with its wing-tips pointing to the zenith, and about to literally force itself upwards and allow room for the swoop. The bird was afterwards depicted "in the air."

The Birds "At Home."

After one or two more photographs the meeting was put into more animated spirits by the introduction of "moving pictures." We have ourselves seen some of the best cinematograph displays, but seldom, if ever, have we witnessed anything so good in quality as Mr. Kearton's wonderful representations. They are excellent in every way. The films are perfect, and the operation of the apparatus all that could be desired. The pictures as they followed one another in rapid succession, depicting bird-life under the most natural conditions, exhibiting traits of birdie character representable by no other means available, and producing a fascinating sense of reality, seemed to leave one at once pleased that such a triumph of photography had been made possible and profoundly thankful to Mr. Kearton for his splendidly able reproduction. There were woodland scenes, with the Woodpecker at work finding food for its young, and the Wryneck dexterously searching in all directions over the trunk of the tree in which its nest was situated for the insects its young depended on; there were rock scenes where were to be found Kestrel Hawks carefully tending their young.

Then there were field scenes in which Rooks were greedily feeding, much to the chagrin and disappointment of others less fortunate than themselves, until these in turn were chased away from the appetising feeding ground by an overpowering number of other Rooks; and there were beautiful lake scenes in which Starlings were to be found drinking and bathing, in company with an occasional Hawfinch and a Blackbird or two, and a pair of graceful Swans with their brood of Cygnets ever near them. The Woodpecker who bathed very gingerly caused much laughter. First he had a splash with one wing, then the other, finally entering the water tail foremost!

The peculiarities of the personal habits of the different species were also brought vividly before the interested meeting, such as the regurgitating method of the feeding of young adopted by Linnets and Bullfinches as opposed to the Chaffinch's method of feeding with live insects direct from the bill.

Mr. Kearton related that once he found the wing of an adult Blue Tit in the mouth of a young "Butcher Bird," showing what the young of this voracious species were sometimes fed on.

The exigencies of space do not permit of our going more into detail. Suffice it to say that the other species, whose private realms had been successfully "invaded" by the photographers and whose habits were thus brought before the eyes of human spectators, included the Yellowhammer, with its fat young ones, the Linnet and its family associations, the Robin and Wrens, the Nightjar (photographed near Caterham Valley, Surrey, while covering her eggs), the Great Crested Grebe, the Wryneck, the Rooks (very much "at home"), the Nightingale tending three young ones in the nest, the Song Thrush, securing food for the young, the Reed Bunting, the Wheatear (and its nest carefully obscured from view and requiring the removal of a number of stones before it could be seen), the Peewit (the lecturer here gave an interesting representation of the old ones' cry), the Redstart, the Lesser Tern, the Yellow Wagtail and many others.

The lecturer concluded his exhibition by throwing on the screen several coloured views, which we understood him to say he had himself never before seen portrayed on the sheet. They were certainly very exquisite, and made a fitting conclusion to a two hours' lecture.

A few questions having been asked and answered, Mr. Crabb proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Kearton, which was seconded by Mr. H. Goodchild. The former in his remarks emphasised the instructive value of the lecture, and the latter the kindness of the London and Provincial O.S. in providing them with so excellent an entertainment. The vote of thanks was carried unanimously, and Mr. Kearton's reply brought the proceedings to a close.

Author of "The World's Birds."

A Noteworthy Success.

Every aviculturist who values a really striking and beautiful bird will be glad to hear of the success of Mr. Teschemaker, recorded in the last number of "Bird Notes," in breeding the splendid giant or "Twelve-tailed" Whydah (Chera procne) of South Africa, for the first time in this country. This is far the largest and finest of the Whydahs, equalling a Starling in size, with a long trailing tail, of which all the feathers are elongated, more or less, not only a pair or two, as in most other Whydahs. This tail, with most of the rest of the cock's breeding-plumage, is black, with a peculiar silky sheen, but when he is out of colour the sexes look much alike, being of the streaky-brown of the Skylark, although the cock retains the orange epaulettes and black quills of the breeding-dress, the wings, as is usual in such cases, not changing like the rest of the plumage.

The Giant or "Twelve-tailed Whydah."

Dangerous Decorations.

The huge tail of this Whydah is stated by those who have observed it as a wild bird to be a source of danger to its owner; sometimes the Kaffir boys catch the cocks by stretching limed strings across the fields, on which the tails get caught as the birds fly low over them; and in wet weather the tail gets so draggled that the handicapped owner cannot fly enough to escape capture. So observers agree in stating, but from what I have seen of these birds in the Zoo aviaries, I should say their plumage was particularly waterproof; they will trail their tails all over the wet grass for a whole rainy morning without any noticeable effect. Probably it is only certain individuals, with a poor quality of feather, which get draggled in the wild state in the manner described. This Whydah has peculiarly large and broad wings, and a flight very unlike that of any other Finch, the action being very butterfly-like, especially when the male is indulging in a show flight; it is essentially a bird for a large aviary, as its beauty can only be fully appreciated when it is on the wing.

An Important Correction.

I see in my last notes, either through the fault of my handwriting, or that of the "printer's devil," I was made to say that I shipped my pigmy geese to England in a cage with a "tarred" floor. It ought, of course, to have read "barred"—a tarred floor, except that it would not let dirt soak in, would have no especial advantage; but a barred floor is what I have always used and recommended for long-distance transport cages. Of course the bars should be cane, except for Parrots, in whose case wire has perforce to be used. The difference that a floor of this sort makes when birds, especially Softbills, have to be kept in close quarters, is something astonishing, and it is chiefly due to his use of this very simple device that John Chinaman turns out his exported birds in such fine condition, as I think I have remarked before. The only thing to look out for is that the sliding tray is not so far below the bars, or the bars so close together as to prevent the birds picking up food which may have been spilled; otherwise there is a risk of their being starved if they throw their food about, though the feeding vessels ought, of course, to be of a type to prevent this. It goes without saying that they should be fixed so that they cannot be accidentally upset.

The Softbill Rearing Question.

The difficulty which many aviculturists have experienced in getting Softbills in captivity to feed their young without an unlimited supply of live food is certainly a serious point to be considered, but it will be observed that the difficulty is rather a mental than a physical one; that is to say, it is not impossible to rear young Softbills on artificial food, but it is not easy in many cases to induce the parents to believe this and use the stuff! In fact, the parent birds when breeding go back to a greater or less extent to the frame of mind they were in when they were newly caught and had to be "meated off."

It seems to me therefore that what breeding Softbills want is to be meated off afresh, so to speak, when feeding young. Everybody is pretty certain to be able to get some live food, if not an unlimited amount; and maggots, bisected mealworms, etc., should be mixed up with the soft food, so as to make them pick some up when collecting the food for their young. To allow for the tenderness of the baby birds' digestions, it would be as well to supply a better grade of soft food than that usually used for the parents; i.e., Mynahs or Thrushes, if feeding young, might well be put on Nightingales' food for the time being. A friend of mine has also suggested that the difficulty of picking crumbling stuff up and carrying it may influence Softbills against feeding with artificial food, so that it would be well to squeeze it through perforated zinc or something of the sort, so as to make elongated pellets, and it would probably aid the food in "binding" to mix it with raw egg. It is worth while taking a good deal of trouble to find out some easier way of breeding Softbills than continually closing them with "live bait," and fanciers may be reminded that a great deal of the world's progress in aviculture has been in the direction of getting our birds to take substitutes for natural food, useful and important as the latter undeniably is.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

By H. W. Battye (President of the Yorkshire Union Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson.

Absolutely the very best Handbook that has ever been put on the market. It deals fully with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder of the Bird of Grace and Beauty. It contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, LONDON, E.C.

We have extended our radius from 12 to 30 miles, writes Mr. B. Bullough, hon. secretary, Southport and Dis. C.H.S. Our subscriptions are 1s. entrance fee and 4s. per year, payable quarterly. Our annual show will be held on December 11th, when Mr. Albert Hirst (Accrington) will judge; a grand list of specials will be offered.

Last year, writes Mr. M. W. Morgan (Aberdare), I only succeeded in rearing 1 yellow hen, but this year, thanks to CAGE BIRDS, and your "Canary Breeding for Beginners," I have 9 healthy young birds. I have also your book on "Budgerigars and Cockatoels," and if time permitted would go in for the foreigners. I was interested in Mr. Wm. Hutchinson's letter in a recent issue.

The Northern Yorkshire C.C. have issued a neat little handbook, containing the club-rules, a list of the specials to be competed for during the forthcoming show season (and this includes 3 cups and gold and silver medals for both champion and novice members), and the names and addresses of the members. The secretary is Mr. T. C. Crawhall, 121, St. George's Terrace, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

We have 66 open classes for our show on October 30th, writes Mr. R. Roll, hon. secretary of the Norwich Alliance All England C.B.S., having added several to last year's classification. We shall make a special effort to pay prize and sale money promptly. Our committee can be relied upon to give every attention to all exhibits that may be entrusted to them. All we want is fanciers to send their entries along and not to leave everything till the last minute. Schedules will be posted to all last year's exhibitors.

I was surprised to find on opening my CAGE BIRDS on Friday, September 17th, the photo of myself and birds, along with prizes won with same, reproduced in the journal. It is through following the advice given week by week in your valuable paper that I owe my success. I am pleased to say that I have had a record season, having reared fifty Norwich and Yorkshires. My advice to all beginners is to take in CAGE BIRDS, and join a society. This, I think, is the one true way to success. —JOHN LEES (Rochdale).

Allow me to thank you for the honour you have done me in placing on the front page of CAGE BIRDS the picture of my Cardiff 3rd winning Goldfinch-Mule. I may say it is a splendid picture of him, and reflects great credit on your artist. The bird is a 4 pointed Mule, and won for me over 20 prizes last season, 1sts, specials, 2nds and 3rds at all the leading shows. I am pleased to say he is now coming out better than ever—just finishing moult—and I hope he will do me many more such honours. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—G. EDWARDS (Leominster).

The most conspicuous feature of "Bird Notes" —the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—for September, is the magnificent coloured frontispiece of the Black-winged Lory, from the brush of Mr. H. Goodchild, the picture being taken from a living specimen in the possession of Mr. O. Millsum, who contributes some notes on the species. There are several articles (including Mr. W. E. Teschemaker's on the the Nesting of the Dwarf Ground Dove, the Cinnamon Tree-Sparrow and Pelzeln's Saffron Finch, and Mr. H. V. Johnson's on the Ruddy Bunting), besides numerous breeding experiences, and British bird notes; all which afford interesting reading.

What is a Tick?

We notice from the schedule of the Oxford Show, to be held on October 7th, that the old-time question of "What is a tick" has been solved. A tick, it says, is a mark not larger than a sixpence.

The O.N.P.C. and Burnley Show.

Will amateur members of the Open Norwich P.C. please note that there is an omission from the Burnley Show schedule (CAGE BIRDS prizes and conditions), writes Mr. W. Clarkson, the secretary. This might lead members to think they are not being competed for at this show. Such is not the case, however, and all entrants must mark "C.B." on their entry forms.

Crested Canary Club.

Having received this morning (September 21st) a letter from Mr. Ley, stating that I had not given the details of his scheme correctly, writes Mr. J. S. Clarke, hon. secretary of the Crested Canary Club, I have decided on my own initiative to avoid confusion and loss of time by asking the secretaries of shows receiving the club's support, to cut out the paragraph referring to the guarantee against loss. This matter can then be deliberated by the club, and put before the Fancy in a proper shape. I am writing the secretaries of the shows individually.

Polly's New Occupation.

The ingenuity displayed in frauds in these days is sometimes remarkable. A woman was recently charged at Liverpool with using postage-stamps which had been previously cancelled. Each stamp had been blotted over with writing ink to conceal the cancellation mark, and upon the back of one of the letters was written, "Excuse blots; ink upset on all my stamps." This was ingenious enough, but when a postal official called upon the defendant she said she had a Parrot which escaped from its cage and upset the inkstand. "The bird walked through the ink and then over the stamps, smearing them all." But the magistrate pointed out that the bird must have been a very discriminating one, for the ink-blots only appeared where there had been cancellation marks. The case ended, it need hardly be said, in a fine.

This is my first year of Canary -breeding, writes Mr. Fred J. Young (London, S.E.), and I have done fairly well for a start, thanks to your paper, CAGE BIRDS, and to "Canary Breeding for Beginners," published by you.

Mr. J. S. Wilson will judge the Canaries, and Mr. T. Kearton the British and foreign birds, at our annual show on November 12th and 13th, writes Mr. W. J. Douglas, hon. secretary of the Whitehaven Cage Bird and H.S.

The annual members' show of the Gosport and Dis. F.A., we hear from the secretary, Mr. F. C. Harvey, will be held in the Connaught Drill Hall, High Street, on October 27th, when 20 classes will be provided for the cage-bird section.

"British Birds" for September contains a specially interesting article, written by Mr. P. H. Bahr, M.A., M.B., M.B.O.U., etc., on "The Supposed 'Colour-change' and the Spring Moult of the Black-headed Gull"; it is accompanied by eight well-drawn diagrams. "The Brown Flycatcher in Kent" ("A New British Bird") forms the subject of some observations by Mr. Mr. J. Nicoll, M.B.O.U., and there is also a large number of "Notes."

The open show to be held Nov. 19 and 20, writes Mr. H. Clayton, hon. secretary of the Pendleton and Salford O.S., will be one of the largest ever held by the society. Patronage has been granted by the following: Green Canary Association, Norwich P.H. Club, Lizard Society, and Yorkshire C.C.

A series of table shows has been arranged for in connection with the Suffolk C.B.S., the first of which will take place on October 7th, writes Mr. W. Barritt, hon. secretary. Two classes have been catered for, viz., Class 1, A.V. Adult Buff Norwich P.H.; class 2, A.V. Young Yellow Norwich P.H., which will be judged by Messrs. Mouser and Barham. The committee hope that this will be a means of bringing the members together, and remind them that the society is still in existence.

A number of short, but interesting, articles grace the pages of the September issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," which also contains several illustrations. Mr. Reginald Phillipps' notes on the Pied Rock-Thrush are duly continued, and Mr. Hubert D. Astley, F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., writes summarily concerning Townsend's Flycatcher or Solitaire. The same writer has something to say, too, about the nesting of the Magpie Tanager, while the Rufous-backed Mannikin forms the subject of an article from the pen of Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A. Mr. Finn again contributes some observations on "Aviculture at the Zoo," and there are also many notes and letters on various subjects.

Things are looking brighter in our varieties, writes Mr. John Rukin, hon. secretary of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A., as our membership is double that of last season, and practically almost all are paid-up members. I noticed in your report of the Glossop meeting you omitted the addresses of the new members. The address given for Mr. E. Fuller was omitted, I presume, owing to the peculiar address of "Rogues Den." There was nothing harmful in this, as it was the address given me by himself, and at our last meeting he showed me a handful of picture postcards, all bearing this peculiar address. His shop being frequented by lovers of birds, dogs, poultry and other fanciers, some wag dubbed it the "Rogues Den," and Mr. Fuller evidently treats it in a humorous way, as he generally gives it as his address.

"Ladder of Progress" Competition.

A scrutiny has been demanded in our "Ladder of Progress" competition, and we are now investigating the claim (which is for the second prize). We shall, we hope, be in a position to make a final announcement in our next issue.

CLUB NOTICES will this week be found on page 179.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS

will be found in the recently published handbook written

By J. W. RAMSDEN.

It tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds."

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS, Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—C. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Grecns, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Demerits of Glasshouse.

F. Groves.—The glasshouse would prove a most unsuitable place for Canaries, and you would soon find the occupants very "groggy" and in a state of perpetual moult, unless you could devise means of equalising the temperature. This you might do by having a sufficiency of sash "lights" in the top and sides made to open on ratchet irons, which could be kept open whilst the sun was beating on the glass. The cold at night would not be of any moment if the abnormal heat of the day were prevented. If you arrange sash "light," you must cover the space with wire netting in case a bird escapes. The alternative, used by itself, or in conjunction with the first-named, the latter preferably, is to have sun-blinds fitted over the glass to draw down when the sun is up, or to cover the glass with a "summer cloud," a kind of paint used by horticulturists to prevent over-heating. The ideal method is hinged sash lights to open as suggested, and hinged drop shutters of wood to fit over the glass for use at night.

Bare and Swollen.

E. M. H.—There must be something wrong with your management. In the first place, thoroughly examine cage, probing any crack or nail-hole with a pin if necessary to see if you can find traces of red mites, which, if you do, eradicate. Full directions will be found in a number of recent replies. Next sec its cage is kept out of reach of draughts, and where the atmosphere is pure and sweet. Keep it also strewn with clean gritty sand. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. In additiou, give separately a few grains of hemp twice a week, which may be varied from time to time with a pinch of maw, or gold of pleasure, or a few grains of inga as substitute. On two other days each week for the next mouth give a small piece of bread scalded in milk, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with soft sugar. A little green food should be given every second day. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week, and during the following week six drops of tincture of gentiau and four of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day. On the alternate days in the second week you may add a few grains of citrate of iron and quinine to the water if the looseness is still pronounced; otherwise it should not be necessary. If it is not quite well in, say, a month, write again.

Outdoor Bird-house.

Doubtful.—You seem to have arranged your building very nicely, and I see no reason whatever why your Canaries should not thrive in it just as well throughout the winter as up to the present. What you now have to guard against particularly is damp, and if your floor is of the proper kind to meet this contingency you should have little trouble. Either a hard concrete floor, or a wooden one raised a few inches above ground, would do well. The former would be the better if the ground is full of dampness. The windows, or rather the open wired spaces, I presume are also filled with glass, in which case I see no provision for efficient ventilation. I should advise you to make these glazed spaces in wood frames and fix them in position by hinges on the bottom edge, and fit ratchet bars at the top so that the sashes can be opened to any required degree to suit varying conditions of weather and keep the house well ventilated. On the other hand, if these spaces are only filled with wire it would be an advantage to have a blind of felt running on a roller fitted to each of the larger spaces, which you could draw down temporarily during times of cold winds or storms of rain, hail, or snow, which might otherwise render the interior uncomfortable. Altogether the glazed sashes with the extra wire protection are quite the most desirable. I think the birds will thrive best without any artificial heat at all.

An Unpromising Outlook.

J. Horme.—Honesty compels me to say that unless you get the birds in a very different state, the outlook is not promising. Perhaps after carefully reading the book which has been sent you, you will be able to detect many weak points in your present management and to "put your house in order" well in advance of next breeding season. One of the greatest evils is, to protect the birds from draught, damp, or fluctuations of temperature. These, I feel sure, are the chief cause. The diet, too, needs material alteration. Thoroughly examine cages to see if they are infested with red mites; if they are, eradicate them. Keep cages perfectly clean and strewn with fresh gritty sand. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Give separately twice a week a few grains of hemp, varied occasionally with a pinch of inga, maw, or a few grains of linseed, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake, and every second day a little green food or a bit of ripe fruit. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence two days in every three for a week, and after this twenty drops whisky, six oxymel of squills, and two eucalyptus oil well shaken together, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid. You might also add three drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the soft food each time you give it for the next fortnight. Report progress in two or three weeks' time, referring to this reply, and I will advise further if necessary. Consult our advertisement columns and deposit cash with the Editor; this is a sure safeguard.

Wash for Insect-infested Cages.

B.A.C.—Either of the following "washes" is excellent for ridding your flight of insect pests. 1. Into one gallon of boiling water place a pound of soft soap and two fluid ounces (practically four tablespoonfuls) of carbolic disinfecting fluid, as obtained from chemists. Stir well until soap is all dissolved and the water is in a creamy lather; then add four gallons of cold water, and it should be ready to use at once. Use it nicely warm, and work well into the corners, and any cracks or open joints, with a small brush. A whitewash or distemper brush is suitable for washing down walls, etc., of aviaries or large flights. No. 2 "wash" for the purpose is prepared the same as above, but by using a quarter-pint of Creolin, obtainable from the chemists, instead of carbolic fluid. I have given the quantity of "wash" you ask for, but I should imagine two gallons would be almost sufficient for any ordinary job for one dressing, and quite ample for your flight. I would, therefore, rather advise you to make up this quantity, adhering to the above proportions, and repeat dressing with a freshly-made "wash" after an interval of a week, or fortnight if the weather keeps cool.

Two Extremes.

W.W.—(1) I do not think your Roller hen, which has had six nests and twenty-eight eggs since February, constitutes a record, though I have not actual figures by me at the moment that "go one better." (2) Whether this same hen will, as you say, do well if you breed with her next year, time only will show. The policy you have adopted in taking so many nests is equivalent to the time-honoured adage of killing the goose which lays the golden eggs, and you must not be surprised if you find by experience she is not worth a brass button for breeding with next year. (3) You must first see this bird is kept in a comfortable place, not necessarily very warm, but free from draughts, or chills, or vitiated air, and where the warmth, whatever the degree may be, is fairly regular, and not always varying between "summer heat" and "zero." Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape; twice a week give a few grains of hemp, inga, and linseed, mixed in equal parts, and on two other days a small piece of bread and milk or sponge cake; and each time of giving this for the next month add two drops each of port wine and cod liver oil emulsion, and sprinkle with gold of pleasure or sesame seed. Give a little green food every second day. See that cage is strewn with clean gritty sand, and that it is free from red mites. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three days, and after that twenty drops of whiskey, six of oxymel of squills, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Finishing Touches for Cages.

F. Taylor.—Whether you paint, enamel, whitewash, or leave untouched, the insides of your cages is entirely a matter of taste. If properly done, any of these may be adopted with absolute safety so far as the birds are concerned. I favour a tinted sanitary distemper, which dries hard, without gloss, for the insides of breeding cages, and stain and varnish for the outsides; it can be done as cheaply as painting. Leaving the wood in its natural state is not to be recommended unless cages are made of a good hard and close-grained wood. Whitewash is the least durable, and the frequency of doing them up afresh is the chief objection that can be brought against it. It would not harm the birds unless made with fresh-slaked quicklime, in which case it would be advisable to allow the cages to stand empty a few weeks until the heat of the lime had dispersed. First sand-paper cages all over, blow off all dust, fill all cracks or open joints inside and outside neatly with putty, or with some of the thick distemper inside if this is the covering selected. All open joints and cracks would have been better filled with hot glue during manufacture. If inside is to be left in the natural wood give it a coat of shellac reduced to the consistency of thin paint with methylated spirit, and put a coat of priming outside. Otherwise give outside and inside a coat priming. When quite dry put on paint, distemper, or enamel, whichever you choose, inside, in two or three thin coats rather than one thick coat, and allow each coat to dry before applying another. Then put a coat of paint, or stain, as preferred (ebony or mahogany stain makes the best job) on the outsides, and when quite dry go over it lightly with very smooth sand-paper to remove any slight roughness. Put on another coat of the same material, and when this is dry add a coat of clear copal varnish. Allow all to stand a few days to dry thoroughly before handling or introducing birds. All the materials named can be obtained ready for use at any oil and colour store. If you decide to use paint inside, and want it to dry without gloss, ask for "flatting" when purchasing.

Winter Feeding in an Outhouse.

G. Dear.—You omit one very important piece of information; that is, the size of your outhouse, and whether the birds you are going to winter there will be confined in cages or allowed to fly at liberty. In the latter case, having more exercise to enable them to resist cold, which would also enable them to withstand the effects of high feeding, they would have a great advantage over caged birds similarly situated. I should advise you to increase the proportion of rape in the staple food to about a third part the bulk, and later on, when the weather begins to get very cold and damp, make up a mixture of one part each hemp, black rape, and broken groats, and a half part each of inga, linseed, and yellow mustard, giving the twenty birds from three to five teaspoonfuls of this mixture, according to the severity of the weather, three or four times a week. Twice a week give also a small quantity of crushed biscuit, or bread and milk pressed nearly dry, as a variant of the soft food you are now using, and which you may continue to use generally. A few grains of coarse oatmeal, or a pinch of malt culms sprinkled among the soft food, will also prove very useful in severe weather, as will a few sunflower or safflower seeds, if shelled, and broken in pieces, which the birds can manipulate. As a substitute for green food you will find bananas unsurpassable, and also most appreciated; next come apples, though any sweet, fleshy fruit that is not too relaxing will do for a substitute.

Colds, Moulting and Nerves.

A.A.A.C.—The severe cold doubtless brought on the moult a little prematurely, and you should not take any measures to stop the natural course of the moult unless you are convinced the moulting has already been a complete one, and the feathers now being dropped casually are new ones this season. It is not unlikely the effect is also partly due to fluctuations between the day and night temperature, or to exposure at certain times to hot and vitiated air, such as being hung near burning lamps or gas. Its diet is also rather faulty. In addition to the present staple diet give a few grains of hemp twice a week, and on two other days about half a teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent amount of bread and milk, in either case sprinkling it with a pinch of maw seed. Give a little green food four times a week. Keep cage now in a fairly comfortable place, not necessarily very warm, but equable, and where the air is pure and sweet. For the dregs of the cold give in the drinking water twenty drops whiskey, five each oxymel of squills and sweet spirits of nitre, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week. See the cage is quite free from red mites, as this pest may possibly be responsible for prolonging the moult. As regards the "bad temper," this is simply excessive nervousness, and the symptoms are due to fright or shock. You should not attempt to handle such a bird unless absolutely necessary, as such will not infrequently die instantaneously from fright when caught. Medicines are useless.

Swelling Around Eyes.

Skotty.—You do not give sufficient details to enable me to form any definite opinion as to what is wrong. You ought to have described the appearance of the swelling, and the colour of skin around it; whether it was hard or soft, or forming a "head"; whether the skin was bare of feathers, or otherwise; the length of time it had been coming; and whether there was any discharge from the eyes. It would also have been best to have said what the nourishing diet consists of. I can only suggest you give the following a trial for a fortnight, and if there is no material improvement, write again, and give the above particulars. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a spray of green food, watercress preferably, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of bread and milk sop, not too sloppy, slightly dusted twice each week with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean, and the floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Also see they are perfectly free from red mites and not exposed to draughts. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom Salts as will cover a sixpence two days in three for a week; and during the next week give six drops of tincture of gentiau and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Bathe the eyes daily for a week in a lukewarm decoction of poppy heads, with a spray of camomile added if available. Keep birds apart from others not similarly affected.

Brevities.

What Breed? (F.W.D.).—Am inclined to think the bird is a variegated Norwich Plainhead. It is, however, impossible to say definitely without seeing it. You had better get some fancier conversant with the different breeds of Canaries to look at it and tell you to what breed it belongs. To help you to form an opinion, if the above surmise is correct your bird, when compared with a common German songster, will show a richer colour, be distinctly larger in size, and of a more stout and chubby build generally.

To Start the Moult (Puzzled).—Feed on plain Canary and give separately a pinch of summer rape and a few grains of linsced every second day, and on the alternate days half a small teaspoonful of maw seed and a scrap of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Hang cage in a warm corner of kitchen, quite on the warm side, providing there is no very great drop in the temperature at night. But be careful to avoid exposure to draughts. Add to the drinking water six drops of sweet spirits of nitre and a few blades of saffron two days in every three for a week. If this does not have the desired effect, remove cage to a cold room for a few days, but again be careful to avoid draughts. Finally, think twice before trying to enforce a moult upon a healthy and apparently well-conditioned bird.

A Singing Hen (H.W.).—It is not true a hen which sings well is necessarily of no use for breeding. There are, however, lots of singing hens which do not settle down to breed, so you cannot tell whether yours will be of use or not. Time and trial alone can prove. In some cases these "masculine" hens owe their condition to abnormalities in the sexual organs, and these are just the cases that are likely to prove worthless. Feed the hen plainly through the winter months in order to keep her in a somewhat spare condition, and when the breeding season arrives feed her up for a week or so, but do not get her into very high condition; and mate her with a lusty young cock fed up into the freshest possible condition. If he does not succeed in sending her to nest I think you may confidently give her up as an incorrigible, and relegate her to a singing cage for the rest of her unnatural life.

Mountain Ash Berries (E.R.).—I have never offered these to Canaries, so cannot say whether they are either useful for, or appreciated by, these birds. Many British birds, particularly the Thrush trihe, are very fond of them. For information on this branch address a query to our British bird department. You can preserve the berries for some time by burying them in jars or boxes filled with dry sand, and then burying these receptacles a few feet deep in a dry place in the ground. For this purpose they should be gathered in dry weather, and before they become over-ripe and therefore soft.

Not Moulting (Inquirer).—As you will see by another reply, I am not much in favour of artificial methods of forcing a bird into moult when it shows no signs of dropping into it early, especially when a bird is healthy. It is none too late yet for birds to commence, and there are many that have not yet made a start; with proper care, when they do begin, however, they will get through in good time. To help the process place the bird in a warm corner of the kitchen out of reach of draughts, and where the temperature is regular. Feed as advised in another reply, and add a few blades of saffron, or six drops of tincture of saffron, and ten drops of whiskey, to the drinking water every second day for a week. If the bird still shows no signs of dropping into moult, remove to a cold but dry and draught-proof room, for a week, which should have the desired effect.

An Exhibition Bramblefinch.

Novice, H.P.—It is impossible to convey in words any adequate conception as to what constitutes "good size" in show birds. It can be gained only by visiting exhibitions and studying the winners. One has to consider not only mere length (measurement from the tip of the beak to the end of the tail), but also the girth (width through the chest). Thus a very long bird may very readily be beaten by a bird which possesses a broad, well-rounded chest, even though it loses a little in mere length by comparison. As regards the show points, the exhibition Bramble has usually a "laced" head; one with a glossy jet-black ground colour, regularly but not over-heavily spangled is the ideal. This "spangling" is caused by the brownish edging to the feathers. The hood requires to be cut cleanly under the beak, leaving the centre of the throat free from black, the hood finishing in sharp, well-defined (not ragged) lines on either side. The wing markings require to be very distinct (the colours not confused, or merged into one another), with a wide, rich brown bar across the shoulder. The bird wants to be as rich in colour as possible, and as big as possible, consistent with a graceful carriage, with a wide chest and bold head.

Giving Mules a Good Start.

Microbe.—Whata choice nom-de-plume! I agree with you as to the necessity of young Mules being given a "good start" after leaving their parents. Still, they do not need to be kept on strong egg-food (containing a lot of egg). I find that an "egg-cake" (many good recipes have appeared in our columns) crumbled or given without being moistened will answer every purpose, especially if it has had a little Plasmon powder mixed in it. When the Mules commence to feed themselves it is a very mistaken policy to leave off soft food as "soon as possible." The egg itself can be gradually left out of their diet when they are three weeks old or so, but certainly not the soft food. In addition, offer Canary and maw seeds, soaked (germinating) summer rape, and lightly cracked hemp. A few crushed sunflower seeds should also be thrown in daily, increasing the quantity as the birds get older, when I gradually discontinue the soaked seed. A few groats occasionally are relished, and a little coarse oatmeal. Some fanciers, I know, will not give young birds green stuff after they have taken them away from their parents. But this I consider a mistake. I don't believe mind you, in stuffing them with lettuce watercress and the like. What they want, and what is conducive to their successful rearing, is a free supply of the "seeding green foods," if I may use the term, meaning the seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, mouse-ear, knot-grass, groundsel, plantain and the like, especially the three first-named. But don't gather it off dusty roadsides, and strip off all large, coarse, stringy leaves. I like my young Mules to have a good fly in a large cage; some, however, turn out mischievous, so one needs to watch them.

Concerning Song Thrushes.

Lorenzo.—As I have often stated, it is not possible to sex with certainty either young or adult Song Thrushes from their plumage—cock and hen are garbed alike, and the hen is often a bigger, better-looking bird than the cock. Song is the only sure guide to the sex. If there is any other method of distinguishing the sexes, I should be glad to hear of it. As regards the food, the very cheapest satisfactory way of feeding Thrushes, Blackbirds, etc., is to get a bag of some good brand of puppy meal, or dog meal, such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox," from a corn dealer's, soften this with hot water, then mix into it some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture; it should leave the finished food just crumbly moist. You will soon find the right quantity of each to use for the daily supply (it must be made fresh daily), and find it very cheap, too. Variety is good, of course, and you should give some vegetable or green food with it frequently, such as grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. "Blackbeetles" are very much relished, likewise snails, by the Thrush trihe. Such a varied menu will keeep any Thrush or Blackbird and the like in grand health and song, provided it has a good, large cage, hung in a suitable position, and kept thoroughly clean.

A Goldfinch Failure.

H. Thomson.—I agree with you that there is "something funny" about the fact of your house-moulted Goldfinch failing to fertilise a single egg, though apparently in the very best of health and singing from dawn to dusk. It is exasperating; still, every Mule breeder ought to have at least two Goldies in his room (especially if their breeding propensities are not known to him), as it is an undoubted fact that some seem to absolutely refuse to consider marriage to a hen Canary. Your bird is apparently one of the latter kidney, as he "refused to look at the hens even when they called." I should advise you to get another one for next season. It is said, that the presence of cock Canaries in the same room is not good for Mule breeding. Indeed, my own experience some years ago led me to banish cock Canaries from my own room. The hen Canary's natural instinct must be to fall in love with a male of her own species. The latter are in breeding condition long before the Finches as a rule, and consequently the hen Canaries are almost certain to form attachments with them, and thus resent the "intrusion" of the Goldies when they are ready to be "married off." When the latter is the case, however, they often let you know it unmistakably by attacking and squabbling with the Finches. If you read an up-to-date book on Canary breeding you will find this tendency to form attachments to birds by voice, etc., dealt with therein. I must say, however, that this year, having only one bird-room, I have bred both Mules, Hybrids, and Canaries together with success. To be sure of the hens "calling" to the Goldies (presumiug you are not satisfied on the point) you could take in a cock Canary and hang him in front of the breeding cage just as the hen is beginning to build, and when he bursts into song she is almost certain to at once "call"—then the Goldie, who, of course, will be along with her, should accept the invitation. If he does not, then the clear eggs may be his fault. Keep out of sight yourself when trying this dodge.

A Nightingale for Song.

Anxious.—Your manner of procedure has been so strange that evidently you have had no experience in the keeping of insectivorous birds, and I should advise you to get at once a book (such as Part II. of the "British Bird Manual"), which deals with the subject. A "brass Canary cage" is a most unsuitable cage for such a bird as a Nightingale, and a sitting-room which has a fire in it but "about twice a week" is an unsuitable room in which to keep it during cold weather. I hope the bird is still alive (you do not say how you have attempted to feed it). I think it would have been best had you acquired some idea as to its housing and management before the bird reached you. It requires feeding on a high-grade soft-food mixture (several good ones are advertised in our columns). Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold boiled potato, varying it frequently. It is necessary, of course, to give, in addition, all the live insect food (mealworms, flies, spiders, wood-lice, earwigs, small beetles, smooth caterpillars, green fly, ants' eggs, etc.), one can possibly obtain, as in season. To the above stock mixture I frequently add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and, more occasionally, a little finely scraped raw lean mutton or beef. Good cream cheese is liked, too; give a little, finely chopped, and mixed, of course, with the above biscuit food, or just laid on top of it. Ripe fruit should also enter into the menu; banana, very ripe, pear and apple, strawberries, grapes, elderberries, blackberries, raspberries, garden currants, etc., are all more or less appreciated by tame 'Gales. The average 'Gale cannot be said to sing so freely as either Lark or Thrush in captivity.

Sex of Song Thrushes (B. B. B.).—Note the reply given "Lorenzo" this week.

Brevities.

A Catching Item (F. A. Allen).—You should have stated the county you live in, as the catching season varies in different parts of the country. Will try to get it from the office and reply next week.

A Goldfinch's Wing (Inquirer).—I am afraid you cannot mend matters. Evidently the wing has been broken, and has set in its present "cocked up" position; that being so, nothing can now be done. There will be no harm in binding the tips for a time, if you think well to do so.

Feather Trouble (E. Allfrey).—Undoubtedly your method of feeding is to blame. Crushed oats, currants, and german paste can easily be bettered for regular use. Note the reply to "Lorenzo" this week, and follow the advice. The bare place should be lightly anointed daily with mild sulphur ointment (give 3 or 4 applications).

A Siberian Goldfinch (Devonian).—Many Siberian Goldies are as "tame as kittens." Still, it all depends upon the individual, for there are plenty of wild specimens among them. An experienced fancier can pick out the "kind" birds. Cold does not harm them; but damp and draughts will. I dealt with the feeding in the reply to "U.S.A. Goldie" last week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

The Ruddy Cowbird.

"Bunvip."—This species requires seed, soft food, ripe fruit, and a few living insects; as regards seeds, a mixture of Canary, millet, paddy rice, oats, hemp, and sunflower will meet their needs. Any good soft food mixture (see advert. columns), and any insects you can capture, such as spiders, beetles, maggots, smooth caterpillars, will be greedily taken, or, failing these, give three or four mealworms daily. A roomy cage is needed, as it is a somewhat restless bird. None of the Cowbirds can really be called songsters, but, of course, they have some notes, and when these are uttered rapidly and in succession, as they often are, it is a rather pleasing song, but there are rather shrill notes among them. You give me no idea of your cage, which makes it difficult to advise you; however, a Zebra Finch is too small a species. Providing your cage is large enough to accommodate them, Red-crested Cardinals would be as good as any, and a handsome contrast to the Cowbird.

Grey Parrot Unwell.

G.B.—It certainly appears to be in a very bad way. Keep it warm; not in a vitiated atmosphere. Keep bowels moving freely with Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water. Give this frequently, but do not scour the bird. Get from your chemist a box of boney and borax, and with a camel hair brush wipe round its mouth and throat with same two or three times daily. It would be as well to put ten to twenty drops of Parrish's chemical food over daily supply of boiled maize. As it is rather weak, a few sips of weak brandy and water may also be given several times daily. As soon as its mouth and throat are better, keep a tin of seed mixture (canary, millet, oats, hemp, wheat, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in equal parts) continually in cage. Tit-bits are permissible when wholesome, but, tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps or any kind of animal food must not be given. Ripe fruit, plain cake, biscuits, nuts, and greenfood will give you an ample range wherewith to vary its diet. You have unfortunately let it get into an advanced stage before asking advice.

Brevities.

What Bulbul? (McLeod).—It is the Red-whiskered Bulbul. It is a native of India, and is very common about the gardens and cultivated areas; it is also found in the jungly and wooded districts. Its value is never large, but it varies with the quantity on the market. They have been offered as low as 3s. each this summer. At the same time I should not consider 15s., or even a little more, excessive for a true pair, and if they were acclimatised in addition, 25 to 50 per cent. more would not be out of the way.

Indian Green Parrakeet (Parrakeet).—Probably you have two hens, but I really cannot help you, save casually, as you do not tell me how you are keeping them, whether in cage or aviary. Again, these birds nest in holes in trees, which they excavate and fashion to their own liking. In captivity you must supply them either with a natural log or a nest-box with concave bottom, so that the eggs cannot roll about, but will remain naturally in about the centre of the box. If you thus provide for their needs, I should say they will lay and duly incubate next season. If you describe the plumage of each to me, I can tell whether you have a true pair, and if you also describe how they have been housed, etc., I can probably say why they failed to incubate.

PRINTED NOTE PAPER AT COST PRICE

Until further notice we have decided to supply artistic Memorandum Forms with name, address, twelve words of particulars, and block of any special variety, at the following cheap cash prices:—

250 for 2/-, 500 for 2/6.

Carriage paid to any address in the U.K.

Our latest style of note-head has been universally admired, and we will gladly send specimen to anyone enclosing stamped addressed envelope.

F. CARL, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London.

Sexual Distinctions of Virginian Cardinals (A. F. Morrison).—In most cases where the plumage of the sexes is distinct; this only applies to adult birds, as mostly with such species the young resemble the adult female, and often a supposed female turns out a young male in immature plumage; so that such distinctions can only apply to adults. With Virginian Cardinals there can be no mistake; the female has none of the rich pure scarlet areas of the male; her colouring is not so deep, and is much mixed with brownish red. The same applies to the black portion of the plumage; in the female the black facial markings are more restricted, and are distinctly brownish. Once see an adult male and female together, and you can never mistake them again.

What Bird? (F.W.D.).—It is a Roscate Cockatoo, a native of Australia. It is hardy, but the majority in this country do not make good talkers; though in Australia they bear a good reputation in this respect. They make droll and companionable pets however, mimic many noises and cries, and are accomplished acrobats. They should not be teased or scared, as this may cause them to become confirmed screamers. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, greenfood, cuttlefish, grit, and water for drinking and bathing.

Treatment for Firefinches (Anxious).—You cannot do better than follow the treatment given in the article. Dried ants' eggs (cocoons) will answer the purpose if moistened (steaming them is best); the cocoons should be moistened, not given saturated with water. If you have no convenience for steaming, they must be dried in a cloth after soaking. Ripe fruit, as in season, is very wholesome, for almost any bird that will take it; most certainly it is for Firefinches. I always give my birds green food all through the winter; this consists of lettuce, the tender variety usually sold as French lettuce by most greengrocers. Keep them out of draught, and they should do well.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Treating Java Cockatoos (E. D. G.).—(1) Do not continue to give tea sop. Get a bottle of Parrish's Chemical Food and well colour some tepid water with same; soak the bread in this and you will have no difficulty in deceiving the birds, and this is perfectly wholesome. Keep a tin of the following mixture in cage: Canary, millet, hemp, maize, wheat, and sunflower seeds; well mix before supplying. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, also cuttlefish, grit, and water for drinking and bathing. Excepting the tea and coffee sop, all the other items of diet are quite wholesome; (2) I think it would be safer to just fumigate with sulphur, and then when the room has been thoroughly ventilated and aired, it should be safe to place any of your birds therein. Many thanks for informing me that the treatment prescribed has proved successful.

Shamas Disagreeing (T.T.).—Unless kept in a fairly large enclosure, Shamas often do not agree (that is male and female). Their courtship, too, is rather a violent one, though they settle down afterwards. At this period when the space is somewhat confined, they are apt to do each other harm. It is a good plan to keep them in separate cages, side by side, and so placed, that they can caress and feed each other through the wires. Of course, when they reach this stage they could be tried together again, and nesting material supplied. It would be well to fix up in the darkest corner, fairly near top of cage, the lid of a small wicker basket as the base of a nest for them. I presume you have a true pair; in colouration the female is a very washed-out replica of the male. If you find it impossible to keep the hen, kindly let me know.

Budgerigars in a Cage (J. M. F.).—A male for preference will live alone. This species does not need heat. Keep it in the coolest part of your room, out of draught, but where it will get some sun. Canary and white millet in equal parts, with a leaf of fresh lettuce or piece of apple and a millet spray two or three times a week will meet their requirements. Cuttlefish, grit, and water, must also be supplied, so long as you can procure it free from frost; seeding grass (grass in flower is greedily eaten) is very wholesome; in fact, is the natural food. Do not keep it in a small cage; have one not less than 15 inches square and from 15 to 18 inches high. Use branches of varying thickness, with the bark on, for perches. Am rightly not allowed to recommend special dealers, and can only refer you to our advert. columns. Budgerigars travel well, being but small drinkers.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (Anxious).—Bird fever.

Canary (G. R.).—Acute pneumonia or inflammation of lungs.

Tui Parraquet (No name sent).—Softening of liver and rupture of blood-vessels of that organ.

Canary (Anxious).—Inflammation of lungs, liver and spleen, ending with apoplexy. All symptoms of bird fever.

Canary (P. M. Johnson).—It undoubtedly died of bird fever, and in all probability your other mysterious losses may be attributed to same disease. Those that succumbed after process of disinfestion had, in all likelihood, got the disease incubating in their systems beforehand.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Cutting (W. Dunn).—Many thanks for your kindness.

Fresh-Caught Birds and Drinking Water (F. Hartley).—Note the reply given H. Platt.

A Bird Spray (C. F. Killick).—Reply given H. Platt applies also in the case of your spray.

An Exchange (W.H.).—It is seemingly fair that the party to a contemplated exchange who first receives the goods should be the first to return the same.

About Young Canaries (H. E. Kent).—Your query reaches us too late to be answered this week by our specialist. You will find all the information given in detail in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (post free 7d. from this office).

Illustrated Ideas (W. Harker).—This is too much like the one previously published, and we have more than once given the water bottle idea. (Bakewell Bros.).—We receive a great number of ideas, which have to be considered in turn, and even then, of course, we cannot possibly publish them all. (W. J. Eddowes).—We have already utilised a similar idea.

A Seed Box Top (J. Machin).—We really cannot follow your idea; it is not clearly explained. What kind of seed box is it?

Larne Society (Wm. Geddis).—We are glad to hear of your successful start. Will you kindly communicate your address to us?

Wild Birds and Water (H. Platt).—We have, we believe, on more than one occasion illustrated the method you give (or a very similar method) in our columns.

A Skylark Matter (A. Hopkinson).—It is against the rules to disclose the addresses of correspondents without their permission. We shall be glad to address and forward on your communication if sent duly stamped.

Machine for Cage Making (Constant Reader).—Your question puzzles us. We do not know of any "machine for making cages"—except, of course, the "human machine." When did you hear of it? If you are referring to suitable tools for cage-making, then such are advertised in "Cage Birds Annual" by Mr. A. House, 170, Falcon-rd., Clapham Junction, London.

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Monthly meeting held September 13th, Mr. W. H. Moore presiding. The arrangements for annual open show, to be held at Forester's Hall on October 27th and 28th, were completed. The schedule comprises 36 classes, open to all comers. Valuable cash prizes and specials are offered, amounting to upwards of £40. Tickets of admission, if purchased before the show, will entitle the holder to participate in the prize drawing, for which a high-class pure-bred Norwich Canary and cage will be offered. This will be on view and drawn for immediately after the opening ceremony. Novices are specially catered for.—H. HARNING.

UDDINGSTON O.S.

A largely-attended meeting was held in the Reading Rooms on September 18th, to hear a proposal by the Game and Game Bantam Club asking us to hold our Cage Bird Show in connection with theirs, which is hooked for 11th December, in the Public Hall. Mr. Hugh Anderson (President) occupied the chair, and as their terms seemed in every way satisfactory, it was unanimously agreed to hold our show in connection with them. The show will be open, and as this is our first open show, I trust that cage bird fanciers will give us their loyal support, and perhaps by another season we will be able to hold an open show of cage birds alone. We are providing 42 classes for Canary and British birds.—JNO. KILPATRICK, Assist. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

A record meeting was held in Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger-street, Newcastle, on September 17th, when Mr. J. Bailey, of Sandy-lane, Bradford, gave a washing exhibition, Mr. Davison in the chair. There was an exceptionally large muster of members and friends to pick up hints from so able an exponent as Mr. Bailey. It was regretted that many members were unable to attend, but if they had come it would have been difficult to have found room for them. Those who were there were delighted with the way Mr. Bailey handled the bird and the quickness with which he performed the operation; so quick were his movements that many had a difficulty in following. But he carefully explained all the process as he went along, and what they missed seeing in one bird they picked up as he did the next. After washing three birds he called for a member to do the fourth, and Mr. W. Curry, the esteemed secretary of Newcastle C.B.S., put the other through. He explained that it was only his second attempt, but the way he did it, and the result when finished, proved that with experience he would soon be an expert in the art. While the birds were drying, Mr. Bailey explained his method of feeding and preparing for exhibition, his great point being thoroughness and attention to detail. Most of the points he mentioned were new to the majority of the visitors and members, and many valuable wrinkles were learned. An amusing feature of the discussion was the difficulty the Northumbrians and Yorkshiremen had in making themselves understood, and on more than one occasion the secretary was called upon to act as interpreter. Hearty votes of thanks closed one of the most agreeable evenings in the history of the club. Members are now all agog to know who is going to win the specials, and the O'Neal Cup is coming in especially for a lot of discussion. Some are openly boasting of their birds; others have a merry twinkle in their eyes and say nothing. What a pity there is not a cup for each!—T. C. CRAWHALL, Hon. Sec.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A ramble took place on August 29th through Bradley Woods via Mirfield and Kirkbeaton Moors. A large number of members turned up at the "Red Lion," Bankfoot, at eleven o'clock, and proceeded along Roolcy-lane to Dudley Hill. Taking the car here, we rode to Birkenshaw and changed cars for Liversedge. The trams were left behind at Millbridge, and the party proceeded to climb up the hill, turning off at the top, finding their way across the fields to Lee Green, Mirfield (on the way across the fields several members took the opportunity to make a start in collecting "rats' tails," of which our feathered pets are so very fond). On reaching Lee Green a halt was called for lunch at the hotel kept by a friend of some of the party—Mr. Fred. Wright. After a rest of an hour, the party again wended their way through Battyeford to the Ha'penny Bridge, where much amusement was caused when the old watchman came out and tried to stem the tide of people to collect the halfpennies for toll. A large number of our party had not been this way before, and they thought the watchman was taking a "rise" out of them, and the why and the wherefore took quite a lot of explaining before the toll was paid. On leaving the Bridge the party proceeded along the side of the new Midland Railway line which is in course of construction between Bradford and Huddersfield, and here again the ramblers started picking "rats' tails," some of which were twelve inches long. There were some very nice poppies growing, and several large bunches of these pretty flowers were gathered. From here the party dropped into Colnebridge, and tea was partaken of at the "Spinners' Arms," the landlord, Mr. Joe Hirst, putting a very good "knife and fork tea" on the table, to which full justice was done. Even the champion eater of the party got so much that he had to refuse a third lot of beef. After a stay of two hours here the party proceeded by way of Bradley-lane into Bradley Woods, and while going through the fields it started to rain, which made things rather uncomfortable travelling. However, this did not "damp the spirits of the party, who went on their way "as merry as sandboys," singing and cracking jokes until the tram was reached at Brighouse. The party then rode to Bailiff Bridge and walked up Wyke Bank to the Wyke Cass. Home was reached at 10 o'clock, everybody having thoroughly enjoyed themselves, despite the rain in the latter part of the journey.—E. W. JOHNSON, Hon. Sec.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

At the monthly meeting it was decided to have a table show on October 27th for young and old birds along with British, also a class for Foreigners, making 17 classes in all. Birds are to be staged at 7 p.m. prompt. Will members please note Rule 8, viz., "That all subscriptions for the present year must be paid up to and including the November meeting to allow to compete in members' classes at our open show on November 27th." This rule will be strictly enforced.—W. UNDERWOOD, Assist. Sec.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

For our meeting held on September 11th, at the Great Eastern Hotel, Oldham, there was only a moderate attendance owing to unforeseen circumstances; but a fair amount of business was transacted, Mr. J. Swalwell in the chair. Business of previous meeting was confirmed, including show patronage. We had the pleasure of welcoming Mr. B. Mella, of Rochdale, to our ranks. We decided to give medals at present to shows where our support is being given; the Sec. was asked to get same as early as possible. It was also decided to write members not having paid their subs. to the effect they will not be able to compete for specials till such are paid. It was also decided to write the Manchester and N.C.O.S. in regard to Lancs. classes, and that we hold our next meeting at Rochdale O.C. Rooms on the second Saturday in October. Medals are allotted as follows:—Best Lancs in show in champion section, Rochdale O.C., Nottingham, Frome F.A.; best Lancs in novice section, Manchester, Rochdale "G.I.," Littleborough; best vhc bird, Middleton and Palace.—WM. ADAMS, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

I am now in a position to place before the members of the Midland Counties Y.C.C. a full list of shows which have been granted our patronage, along with dates and names of judges. I have not up to the time of writing received all subscriptions from members whose names are down on my books, and if there are any fanciers who wish to join, will they send along their subscriptions as they will still be in time? We must have all the fanciers who are interested in the Yorkshire Canary residing in the Midland Counties as members of our club; then we can depend upon its being a success. So please rally round us and join at once. The subscriptions are small and the prizes large. I should be pleased to forward rules and full particulars to any wishing to join. The names of shows, etc., are as follows:—October 21st, Hanley (4 novice classes only), judge Mr. W. Mundell; October 28th and 29th, Wolverhampton (4 novice and 6 champion classes), judge Mr. J. C. Barnes; November 17th and 18th, West Bromwich (6 champion classes), judge Mr. J. H. Payne; December 1st and 2nd, City of Birmingham (4 novice and 6 champion), judge Mr. C. House; December 11th, Tamworth (6 champion classes), judge Mr. J. H. Roe; December 18th, Long Eaton (6 champion classes), judges Messrs. R. Rhodes and J. Brown; January, M.C.Y.C.C. (6 champion, 4 novice), judge and date to be decided at a future meeting. This is a wind-up show for members only, to finish the season, to be held at headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-street, Birmingham.—W. H. UZZELL, Hon. Sec., 76, Drayton-road, King's Heath, Birmingham.

Questions and Answers on the Norwich Canary.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, September 6th. Mr. Carr occupied the chair, and about 60 members and friends turned up. The topic for the evening was "The Norwich Canary—Questions and Answers." The mode of procedure was: To place a number of questions and some blank slips in a hat, each member to draw one. If a question was drawn the drawer was supposed to answer it. Mr. Carr, who drew "How would you improve quality?" said that in his opinion you must start with quality and introduce colour if any is required after. Mr. B. F. Forse drew: "Do you believe in double buffing?" Mr. Forse said no, he did not, as, in his opinion, it did not increase the size of the offspring a bit, but only gave longer feather; at least, that was his experience with Yorkshires. Mr. Carr said that it should be done with very close-feathered ticked birds. He had done so with beneficial results; it made the offspring look larger. But don't use coarse-feathered birds, he added.

Mr. Burbidge, who drew: "What is your opinion of Green blood; is it best on the cock or the hen side?" said that he preferred the colour on the hen side, but liked cinnamon better than green blood. Mr. Carr said he did not care for cinnamon, as, in his opinion, it did not improve the feather of the Norwich, and, once got into a strain, took some getting out. Mr. Ovenden here said that he introduced it 16 or 17 years ago, and it had lain dormant until last year, when he had a clear yellow cinnamon, and had had the same again this year. Mr. Corley drew: "How would you get over the fault of birds with brow?" and said that, in his opinion, it was best to breed from tight-feathered birds with good round heads. Mr. Carr said he thought it was owing to the introduction of the Crest-bred into the Norwich. Mr. Wilson drew: "How would you get over the fault of bad wing carriage?" Mr. Carr said the only way was not to pair up two birds with the same fault. He would not discard a cock with bad wing carriage, but should be very careful about the hen. Mr. Garner who drew: "How would you improve colour?" said that he would breed from green ticked cocks, and should also like some green blood in the hens.

Mr. A. B. Forse drew: "What remedy would you suggest for a bird that is over fat?" He said he would be very careful about diet and give plenty of boiled rape and bread and milk; and keep the bowels well open. Mr. Rhodes, who drew: "How would you improve head qualities?" said it was a "poser" for him, as he was only a beginner, but if anyone wanted to know what to do for a bad head in the morning after a "thick" night, he might be able to give them a tip. Mr. Carr said he would not breed from a flat-headed hen, as, in his opinion, you got type from the hen. Mr. Stephens drew: "How would you treat a bird with a stiff claw?" and caused roars of laughter by saying he did not know what a stiff claw was, but he should say that a liberal application of Elliman's would put matters right. Mr. A. B. Forse recommended the use of different sized and shaped perches. Mr. Ovenden, who drew: "How would you improve size?" said that, in his opinion, you must have it to start with; you cannot produce it. Mr. Hale drew: "How do you stop feather-plucking?" and in reply said he would like to know himself, but he thought the best plan was to find out the ones that did the plucking, and put them into cages by themselves. Mr. J. S. Clarke said that it was his experience that it was only young birds that did any plucking. He had never known a bird a year or more old do so. Mr. Wallace proposed, and Mr. Wood seconded, a very hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, which brought a most interesting and instructive meeting to a close.—J. A. BARNARD.

"Hereby Hangs a Tale."

SIR,—I have a young Scotch Fancy cock Canary four months old, and up to the present time it has not grown any tail. We often hear of birds with crossed beaks, and so on, but for a bird not to grow a tail is a somewhat unusual thing. I have kept and bred all kinds of Canaries for the past twenty-five years, and never in my experience did I ever breed one but what duly grew a tail. Has any of the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS ever experienced the same thing? The bird referred to is well over the moult, but there is not the least sign of any tail growing, which, I think, is a very rare occurrence. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

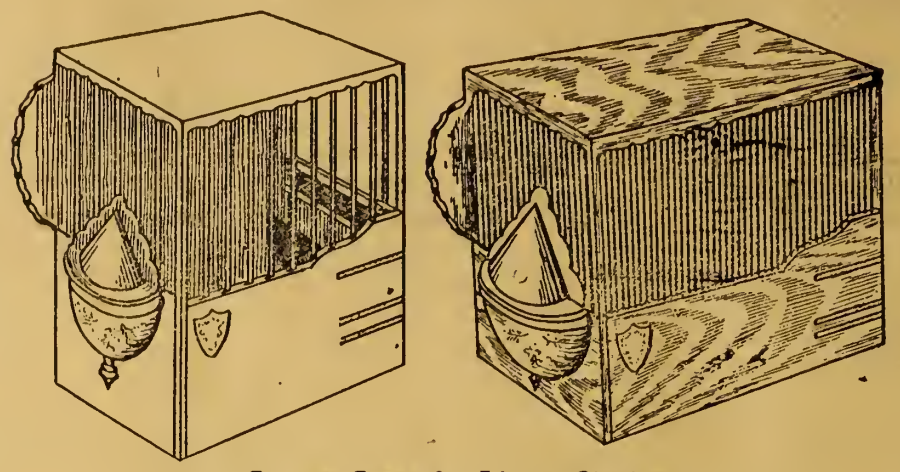
CHAS. KELSEY.

Whose Ideas were they?

SIR,—It will be remembered that on April 5th, at the Leyton and District C.B.A. headquarters, a lecture was given by Mr. C. H. Cooper, of West Ham, on "Breeding Cages," where questions were asked after the lecture was over, and which resulted, on May 8th, in my acceptance of his request of a full meeting to prove the truth of my statement. Up to the present I have not heard anything from him in reference to this, through CAGE BIRDS or otherwise. I shall be very pleased to have this meeting arranged, and will with pleasure meet Mr. C. H. Cooper, Mr. Ashwood, and Mr. Sidney Bartrop. As it is the wish of Mr. Cooper to have a general meeting, and being in a working-man fanciers' district, I should like to be permitted to ask members to attend from the neighbouring societies—Ilford, Poplar, Stratford and East London, East Ham and Leyton and District.

A. MALLETT.

The Yorkshire C.B. Society of Ireland.



SIR,—The above-named club having been formed for the furtherance of the Fancy in Ireland, a general meeting was held at the Douglas Hotel, Eden Quay, on September 9th, when a good muster of members and intending members attended. The society, at the first meeting, received 26 names for membership, and at the adjourned general meeting held on September 13 the total number of members amounted to 34, comprising, I may say, the cream of the Fancy in Ireland. When the society has behind it such staunch supporters and fanciers as Messrs. Devins, Mulligan, McQuade, Hawkins, Fleming, South and Coyne from the provinces, and Messrs. Sheridan and Fry, Gillen, Rooney, Dowling, Birse, Huggard and McDonald in Dublin, the society bids fair to be a huge success. With regard to cups, the appeal has been amply responded to. Mr. Birse kindly promised to give a ten-guinea challenge cup, to be won three years, and Messrs. Sheridan and Fry promised a cup for the novice classes, with a good "special" from Mr. Rooney that will be worth winning. A committee meeting was held on September 16th to go into the classification, date of show, etc., all fanciers being well provided for. D. CARRALL, Hon. Sec.

Concerning the Sweet-voiced Skylark.

SIR,—Doubtless there are many readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, who have lately been appreciating various articles given by experienced fanciers upon one of our lovely songsters, viz., the Skylark. Personally, I desire to tender my thanks for last week's article—"A Skylark that sings every day," by Mr. E. N. Smith. Permit me to call him a true fancier, he having detailed the secret of his success for the education of others. May this practice long continue, and the corners of selfishness in the Fancy be made to disappear. There are many Lark lovers who would gladly welcome details of the cage made by Mr. E. N. Smith. How varied the cages are! One often wonders who has the most desirable cage for the comfort of his favourite pet. Recently I have been drawn into the Fancy mainly through the valuable notes appearing from time to time in CAGE BIRDS, not forgetting an attractive Lark, which can any day be seen outside the upper window of one of the most noted public buildings of Sheffield, although situated in one of her remotest slums. Here day by day the Skylark pours forth its song uninterrupted by the vast amount of traffic constantly passing—at one moment electric cars pass; then the ambulance, or a "Black Maria," and not least the fire-engine, which dashes along under the bird's cage. But perkily and unconcerned the bird continues to pour forth its song. How I wish Mr. Smith, or any other true fancier, could come and see it. I regard the Skylark as the king of songsters. I can readily understand how many fanciers locally have tried but failed to obtain a similar bird—possibly through not having a successful mode of treatment. Thus fanciers like our friend Mr. Smith are sowing the seeds of human kindness when they furnish your readers with the secrets of their success whereby others may benefit.

Contest Cages for Linnet Singing.

No. 1, for Steady Birds. No. 2, for Nervous Birds.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—I send you sketches of two Linnet contest cages as promised. No. 1 is for a very steady bird, and No. 2 for a very wild bird. If you care to publish the same I should then be pleased to see the class of cage the Northern Linnet fanciers use. Respecting "Linnet Fancier's" letter, a man not ashamed of his name is my version of a fancier (with or without a free advertisement). I say again that I have mentioned the most correct and the best Linnet song that it is possible to get. What is more, "Linnet Fancier" can come and hear it. Not every one of my Linnets has got it, of course. All are kept in the same room as Chaffinches singing stout; so here is one who risks it. What I keep a tutor for is known to myself. I have expected a lot of French fanciers to answer Mr. Geo. Rostron's best Linnet song, as it is not known in English as a Linnet's song, and I trust it never will be. Again, Mr. Rostron runs on to say the Chaffinch sings the same song whether caught North or South. This is the biggest mistake he ever made in his life. Travel the world over you cannot find song to equal Chingford's (Epping Forest).

Rearing Insectivorous Birds on Soft-Food Mixtures.

SIR,—I see in the last number of "Bird Notes" that Miss M. E. Baker has been breeding the Malabar Mynahs this year, and says that she gave them live food in variety, but also that "although so much insect food was given, the young were not brought up on that alone, as they consumed a lot of ants' eggs (as bought), dried flies, some small pieces of beef and milk sop." Evidently some people's birds will feed on non-living food, if Mr. Farrar's won't, and that is enough answer to him for the present, I think.

FRANK FINN.

SIR,—If "Enquirer" cares to write to me I shall be very pleased to tell him anything he may wish to know in respect of the method of feeding my birds. As a matter of fact, the question of food is a different problem for each and all of us; in my case, the problem is how to get 200 birds so simply and methodically fed by an ordinary housemaid, in addition to her ordinary work, that I can leave home any day of the year and stay away as long as I wish. If "Enquirer" lives in my district, and would like to give me a call, he will be able to judge for himself whether I am right or wrong in saying that Softbills can be moulted on the simplest possible foods as successfully as on the heterogeneous and expensive mixtures which we see advertised. W. E. TESCHEMAKER.

Ringmore, Teignmouth.

SIR,—I am glad that my letter on this subject has elicited such an interesting expression of opinion from Mr. Farrar. No aviculturist has had such an extensive experience of breeding insectivorous birds as Mr. Farrar, and therefore I am pleased to find that he is able to endorse my statements. I am sorry, however, to learn his reasons for no longer supporting the Avicultural Society. I fully agree that some of the earlier breeding records of the Zoological Society are extremely mythical, and also that some of the decisions of the Avicultural Society have not been felicitous; but at the same time I do not forget that the A.S. has done much useful work, and for that reason I think we all ought to support it. Had I not wished to thank Mr. Farrar for his letter I should not have had anything more to say on this subject, because I have never yet wasted my time in exchanging personalities with anyone in the public Press, and I certainly do not intend to do so now. When I said that the young Bank Mynah was bred in the Central Division of the Western Aviary I was simply repeating a statement made to me by one of the keepers, and, as I expressly said that I was prepared to assume that this individual bird had been reared to a certain age on artificial food, it is relatively unimportant whether the parents had access to the whole of the Central Division or to a part only. I notice that there was also an "Oddment" apparently intended for me last week. Some people, we were told, are better at carping than at giving practical advice. My object in writing was simply to protest against our poor birds being made the subject of freak experiments. Had I wished to carp at or hold up to ridicule Mr. Finn's views, I should certainly not have selected a subject on which his views are, at all events, comprehensible, but some of his other remarks, such as the suggested experiment of attaching coloured glass balls to a nest to warn off Pekin Robins! As a matter of fact, the truth is that when Mr. Finn tells us how Bulbuls are braced in India, he writes most interestingly, but when he tackles subjects which are outside the scope of his personal experience, his advice is, as Mr. Farrar says, very, very odd. For instance, last week we had a paragraph on how to breed the Bearded Tit. We are first told that no young have as yet ever left the nest in confinement. If Mr. Finn had taken the trouble to look up a few of the back numbers of the magazine of which he is at present Editor, he would have known that this is quite incorrect. Then we are recommended to make an imitation reed-bed of dwarf Bamboos. I know there are many worthy people whose ideas about British birds are drawn from books, who imagine that because this species is found in reed-beds, therefore it nests in such situations; but, as a matter of fact, in this country at all events, the nest is never found amongst growing reeds. The Reed-Warbler knows how to attach its nest to the stems, but the Reedling apparently does not. Also, has Mr. Finn any idea of the cost of making such a reed-bed? I have several times planted bamboos, and I have never been able to purchase them for less than 3s. 6d. per clump of roots of about nine inches in diameter. I will not say anything about the food suggested, but, may I ask what is an "insectivorous mixture"? We all know that "insectivorous" means "insect-eating," but what an "insectivorous mixture" may mean we can only conjecture. It is certainly surprising that the author of so slip-shod a paragraph as this should have the audacity to tell anyone that his statements are so inaccurate as not to be worth considering. As I said before, I do not intend to have anything more to say about this subject, because my interest in aviculture most certainly does not extend to the bickerings which seem somehow to be inseparably connected with it. W. E. TESCHEMAKER.

We have deleted a paragraph from the above letter which dealt with the Avicultural Society and its personnel—matters foreign to the subject at present under discussion. At the same time, should Mr. Teschemaker desire to discuss the management of the Avicultural Society our columns are freely open to him if he chooses to treat it as a matter distinct from the feeding of insectivorous birds.—EDITOR.

Observations of Bird Life on the Norfolk Coast.

SIR,—In the course of a recent visit to the North-East Coast of Norfolk, I identified the following species: Misselthrush, Songthrush, Blackbird, Wheatear (plentiful; singly as usual—I caught 40 in one day), Whinchat, Stonechat, Redstart (several, all immature), Robin, Whitethroat (two or three), Hedge Accentor, Blue Tit (two or three only), Pied Wagtail (a fair number), Meadow Pipit (a few), Pied Flycatcher (a few, immature), Swallow, Martin, Sand Martin, Greenfinch (not many), Goldfinch (three Greypates, also one ditto), Sparrow, Chaffinch, Linnet (plentiful, mostly in pairs, but sometimes six or eight together), Yellow Bunting (a fair number), Starling (of all the birds I saw this was the one most in evidence), Jackdaw, Crow, Rook, Lark, Swift (one only, on September 4th, not in same place later), Kestrel (three or four), Heron (four), Woodpigeon, Pheasant, Partridge, Moorhen, Coot, Peewit, Redshank, Curlew (30 or 40 in all), Blackheaded Gull, Herring Gull, Lesser Blackheaded Gull, and Greater Blackheaded Gull. I had been on the look-out for a week before I saw any of the following—Rook, Chaffinch and Misselthrush. Tits were very little in evidence. Several days following September 4th were wet and rough, with N.W., N. and N.E. wind, chiefly N.W., and probably the Swift took advantage of them to be off. I found Wheatears, Stonechats, Whinchats, Redstarts, Pied Flycatchers and Whitethroats on an uncultivated knoll near the sea on September 11th and following day. No doubt all were on migration from the north, brought in by the northerly winds referred to. The above date was probably the first day of the autumn migration from the north, and is, I believe, somewhat earlier than usual. The Pied Flycatchers disappeared in a day or two (one I saw, well, seemed very miserable in the cold and the wet, with wings drooped and tail up), and the other migrants soon thinned off. However, the Wheatears did not seem in a hurry to move, evidently finding a fair amount of their food in the newly-mown cornfields. Mr. Cody, the aviator, said the other day that with a good wind at his back he could do 80 miles in the same time that he could do 50 miles without wind, and time is probably of more importance to a migrant than to an aviator, seeing it wants to economise time "between meals," and so it knows the value of a good strong wind at its back. Sea birds were not much in evidence. The coast was sandy, with almost nothing of a rocky nature. My list indicates that a number of the Summer migrants had already gone from the district. The disappointments of a time of observation as described above are, as every one knows, probably more important than the successes, and so it was in this case.

How to Prevent Young Canaries Getting Dirty.

SIR,—I have been a reader of your most valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS for a year or so, and have received a lot of information from it. This is the first year I have tried to breed Canaries, and have 13 young from one pair—Norwich. They are about sixteen weeks old, and were very clean when young; but as they got older they became dirtier, and now they are of a dirty yellow colour. I give them a bath about twice a week, and feed them on a diet of plain Canary and a pinch of rape seeds, and egg food three times a week. I keep them in a kitchen in large flight cages. I would be much obliged if some of your readers could kindly tell me how to get them clean, and how it is they get so dirty. I may say some of the birds have finished moulting, and are going dirty already.

H. FOSTER.

"Going Light": Can it be Cured?

SIR,—In reference to the recent correspondence in CAGE BIRDS, under the above heading, kindly permit me to state that I have obtained excellent results in regard to this troublesome malady by the use of Fellowes' Syrup of Hypophosphates, given in doses of ten drops in the birds' drinker. The mixture is rather expensive, but I have found the outlay amply justified in the improved physique of the stock due to its use. The remedy was given me some years ago by an old and very experienced Yorkshire breeder, and I believe it is largely used in the rooms of prominent breeders in the county of the White Rose. I may say I always give the syrup in the water of my young birds, on the principle that prevention is better than cure, and as I have had no case of "going light" in my room for some seasons now, I have naturally attributed my good fortune to this practice. I would strongly advise fanciers troubled with the malady in question to give the syrup a good trial.

A Cure Wanted for the Cramp in a Linnet.

SIR,—Would any of the readers of CAGE BIRDS tell me the cause (and cure if there is one) of a Linnet's loss of use of legs? I obtained a dozen Linnets through your paper, and put them in a 5ft. flight cage, cracked all their seed for them, put plenty of bird grit in and clean water, and I have had them for over a week. I found one of them recently with cramp; it is lively, but had no use in its legs. It cannot stand. I am ready for CAGE BIRDS every Friday.

How to Get the Seed Out of Thistle Heads.

SIR,—I have been "trying my hand" at making the machine for extracting thistle seeds as described in CAGE BIRDS of August 21st, and after much trouble I find mine does not work satisfactorily. I should be much obliged to Mr. Edwards if he would help me in regard to the following details, through your most useful columns. What is the diameter of top drum inside; what thickness are the revolving teeth; how far apart are they set in spindle; are they spiked, and what diameter do they cover in revolving; what height should the fixed teeth stand, and what space is allowed between the two rows; also what size of slot (if any) runs between them for seed to drop into perforated drawer?

The John Farquhar (Newcraighall) Subscription Appeal.

SIR,—I have just had the sheets for the above-mentioned subscription handed to me. It will be remembered that several members of the Musselburgh O.S., seeing the necessity of something being done for Mr. Farquhar, a well-known fancier, who has been unable to follow his usual employment for some considerable time, invited subscriptions from all fanciers, and the following gentlemen were appointed to carry out the work: Messrs. W. R. Dunn, D. Kay, S. G. Carruthers, M. Kavanah, and W. Nisbet, Mr. Kavanah acting as treasurer. The following is the result: Musselburgh O.S., £2 8s.; Edinburgh Southern, £4 16s.; Edinburgh Metropolitan Derby, £1 4s. 6d.; J. Kean, Edinburgh, 2s., making a total of £8 10s. 6d. The above sum has been handed over to Mr. Farquahar.

Hon. Sec. Musselburgh O.S.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I am very pleased indeed to see on reading your paper, CAGE BIRDS, the common-sense article re suggested treatment of bird fever, and hope and trust it will be the means of saving a great deal of bird life in the Fancy, and also that it will be the means of getting a good hold of and lead to the eradicating of this terrible scourge.

W. R. EVERETT.

SIR,—I was much interested in the result of examination of my birds, and thank you for taking so much trouble in the publication of matter. I suppose the term "bird fever" means enteric, or does it cover enteritis, dysentery, bird plague, enteric, inflammation, and other terms we are accustomed to see in various post-mortem reports on birds? My friend, who has also lost his valuable stock from the same disease, sent one for examination, and the report was dysentery. I would like to correct a statement made in a report published. My friend did not know he had any disease in his bird-room when he sold me birds, as stated, and I could not blame him in any way. Neither of us had any deaths until the breeding operations commenced. His commenced to die first, but he started breeding earlier than I did. Neither of us had any mice to carry infection from one cage to another. I never had any, and my friend cleared all his out with virus before he started breeding operations. The strangest thing about it is that we both lost the hens first, and fanciers who have experienced the "fever" proper say it is nothing like the same disease we have had. In conclusion, I would like to thank all those who have taken the trouble to write and try to help, and I am glad to say I have lost no more. The six birds I have left seem to be in excellent health.

THOS. ROBSON.

The Scottish B.B. & M. Club's Patronage.

SIR,—I notice a letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS signed R. Farmer. Will this be the late secretary of the above club? He hopes that no one will misunderstand his intention "for the good of his former club friends." I think no one can misunderstand; he wants to make out that the secretary, Mr. A. W. Watson's report was all a lot of bluff in saying that he had a record application for patronage (which says a lot for the ever-growing popularity of this society). Now, Mr. Farmer says (and he should know) that in 1907 the applications exceeded the number for this year, and that more societies received the patronage of the club. He goes on to say, in fact (if it is correct), that six societies only have this year been granted it, and that conditionally. He says that this is the smallest number for the past six years, if not in the first year of the club, and that it clearly indicates the true position of the club. What could your readers think from Mr. Farmer's statement but that the above club is going back? He simply condemns Mr. Watson's report to CAGE BIRDS as being untrue; he wants to do the club all the harm he can when he attacks the Secretary's report, and gives the "true position." If Mr. Farmer wanted to do the club no harm then he should have let the Secretary's report go unnoticed. I suppose he cannot entertain anything but the truth, which is a very good principle. Mr. Farmer was a very hard-working secretary for the club during his term of office. He put it in a good position by starting a subscription fund for the trophy which is now in competition; they say it cost over £7. I know that the late secretary, Mr. Farmer, was the means of getting this money for the above trophy, as I believe I was the first subscriber towards it. I suppose, then, that Mr. Farmer doesn't want Mr. Watson to surpass him (or appear to) in the working of this society by sending false reports to your valuable paper.

OLD MEMBER.

Larne and District Cage Bird Association.

SIR,—The above newly-formed Association held their preliminary meeting in Magee's Temperance Restaurant on September 14th. The attendance of local fanciers was good. Mr. Sam Magee was voted to the chair, and was subsequently appointed Chairman of Committee. Mr. Wm Kane was elected hon. treasurer, with the following committee (with power to add to their number): Messrs. Wm. Owens, J. Harte, T. Streight, Wm. Smith, and C. McConkey. It was arranged to hold the first show open to all Ireland in January next. The Secretary was instructed to write and ascertain if the Association could have the patronage of the Crest and Norwich Plainhead Club and the Yorkshire Canary Club. It was arranged that the membership fee be 2s. 6d., payable on entering.

WM. GEDDIS, Hon. Sec.

A Note on the Handsome Cirl Bunting.

SIR,—The Cirl Bunting is a handsome bird, but, like all other Buntings, is a very poor songster, having a kind of squeaking call very unpleasant to the ear. The species is not very plentiful. In Somerset they are rather shy; they are found mostly in the agricultural districts in the corn fields, as they feed a great deal on corn, such as oats and wheat and other small seed. The birds are also fond of a little insect food. In the winter they can be seen in the farm yards with other small birds. The Cirl Bunting can be easily kept in confinement, being very hardy. Its staple food should consist of good Spanish Canary seed, with a little hemp seed and a little linseed occasionally. Also a few good white oats and a little insect food should be added. The sex can be easily distinguished, the male showing the yellow markings on head, while the female does not show any marking on the head. The young resemble the female. The species commence breeding at about the beginning of May. Their nest is placed on the ground in some rough grass under a hedge. The hen lays about four or five eggs, the ground colour being a dirty white, and they are rather heavily marked with streaks and spots. A good show specimen it is difficult to obtain, as, like the Yellow Buntings, they vary so much in head markings, and this is very important. A show bird should be of a good size, fairly stout in body, with a full neck, and the head showing the yellow markings distinctly, starting from the base of the upper mandible and coming over the eye, well back over the head, and another starting from the base of the lower mandible under the eye, running well back to meet the yellow band round the throat. The top of the head should be black in ground colour, with just the tips of the feathers of a slight brownish tint, and another black mark starting from the mouth back over the eye and down the neck, with a good black bib bordered with yellow. The body should be of a reddish brown colour showing the lacing on the back and sides. The lower part of the body should be a yellowish brown mingled with red. The upper part of the breast should be of a pale green mingled with red, which gives it a really handsome appearance.

The Dreaded Septic Fever.

SIR,—After reading the various letters in your valuable paper, I think perhaps my case may be of interest to those who have, like myself, suffered such great losses from septic fever. Being only a novice, and it also being my first year to attempt the breeding of Canaries in earnest, it is very disheartening to meet with such a disaster as I have done. I began the season with a new, large eight-compartment breeding cage, which I can convert into two large flights, 5ft. 6ins. long, 18ins. high, 11ins. back to front; it had new seed boxes, all of which I made myself. I stocked the cage with two cocks (Norwich and Yorkshire), and four hens. With every prospect of success (which I had). I finished with 35 young ones, out of which 30 were on the perches, and on hard seed, when the misfortune overtook me. My friends who saw them from time to time were greatly surprised at my success. I paid every attention to the birds as regards cleanliness of cage bottom, and always kept sea sand quarter of an inch deep, sifting it usually every day, but always putting fresh sand in once a week and very often twice. All egg food I threw away if there were the slightest suspicion of its being stale. I also sifted the seed weekly when cleaning out. I attribute my trouble to a strange hen which I introduced into the cage six weeks before the birds began to fall off. Although the hen appeared in good health, and reared three young, she was the first to die, her young ones immediately following. Then the rot commenced; six or seven birds died daily, and 33 in all died in less than a fortnight. I tried separating them by putting them into clean cages in another room, and gave them for diet: Milk sop and Canary seed; and even chalk did not stop the diarrhœa, the excreta being of a milky colour. I have lost all now, including one Linnet and four Redpolls—altogether 46 birds. I am only a working man on a small wage, and am endeavouring to add a little to my income, which I had every reason to expect after such a successful season. As it is now, I am afraid I shall have to wait a year or two before I can commence on the same scale again. I can sympathise fully with others who have suffered through this disease. With best wishes to CAGE BIRDS,

NOT DISHEARTENED.

IMPORTANT TO SHOW SECRETARIES & OTHERS

Kindly Give this Your Attention

It is our intention to again publish as full and complete a list as possible of open shows held in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland during the forthcoming season. It will be remembered that last year our list gave the date and name of show, the names of the judges officiating at same, the approximate number of classes provided, and the names and addresses of the secretaries. The list was of incalculable benefit to our readers, as the shoals of letters we received at the time attested.

We already have a fairly full list of fixtures, which will be found printed below. Will secretaries and officials of societies holding open shows kindly look over this list, and if the name of any show is omitted, notify us of the date and supply us with all other particulars? We shall also be glad if those who have not as yet supplied us with the names of the judges officiating at their shows will do so at once, together with the approximate number of classes being provided. A POSTCARD WILL DO, BUT POST IT AT ONCE.

Fanciers will assist us greatly if they will draw the attention of the friends and officials of the society to which they belong to this notice, so that we may be sure none are overlooked.

Here are the names of the fixtures we have already on our list.

Accrington, Alnwick, Ayr and Dis., Arbroath, Airdrie and Coatbridge, Avonbridge, Altrincham, Aberdeen, Alexandria, Admiral Duncan, Armiston and Gorebridge, Burnley, Broughty Ferry, Bolton, Battersea, Burton-on-Trent, Bristol F.A., Bromley and W. No. 346.
Self-acting Fastener for Sliding Doors.

Sent by Mr. F. Barron, 84, Chestnut Street, Hirst, Morpeth.

I enclose sketches of a self-acting fastener for sliding doors in cage fronts, which I find is very handy when doing anything in the cage or for hanging the bath on. To make, bend a piece of wire to the shape shown to the right of the drawing. The larger sketch shows the contrivance in position. When you push the door up it fastens itself. I have a space for egg drawer in the corner of front with a small sliding door, which is very handy for stopping birds from getting out while washing the drawers.—FRED BARRON.

No. 347.
How to Ventilate a Birdroom.

Sent by J. Moor, 18, St. Mary's Terrace, Nunnery Lane, York.

The illustration shows a sketch of a ventilator for a birdroom. If it be of any use to your readers I shall be glad. It consists of a circular piece of wood or tin about 10ins. diameter, with 5 holes drilled or punched in it. The drawing shows these, and the hole in the centre for a screw. Then drill the holes in the woodwork of the side of your birdroom or wherever you want them. You can then turn it on or off, or half on, as you wish. I have this contrivance in use at the present time, and it affords good ventilation.—J. MOOR.

Under the White Rose.

ANOTHER week and we shall have the shows with us. Many are complaining that the birds are not ready; but as of yore, when the birds that are ready are gathered together, we shall see that plenty are practically fit. Of course, a few more weeks will see a lot of birds in better condition, the end of October being considered by many fanciers as quite early enough to begin showing. But, really, all old birds and most of the first round of youngsters should be in first-rate order early in October.

THE show season for the Yorkshire Union commences on October 2nd, at Sandy Lane, with Mr. P. Mason as judge, and should the weather be fine it will be worth anybody's while to pay the show a visit and make a holiday of the day or half-day. Chellow Dene and Harden, two of Bradford's beauty spots, are in close proximity to the show. The former is only five minutes' walk away, and at present is looking exceedingly well; the latter takes about twenty minutes to reach, is situated in some grand country, and, like the Chellow, is clothed in all its autumnal glory; and what can beat this for display of colour?

OPEN Norwich Plainhead Club has issued its year book for 1909-10, and gives in a nutshell all that can be given appertaining to the club. Ninety-six members are now enrolled, and the financial side is, as the Yankees say, "all O.K." The club's patronage, too, is given to 10 shows; and the list of specials is excellent, champions, amateurs and novices being all well catered for; and it is expected that next season will even "top" the splendid record of last season.

YORK district has lost one of its most enthusiastic fanciers, Mr. Nicholson having removed to Skipton. No doubt Mr. N. will find much to interest him in his new district, as it is very well supplied with birdy life; and he will find congenial company in the few fanciers (few, but ardent), in this little market town.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held September 18th in the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. The attendance was not large, doubtless owing to the football match in the town, and probably some of the members had not got over the effects of the "licking" inflicted on Sunderland by the Newcastle United. A letter from the secretary of the Cinnamon Canary Club was read to the effect that we had obtained their patronage for our annual show. November 19th and 20th, this making a total of eight specialist clubs. A large amount of show business was got through, when the members proceeded to draw up the open classification, 54 classes being provided, subject to confirmation at our next meeting. Will those members who have not yet paid up kindly do so at once, as this will greatly facilitate the work of the secretary.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (Confined) SOUTHERN ORNITHOLOGICAL ASSOC.

Monthly meeting held in the National Halls on September 6th. There was a large attendance. In the absence of the President, Mr. John Renwick (Vice-President) occupied the chair. Arrangements were made for the forthcoming show in the National Halls, on October 30th. It was agreed to have 12 classes, the same as last year (with two classes for amateurs), and first, 2nd and 3rd prizes in each class, Ayrshire blankets as firsts, white bed quilts as seconds, and half-a-dozen knives and forks for third prizes. Thirty-one special prizes were allocated by ballot down to the 8th birds, with gold medals for the best cock and best hen. It was unanimously agreed to have Ritchie's large prize cards. A census of young birds bred by members present was taken; results showed an average of about 10 birds per member. Messrs. Alex Paterson (Edinburgh), Wm. Webster (Greenock), James Ward (Shuttleston), and James Watson (Glasgow) will judge the show. A vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the meeting to a close.—SCOTCH FANCY.

HIGHGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Special members' meeting held at headquarters (Spencer Hall) on 2nd September, for the purpose of electing a new Secretary, on the retirement of Mr. Geo. H. Neal, who is going to Derbyshire. The Chairman (Mr. Geo. Gardner) spoke at some length of the valuable services rendered the Society by Mr. Neal. He said it was only those who had undertaken such work who knew what it was. There were all kinds of worries, anxieties and responsibilities connected with the post. Also the work entailed the sacrifice of time and recreation. Mr. Gardner mentioned the splendid work Mr. Neal had done and wished him "God-speed" in the name of the Society. Mr. Neal replying, said how sorry he was to leave the Society, as he had always done the work as a labour of love; he loved the Fancy. He said he would be miles away in person, but that his heart and thoughts would always be with them. After a hearty vote of thanks had been accorded Mr. Neal, he was invited to be present with the members at the "social" to be held on November 25th, when the prizes won at the annual show, which is to be held November 12th and 13th (Mr. Geo. Gardner, judge) are to be distributed. The Chairman then gave a short talk on preparing birds for exhibition, which was greatly appreciated by all. —CHAS. W. LAW, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

Committee meeting held on Saturday, September 11th, at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. W. H. Shackleton (President) in the chair. The business was important, but was expeditiously got through. The following gentlemen were unanimously elected members: Messrs. C. Cowgill, F. Gelder, W. Laycock, J. Northrop, W. Stables, J. Stobart, A. Lister, and A. Gledhill (Bradford), E. Saville (Halifax), and B. Wood (Cleckheaton). The club has now enrolled 101 members. The tender for the printing of the club's year-book was, after some discussion, left in the hands of the Secretary and Mr. Walsh with instruction to accept the lowest tender. The club's patronage was granted to the following societies: October 9th, Queensbury (Mr. C. A. House); October 16th, City of Bradford (Mr. A. Hirst); October 23rd, Shipley (Mr. W. H. Shackleton); November 6th, Bradford West (Mr. W. Mundell); November 20th, Manningham (Mr. R. Halliday); Nov. 27th, Eccleshill (Mr. J. Greaves); December 1st and 2nd, City of Birmingham (Mr. J. C. Barnes); December 4th, Gt. Horton O.S. (Mr. H. W. Battye); December 18th, Halifax O.S. (Mr. W. A. Cowgill); January 1st, Bradford East (Mr. E. Radley). They also decided to offer money specials for competition at the ten patronage shows, 3/- being granted for most points gained by members' 4th awards, and 2/- for most points gained by 5th awards. First prize winners in Green Marked classes were debarred from these specials. We hope to have out this week the club's handbook.—F. ARMSTRONG, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting September 13th at headquarters, 60, Baddington-street, W., with Mr. A. C. Burn in the chair. Mrs. Weston was elected a member. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. R. L. Crisp, Mr. Burn gave a report of the meeting of the London Federation. Arising out of this, Mr. A. W. Curtis (the delegate) tendered his resignation on the grounds that he was unable through business pressure to attend the meetings, thus doing an injustice both to the Federation and our association. He proposed that Mr. C. Prior be asked to accept the office. Mr. Prior remarked that as this was the first intimation of it, he must take time to consider, as he knew nothing about either the workings, the dates, or times of meetings. Whilst asking Mr. Curtis to reconsider his decision, he (Mr. Prior) was not unmindful that if his business arrangements prevented him from attending, then the association was bound to release him. Both the chairman and the secretary thought that Mr. Curtis might endeavour to retain the office till the end of the year. Mr. Prance then moved that Mr. Curtis be asked to retain office till the end of the year. Mr. Prior again pointed out that it was unfair to Mr. Curtis if it came between him and his work. The matter was then adjourned till the next meeting, Mr. Prance asking permission to withdraw his motion. The balance-sheet of the young bird show duly audited, showing an income of £12 11s. 4½d., an expenditure of £13 8s. 5½d., with a loss of 17s. 1d., was read and confirmed, statistics of the same being given ranging over a period of six years. Three essay papers were received for the competition entitled "Items of interest to the Fancy," but as five papers constituted the lowest number eligible to compete for the three medals, the secretary asked for instructions. After considerable discussion it was proposed and carried that the gold medal be withdrawn, leaving the silver and bronze for the competition. The three essays were then read and voted upon by the whole of the members present, the result being as follows:—1st, "Yes and No"; 2nd, "Pink Eye"; 3rd, "Dr. Cook." The medals were then presented by the chairman. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

The Robin at Breakfast.

A gentleman has in his garden a Robin that carries to its mate oatmeal crumbs, butter, bits of candy, etc., and when it has to cater for the little ones, it forgets its toilet and its song in the "rush." It will help itself to toast from the breakfast-table and, moreover, it is of no use the gentleman's breaking pieces off for it, as its method is to hop to the table and pick for itself what it considers the daintiest bits. It has been known to come in five times to breakfast. —Sent by Mary Townsend (age 11), 73, Great Western Road, Gloucester.

*Nest in a Beehive.

An unusual sight was to be witnessed at West Ashby, near Horncastle, where a Wagtail built its nest in a beehive, and sat on ten eggs, despite the bees being busy at work below. The bird enters the hive through a hole in the roof, and has made quite a cosy nest of hay and other material. The bees are by no means disturbed by their lodger.—Taken from the "Echo," by Mary Crompton (age 11), 25, Moor Street, Ormskirk.

*Little Bird! Little Bird!

I have a green cage ready for thee;
Beauty-bright flowers I'll bring to you,
And fresh ripe cherries, all wet with dew."

"Nay, little damsel; away I'll fly
To greener fields and a warmer sky;
When spring returns with pattering rain,
You will hear my merry song again."

Cutting, sent by Frank Burgess(age 9), 47, Highfield Street, Market Harborough.

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

The Shows.

BALA.

Show held September 10th. One class only was provided for Canaries and one for Britishers. Being such a well-known show we hope the committee will extend the classification for future shows. Messrs. Furness and Johnson made the awards in this section. Mr. Roberts, as usual, made an efficient secretary.

CAN.: 1, spl, Parry, extra big Yorks., winning; 2, J. O. Williams, choice breedy yell., ticked, same variety, nicely drawn, grand type; 3, Watt Roberts, looks like a Yorks.-Nor. cross, in good condition; res, J. E. Jones, typical Nor. buff, good type and condition. BRIT.: 1, 3, Pritchard, Goldfinches, good blaze, tanning and buttons; 3rd, square blaze, good size; 2, Miss E. Jones, Crossbill.

DULWICH O.S.

Successful members' show of Canaries, British and Foreign birds, held August 26th, judged by Messrs. W. H. Vale and F. Easterling, both handling their sections admirably. Mr. P. G. Sprules made a popular win by securing the silver Rose Bowl for best unflighted Norwich, pressed hard by the exhibits of Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni. Mr. Rees won in the novice section with a splendid exhibit; other winners included Messrs. G. Woolhouse and Taylor. The British section was not large, but Messrs. Garlick, Smith, Rees, Rogers and Mazzoni showed some nice specimens, Mr. Garlick's light Linnet Mule having a host of admirers. The show was well attended.—S. J. KENT, Sec.

MOFFAT, N.B.

In connection with the Moffat A. and H.S. a splendid show of cage birds was held on September 17th, and proved a huge success. Scotch Fancies were not very numerous, although four classes were provided, but some good specimens were exhibited. Borders were out in great numbers, and here some good birds were on view. Mr. Mason had hard lines with his foul yellow, winner of two firsts at Eaglesfield, which would have carried off the B.F.C.C. medal had he been a member of the club. The medal was eventually passed on to Mr. Clark's clear buff hen. The Mules and British birds were really a grand lot. Mr. D. Watson (Douglas) judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

SCOTCH FCY.: 1, Edgar. YELL. PIED: 1, 3, Edgar; 2, Thomson. BUFF: 1, Edgar. GREEN, ETC.: 1, spl, 2, Edgar; 2, Thomson. BORD. YELL. CK.: 1, Varrie; 2, Mason; 3, Marchbank; 4, Walker. EVEN MKD.: 1, Calderwood; 2, Watt; 3, Bryden. UNEVEN: 1, Small; 2, Marchbank; 3, 4, Watt. FOUL: 1, Mason; 2, spl, Walker; 3, Kerr; 4, Watt, A.O.V.: 1, Thomson; 2, Botterill; 3, Calderwood; 4, Pagan. NOR. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Thomson; 3, Watt. MULE OR HYB.: 1, spl, 2, Crosbie. BRIT.: 1, 3, Thomson; 2, 4, Burnie.

BRISBANE (AUSTRALIA) C.I.S.

The annual show of the Brisbane Canary I.S. was held in the Trades Hall, Turbot-street, on 16th and 17th July. This building is well lighted and ventilated, and altogether is very suitable for such an exhibition. Great credit is due to the secretary, Mr. Hodgson, who was assisted by an able committee, for the excellent manner in which he carried out the arrangements. The staging was worthy of special mention, the forms being arranged in a square two deep right round the hall, and the staging was beautifully draped with white calico, a thing seldom seen in any of the great shows of England or Scotland, which gave the whole a very clean and pleasing appearance. Some very fair specimens were shown in the Norwich section, although most of them were a shade on the small side. Yorkshires, too, scarcely came up to the standard length, although a few good positioned birds were forward. A few fine Crests were on show, notably the young hen, shown by Mr. G. Durston, which won the champion breeders' prize. Alderman C. P. Buchanan, ex-Mayor of Brisbane, who is an enthusiastic fancier, had a few birds entered, including three Lizards, the only ones in Queensland, but unfortunately could not get them to the show on account of the very wet weather. Mr. H. Palmer (Brisbane) judged, and his awards were received with general satisfaction. The entries numbered altogether 177.

YORKS., CL. YELL. (12): 1, spl, Thompson, ck., nice length, stands well; 2, Hodgson, hen, just a bit open on chest or might have held premier position; 3, Durston, highly-coloured bird; vhc, Burston; hc, Soden. BUFF (9): 1, spl, Williams, ck., well-shaped, good-positioned bird, was half colour-fed, and some thought might have stood down a peg; 2, Bettany, ck., good all-round bird; 3, Soden, some preferred for best Yorkie in show; vhc, hc, Hodgson. YELL. TKD.: 1, 2, Hodgson, very neat, well put down; 3, Day. BUFF TKD.: 1, 2, Hodgson, both head ticked cocks, win with something in hand; 3, Day, rather short; vhc, Williams. YELL. VAR. (8): 1, spl, H. C. Hodgson, head and chest marked bird, good length, fine condition; 2, Porter, presses winner hard; 3, Day. BUFF: 1, Bettany, on short side but of nice shape and condition, well put down; 2, Hodgson, little to choose between the two; 3, Day, good length and position; hc, Hodgson. PAIR CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, vhc, Hodgson, 1st two hen (rather an unusual way of showing pairs); 2, Williams, nicely matched pair of youngsters; 3, Day, again two hens. BUFF: 1, 2, Hodgson; 3, Williams. PAIR, ANY COL.: 1, Day; 2, vbc, Hodgson; 3, Rae. CHAMP. CLASS (7): 1, spl of 20/-, 3, Bettany, good long all-round youngster; 2, Hodgson, another promising youngster, but not the stamp of winner. LIZ.: Absent. CINN., YELL.: 1, 2, Grace, two hens, grand substance, wonderful quality, well shown; 3, Soden, another nice one. BUFF: 1, 2, Grace, wins again hands down; 3, Burston, nice bird, but roughly got up; vhc, Hodgkinson. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Day. PAIRS: 1, Day; 2, Grace. NOR. CL. ETC. YELL. (9): 1, spl, Bettany, good big well-coloured bird; 2, Reid, good body, but a trifle weak in head and neck; 3, McGrory, long, fine colour and quality; No. 73, Lillystone, buff cock, wrong-classed, could have won easily in his own class, in fact most typical Plainhead in show. BUFF (8): 1, Bunham, good size and shape, well staged, wins quite comfortably; 2, Grace, loses in size and condition only; 3, Bettany, well-coloured hen, on small side; vhc, Burston. VARIEG. ETC. YELL.: 1, Bunham, big-chested varieg. ck., grand colour; 2, Bettany, fine type and quality; 3, Lyle, grand size, fails only in quality; vbc, Hodgkinson. BUFF (7): 1, spl, Bunham, very typical big varieg. hen, grand quality, well turned out; 2, McGrory, fails a little in quality and staging; 3, Lyle, might have gone one up; vhc, Day; hc, Bettany. PAIR BUFF: 1, Bettany. YELL.: 1, Bettany; 2, Soden. CHAMP. CLASS (9): 1, spl 20/-, Grace, buff hen, good size and shape; 2, 3, Bettany, eye mkd. buff, and tkd. yell., youngsters, fine shape and condition; vhc, McGrory. CRESTS, YELL. CL. ETC.: 1, Day. (7): 1, spl, Durston, var. grand leafy crest, fine length of body feather, well up in size, clear whi; 2, McGrory, green hen, nice-bodied bird, good crest, but a bit rough; 3, Grace, fine length of body feather, but goes back in head; vhc, Williams; hc, McGrory. BUFF LT. VAR.: 1, Durston, right up for points all round; 2, 3, vhc, Hodgkinson. PAIR YELL.: 1, Durston. VARIEG.: 1, Durston, lt. var. hens; 2, McGrory; 3, Day. CHAMP. CLASS.: 1, spl 20/-, Durston, clinking good young hen, grand size and shape, heavily feathered on body, crest of fine leafy texture, altogether very nice headpiece; 2, Durston, another very good one; 3, Williams, fails a trifle in points all round to winners. C.B., YELL.: 1, Durston. BUFF: 1, Durston; 2, Hodgkinson. BUFF GREEN (10): 1, spl, McGrory, very heavy bird, grand width of skull, abundance of feather, outstanding exhibit, rather soft in condition when we were taking notes; 2, Grace, another fairly heavy bird, but lacks the head and feather of winner; 3, Soden, good one again; vhc, Lyle. BUFF LT. VAR. (10): 1, McGrory, wing-mkd. ck., good length of feather, fine broad skull, wins; 2, Grace, another good one and runs hard for top position; 3, Thompson, falls only in size; vbc, Soden. CINN.: 1, Burston. PAIR CL. ETC.: 1, Durston. VARIEG.: 1, Durston, right at top for size, feather, and condition, easy win; 2, Dixon, weak on head; 3, Thomson; vhc, Day. CHAMP. CLASS (11): 1, 2, 3, spl 20/-, Durston, clean sweep and well-deserved, standing a long way from other exhibits. MULES: 1, Williams, ben Goldie-Can. EVENLY-MKD. (1): Hodgson, heavily varieg. buff Yorks. hen. What constitutes an even mark in Queensland, Mr. Hodgson?

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY.

Annual show of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A. held in the Grand National Halls, Glasgow, on 18th September. The entries were 272, as against 383 last year, the lower number being compensated for by the quality of the birds, which was of high order. The competition was so keen the judges had great difficulty in awarding the prizes. They got through their work in good time, however. The gallery was filled while the judging was going on. When it was known that Mr. David Black's buff piebald hen, the winner of the Glasgow Derby corresponding honour on September 11th, had won the cup and gold medal, the hall resounded with a hearty applause. Mr. McLennan secured the prize for the opposite sex to the winner with a very fine buff cock. The runner-up to cup winner was Mr. Black's buff hen. The president, Mr. Wright, of Greenock, who was honoured recently by the publication of his photograph in the "Greenock Herald," is as popular as ever, and was happy in presiding over the event. Mr. Smith, the secretary, spared no pains in the secretarial work of the show, everything being well arranged; and we have seldom met with a more agreeable company. The judges were: Messrs. Nisbet (Galston), Sommerville (Neilston), Brown and Dalgleish (Edinburgh), the latter kindly acting for Mr. Paterson, who was indisposed. Mr. Drysdale, president of the Metropolitan Derby, Edinburgh; Mr. McDonald, secretary of the City of Glasgow O.A.; Mr. McLelland, president of the Glasgow Southern Club; Mr. Black, president, and Mr. Bullions, secretary of the Glasgow Derby; Mr. Thornton (Midlothian), Mr. Hope (Edinburgh), Councillor Hogg (Oakley, Fife), and others were present.

YELL. CK. (29): Good average quality; 1, Jackson, nice size, erect, fine round shoulders, long neck, neat head, purchased at a substantial figure; 2, McClure, well positioned, neat made head, fine neck, prominent shoulders, very steady; 3, King, erect, decided reach, good shoulder, fine depth throughout, long body; 4, Jackson, another fine specimen; 5, Maxwell, erect, substantially built; 6, Muirhead; 7, Renwick; 8, Johnston. HEN (32): Full of merit, grand team; 1, Brown, fine size, nicely positioned, neat head, long neck, rare front, fine body, rib and wing; 2, Jardine, beauty, erect made head, fine neck, round shoulder, clean cut front; 3, Johnstone, erect good reach; 4, King, good size, nice droop, fine depth through chest; 5, McLennan, erect head, well down; 6, Smith; 7, Burnside; 8, Edgar. YELL CK., PIED, ETC. (30): Superior collection; 1, McClure, extra well circled exhibit, nicely positioned, neat head, long thin neck, fine body, tail right under perch; 2, McLennan, large, well-positioned, nice head and neck, rare shoulder and drive; 3, Anderson, very similar in style; 4, Johnstone, well up, good reach; 5, Caldwell, grand size; 6, Morrison; 7, Nairn; 8, O'Donnell. HEN (35): Very good lot; 1, Caldwell, large fine head, long sweet neck, good reach, heavy top, clean front, good wing and body; 2, Morrison, massive frame, fine head in right direction, prominent shoulder, displaying fine front; 3, McClure, well up, sweet head and neck forward, bringing out fine heavy top and clean front; 4, Maxwell, really good all-round exhibit; 5, Leslie; 6, Frew; 7, O'Donnell; 8, Hope. BUFF CK. CL ETC. (29): Rare quality; 1, McLennan, large, fine head, heavy top, well set on legs, long body and wing, taking style; 2, Muirhead, perfect model, well built, very neat head, long neck, prominent shoulder; 3, Maxwell, erect well set, nice top, body and wing; 4, Montgomery, very fine model, erect decided drive, good top and front, well fitting wings; 5, Brown, nice type, erect; 6, Smith; 7, W. Lees; 8, Thornton. HEN (30): Nice selection; 1, Black, model, well set on perch, rare droop, neat head, grand neck, heavy top; 2, Brown, erect neat head, fine neck, shoulder, body and wing; 3, Fulton, grand head and neck, prominent shoulder, fine body and wing; 4, Beattie, long reach, smooth-feathered stylish hen, worthy of place; 5, Morrison, massive frame, good style; 6, Burnside; 7, Renwick; 8, Muirhead. BUFF CK. PIED, ETC.: 1, 2, McLennan, 1st large light-marked, erect, good top and body; 2, grand frame, nice reach, body and wing; 3, Maxwell, erect, good drive, heavy shoulder, sweet body and wing; 4, 5, Kennedy, sweet substantial pair, grand size; 6, Fulton; 7, Lang; 8, Kennedy. HEN (38): Exceptionally strong class, containing grand green birds; 1, 7, Black, winner of cup and gold medal, ideal model, erect, rare shoulder, neat head, fine neck, determined droop, excellent body and wing, finely tempered, the more the cage is handled the better she shows; 2, Neil, superior stock bird, massive frame, erect, grand top and body, wings nicely placed; 3, Hope, ideal green, grand size, prominent shoulders, long body and wing; 4, McClure, well set up, heavy top, fine front; 5, McLennan, large and nice; 6, Johnstone; 8, O'Donnell.

DROGHEDA.

Seventh annual show held in the show ground, Drogheda, on September 15th and 16th. The committee are to be congratulated on the manner in which they had matters arranged. There was a large gathering of visitors, and the weather was beautiful. It is a pity the Drogheda fanciers do not hold an open show, and thus add to the number held in Ireland. There is no reason why it should not be a success financially. With Mr. Gray and the present workers at the wheel we feel sure their enterprise would be crowned with success, and many recruits enlisted into the cage bird Fancy. Yorkshires were very strongly represented, and some really taking exhibits shown. The awards were made by Mr. Duigenan. The show was confined to co. Louth and Meath.

YORKS. CL. CK. (10): 1, Miss Smith, nice yell., good carriage of wings and tail, good quality; 2, Miss O. Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Some fine classical quality singing was held at the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane, 19th September. The birds having got over the moult, we had an entry of 23; all sang vigorously. Mr. Soloman's Derby winner still holds his laurels. We invite fanciers to come and hear or try conclusions with this clever quality singing bird. 1st prize, Solomans; 2nd prize, T. Johnson; 3rd prize divided Messrs. C. Lorriman and W. Farrer. Judges, Messrs. I. Madden and J. Clark.—JOE HARGREAVES, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-st., September 18th, when 15 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. 1 and 2, Hardcastle; 3, Sissons. Also on September 19th, when 20 birds sang. 1, Stead; 2, Hardcastle; 3, Wigfield. Judges Messrs. Jennings, Mawson, and Naylor.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Wild Bird Life.

Habits of the Siskin.

As the Summer migrants leave us, birds from the far north wander south to fill up the gaps. Among these Winter visitors are many interesting species, some of which are hardly recognised by ordinary observers, the time of their visit probably having much to do with it. Bird watching in the Winter months is not the pleasant occupation that it is in summer, and only the ardent naturalist will brave the cold, cutting winds and the hard weather. Among these winter migrants the Siskin is one of the most interesting. It is a bird of the wild northern pine woods, only wandering south in winter. In the North of England it appears to take the place of the Greenfinch in the evergreens and shrubberies.

I have said the Siskin is a bird of the North, but as there are exceptions to every rule, so we occasionally find a pair of these active birds staying in some favourable spot in the south to nest. Such a pair once came under notice upon the edge of a Surrey common where the tall pines grew thickly among the furze and brambles. At this time of the year Siskins unite into small flocks and appear in their usual haunts, which are generally along the banks of a stream where the alders and firs flourish. Sometimes we may meet a pair or even a single bird attached to a flock of Tits or Redpolls, from which birds they are easily recognised by the black cap and greenish yellow plumage, although in acrobatic performances they are the equals of their companions. They diligently search the trees, clinging to the clusters of seeds in any position, or fluttering in butterfly fashion before a twig. They will hang by one leg as cleverly as a Tit, swinging backwards and forwards in the Autumn breeze, passing from tree to tree. They cover great distances during the day, continually calling in a Tit-like manner.

It is seldom the Siskins visit the ground. Their food is among the trees, and while the seeds hang they seek it there, although various seeds upon which they could feed are plentiful upon the land. The Siskin commences to warble as soon as the moult is completed, and continues in song the Winter through. No doubt our British-bred birds are greatly reinforced by Continental visitors, as this species breeds plentifully in the pine woods of Scandinavia and Russia.

LOOK AT IT

this way. If my goods were not all that I claim for them, I could not afford to advertise them, as publicity would do me harm, not good. But to prove to you that without doubt my goods are as advertised, I send them on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and refund money in full if you are not perfectly satisfied with them after trial. I have no unmentioned conditions or restrictions whatever. If after a trial of my goods you find them not suitable to you from any cause, you simply return them and back comes every penny of your money, and the transaction is ended. Clap nets, made from ¾in. genuine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ft. deep, and 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair, all guaranteed full measurement; 5½ft. deep and 4ft. fly. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and all are fitted complete with stave, poles, pegs, lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use. Scores of other sizes in stock. Lark nets, 15 yards long, 10ft. deep, 12/-; ditto, 18 yards long, 15/-; ditto, 25 yards long, 21/-; ditto 30 yards long, 24/-. Bat folding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/- pair; ditto 19ft. poles, 6/6 pair, complete. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to the old-fashioned board traps. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, and a call bird can be used inside them if required. Will catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook, and are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market; eight dozen sold retail during the past 14 days. Single trap cages 6d. each, double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages warranted to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Japanese birdlime. This is the genuine Japanese and strongest on the market, guaranteed to catch and hold any Hawk that flies, any weather, rain or shine; imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality. ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d. post free. Loose netting, specially made from genuine thread for bird netting, not thick American cotton fishing netting; ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12ft. deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1¼in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard; all post free. Absolutely everything required for successful catching kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list. See following few letters:—"Cranshy Hall, Kettering, Sept. 24th. Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say trap cages are very satisfactory.—Yours, M. Lloyd." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife, Sept. 21st. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. I was well pleased with that I had last year.—Yours, J. Panton." "Brinsley Moor, nr. Eastwood. Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I had some lime from you last year and it was best I ever had.—Yours, C. Hewes." "Chapel-street, Dunmore, Sept. 18th. Sir,—The lime I had last year from you was good stuff; it would stand the cold well, as well as any amount of heat.—Yours, M. Patton." "36, New-street, Grantham. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send following netting. That I had last was very good.—Yours, F. Winfield." "14, West-street, Hucknall, Torkard. Sept. 14th. Sir,—Please send pair clap nets. I have tried other firms' nets, and they have been almost rotten.—Yours, A. Bailey." "Delhi-row, Pelsall. Sept. 17th. Sir,—Receeived netting safely and am very pleased with it, as it made two excellent nets.—Yours, J. Fallon." "Near Elm Tree, Blisworth. Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send ½lb. bird lime. Your Japanese lime is the best I can get, bar none.—Yours, J. Harris." "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., Sept. 24th. Sir,—Please send me a pair clap nets, 20 yards long. If you send me a pair as good as last pair, you will shortly get further orders from me. I know a man who is using a pair of your 20 yard nets, and he says they work beautifully.—Yours, C. Cubley." This letter is a wrinkle to users of long nets; it shows that if properly made, long nets will work as easy as short ones. Mr. Cubley is the well-known Linnet catcher of Lincolnshire, and he has said that netting supplied by me is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper. I guarantee my nets to be absolutely fastest and quickest working nets extant, as all are properly geared or armed, not merely line run through the top of netting, and my pegs are also a vast improvement on the old-fashioned socket and staple. My men are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced birdcatchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. All the leading birdcatchers are using nets supplied by me, and will have no other. I invite anyone to have a pair of nets from me and a pair from elsewhere, and compare them side by side; the result will please me. Send stamp for full printed lists with hints on netmaking, etc.; prices will surprise you, as I believe in supplying a genuine article at a reasonable price. (Imitators please copy.) See British bird advertisement for further particulars. Kindly note name and address. No connection with any other advertiser.

is not a cure-all, neither is anything else, but it is what is claimed for it, namely, the most marvellous remedy for wheezing, and all lung affections ever known, and without any exaggeration whatever, thousands of testimonials have been received for this one remedy alone, one of the latest of which I here give, and ask for your close attention to same.

"Bathealton Vicarage, Bath, September 27th, 1909. I feel bound to write and tell you of the wonderful way in which your "Asthmarine" has cured a valuable Hartz Mountain Roller; he has had asthma for about two years, and has not sung for the last Twelve Months; on the second day after taking your "Asthmarine," he began to sing a little, and on the fourth was in full song. Mr. Rudd may make what use he likes of this."

The above may seem, on the face of it, a little too good, especially in view of the ridiculous claims often made of advertised so-called remedies, and for this reason, I am sending for confirmation, the original and envelope to Editor of this paper. (W.R.)

"Asthmarine" is 1/9 per bottle; large bottles, 2/6, post free.

Rudd's Norwich Tonic Drops are the best pick-me-up and "Finisher" to plumage that has yet been discovered, prices same as Asthmarine. Inflammation remedy also same prices.

ONLY A BLIND

man would think of buying anything before he saw it, so why should you buy birds before you see them and know they are satisfactory? My system of trading is this: I send everything on approval on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, at my own risk, and unless purchaser is perfectly satisfied and birds realise every expectation, he only has to return them and back comes the whole of his money promptly and cheerfully without question or comment. I was originator of approval system in connection with wild birds, and never have I traded under any other conditions. I make no idle boasts or false statements, but claim to be the largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, and have more through my hands in one season than all others together. At present time I have considerably over two thousand British birds in stock, including about 50 dozen Goldfinches alone, and bear in mind these are on view at all times. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, all in pink of health and condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-, six dozen 66/-, twelve dozen £5. Specially selected larger cocks, to moult for show or Muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keen competition, 3/- each, three 7/6. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-, three dozen 18/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, all clean moulted and perfect condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks, fit for show, Muling, or contest singing, and now in free song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Every Linnet I sell is guaranteed to have nut brown backs and rose-red breasts, and same as the hundreds of contest winners I have supplied to fanciers of Lancashire, Yorkshire, Durham, London, etc., etc. I hold the record for cheap contest winners, having sold a cup winner for 4d. Grand lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 each, three 4/-; specially selected cocks, 2/- each, three 5/-; few clean-moulted exhibition specimens, 2/6 each. Cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; exhibition specimens, 1/- each. Four hand-reared Grey-backed Shrikes or Butcher Birds, in perfect health and finger-tame, 6/- each. Grand lot cock Siskins, in pink of health and feather, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-. Specially selected exhibition specimens, 3/- each. Hen Siskins, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Cock Skylarks, in perfect feather, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected cocks, very steady and in song, 1/6 and 2/- each. Young Canaries as bred, sex not guaranteed, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen. Please note dates of following unsolicited letters: "3, Cemetery-street, Bilston, September 27th. Sir,—Received the three Goldfinches safely and they are splendid birds for the money. They are in pink of health and condition, and I am very pleased with the prompt manner you executed my order, and all future orders are yours.—Yours, W. Caron." "263, Battle-road, Hollington, September 25th. Sir,—Bullfinch arrived this morning in grand health (in place of one which died in transit). I might say the others are going on splendid and best value for money I ever had. Had I picked them out myself I could not have done better. You are the only one I have found that acts up to his advertisement.—Yours, Thos. Veness." "Clarbeston-road, Trellgarne, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Please send following. All birds received from you have given me perfect satisfaction. —Yours, Evan Jones." "71, Mabel-street, Motherwell, Sept. 27th. Sir,—Received birds safe and am highly pleased with them, as they are fine healthy birds and getting on well. Please send following birds, as I find you a straightforward man.—Yours, J. Gibson." "9, Westfield, Larbert, Sept. 27th. Sir, —Please send following birds, as I was very successful with last Goldfinch I had from you, as I bred five good Mules from it.—Yours, D. Pearson." "5, Balaclava-road, Carnarvon, Sept. 25th. Sir,—Please send following. I have had many a good bird from you and can trust you, as you have always pleased me well.—Yours, R. Griffith." "28, B. Close, nr. Crook, Co. Durham, Sept. 23rd. Sir,—Please send three Linnets. I had one from you a while back and he is a real good keen singer.—Yours, M. Brett." "14, Sea Wall, Skinningrove, Yorks, Sept. 17th. Sir,—Please send following. You have never yet disappointed me with your Linnets, and I have bought many a dozen from you.—Yours, C. Hart." On Sept. 27th Mr. Hart again writes: "Sir,—Received birds and am very well satisfied with them, and I must say you are a straightforward man. Please send two more Goldfinches, as other one is so steady as a rock." The above letters are entirely unsolicited and are open to inspection at any time. All birds are guaranteed exactly as represented and sex guaranteed. No fresh-caught rubbish sent, but all fat, healthy stock, well on hard seed. One trial solicited and I guarantee entire satisfaction or money refunded. See Appliance column for nets and cages, etc.

HARRY ALLEN.

Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you all for your kind patronage, also my own town Leeds, where I sold 300 Linnets and over 40 grand Goldfinches on Saturday last at my birdstall in Leeds Market. Readers of CAGE BIRDS will notice my sign is four yards long over my birdstall. Linnets, Linnets. My A1 specials can beat the world for steadiness, size, colour and markings. They are the largest Linnets I have ever seen; they have beautiful brown backs and showing splendid white in wing, and most beautifully pencilled and as steady as rocks, 2/6 each. Linnets, singing grand, with new polished cage and my book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6. Look! Fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days' approval. Linnets taught by the world's champion; will sing anywhere, only 1/6; a few extra specials, 2/-. Linnets from the same place as the champion of the world, only 1/- each; house-moulted Linnets, that will sing in your hand, specially trained for contest singing, 10/6 each. These birds will pay for themselves first time out. House-moulted Linnets for the show bench, sure winners, 10/6 upwards. Goldfinches, Goldfinches, Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, with grand broad heads, splendid blaze, beautiful wing bars, well buttoned and grand rich tan on breast; these are the right sort, gentlemen, 2/6, 3/-, and 3/6; very large cock Bullfinches, the right sort, 2/-, few gems 2/6; hens, 1/-. Look, some splendid cock Larks, as straight as arrows, and as steady as rocks, singing daylight and gaslight, 1/- and 1/6; a few that will sing on table, 2/6. These are knock-outs. Cages for any of the above can be had at the lowest possible prices. My new book of secrets, which is the original and stands alone, 7d. Please read what others say: "111, Alexander-street, Aidine, Scotland. Dear Sir,—Linnet arrived in pink of condition and is doing well; thanks for so nice a specimen. The cage is also wonderful value.—Yours truly, S. Little to H. Allen." "92, Twynyrodyn, Merthyr Tydvil. Dear Sir,—Bird arrived safe and I am satisfied with it; it is a nice bird and well worth the money. Please send me one of your A1 special Linnets.—Yours truly, A. James to H. Allen." For over 14 months I have not had one single bird returned; for proof the Editor. Those who want real honest value write to the largest British bird dealer in the world, Harry Allen, bird specialist and judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-street, Leeds.

MATTHEWS SAYS, "STOP HERE!"

The Working Man's Friend.

Gentlemen, why I keep sending prize winners out every day is because I have the largest stock in the world to select from; this is well known by all the leading exhibitors. Contest singers, and Mule breeders, also the finest aviaries. Mine are not old hencotes, same as most backyard dealers when you come to inspect them. Over 2,000 birds to select from. Not picked out of a dozen; also refreshments and teas provided at any hour for all clients; so don't be gulled by so-called specialists; send to the largest bird dealer in the world; all at working men's prices; Linnets, Linnets, Linnets, ready for show bench; real giants, well pencilled, good ground colour, Norwich type; real gems, same sort of Linnets that won 1st prizes all over England, which I have sent out, only 2/-; few extra specials 2/6; Linnets for contest singing in full song, taught under my well known Cheshire champions, 1/6 each, a few extra specials ready to win contest, 2/6 and 3/- each, with book of instruction and new polished singing cage; packet of extra special seed 3/6. I can dispose of a few catching Linnets, all well worked, used to nets, in full song, real stoppers, 2/- and 2/6 each; Goldfinches, Goldfinches, real English Peartree Goldfinches, over 500 in stock, all netted from the Cheshire fruit gardens, not foreign rubbish; few large giants, with good broad square blazes, well tanned on breast, extra well buttoned, long Yorkshire type, ready to win in keen competition, 2/6 and 3/-; a few large giants extra special, 3/6; a few Goldfinches, in full song, used to the nets, suit catchers, 2/6 each, real bargains. Yellow Giant Greenfinches, like Canaries, 1/-; few specials 1/6 each; large Yellowhammers, 1/- and 1/6 each; massive large Redpolls, sure winners, 1/-; over 500 splendid nestling Larks, all in full song, finger tame, 1/6 each, also 200 house-moulted Larks in full song, 2/- each; over 80 hand-reared young ones, will peck from hand, finger-tame, and in full song, ready to win any singing contest, taught under the champion Larks of Cheshire, 3/-, with splendid singing cage, and book of instructions, only 4/-; or any other kind of British birds you require. Please write for Softbills or Hardbills, or any other variety; singing contest clubs and aviaries supplied by return of post. Ladies and gentlemen, all I send out are on 7 days' approval, cash or deposit with "Cage Birds." I am not a backyard dealer, so beware of imitators. Read what others say. From Mr. Carey, Holytown, Lanarkshire, Scotland.—Sir,—Send me at once one of your catching Linnets, find enclosed 2/6 for bird I received last week. Your birds are not rubbish which we get from so many people; thanks very much for what you have done for me; you are the real British Linnet king. From Edward Forrester, 12, Urmston, Leigh, Lancashire.—I received Goldfinches all right, well pleased, splendid bird, could not be mended for double money; you will have all my friends' orders when I have seen them; perfectly satisfied. No one can equal your birds.—George Scelton, Brayton Station, Cumberland.—Birds arrived safe and quite satisfied with the team of birds you sent; all in show condition; you have my orders for future. Wishing you every success.—Jacob Skarratt, Sandy Lane, Brown Edge, Staffordshire.—Sir,—Enclosed find cash for Lark and thanks for sending same; is in full song, and well satisfied. So gentlemen, send at once to Matthews, Bird Specialist and Judge, 24, Avenue-st. Aviaries, Portwood, Stockport, Cheshire.

Norwich Plainheads

A really grand collection now ready to send out. A few prices are given as follows, and you are respectfully invited to select from the Canary Market of the World, and save all intermediate profits, by purchasing direct from their native City, and from a person using his proper name, and not posing as a female. Cocks at 4/3, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6 and 10/- upwards; hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each; pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick."

Note.—All amateurs should try my Special Matched Pairs of Prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. These are the best value ever offered.

I SAY DON'T

purchase Hartz Rollers yet, for it is utterly impossible for the best to have yet finished their training, and the cheaper ones are not on full song yet, nor anything like it, and as I have recently been amongst thousands of them, I should know; and, what is more, I shall have plenty for sale as soon as they are ready and can be recommended. Beware of the hens that are now being offered as singing cocks. If the offer of such appears so tempting that you cannot resist after this warning, then do the next best thing, i.e., deposit with Editor, then you will be safe. I can book your orders for high-class birds now with pleasure.—W. Rudd, The Bird Specialist, Norwich.

IT'S STOREY.

Here I am again, and I know you are pleased to see it. I must first thank my thousand and one customers for their past patronage, and inform you that all orders entrusted to me shall receive the same (or better) prompt and careful attention as in the past. My first consignments of Rollers are expected to arrive next week, when all orders will be forwarded in rotation. St. Andreasberg Roller cocks, specially trained, day and artificial light songsters, 6/9, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/- each; Hartz Roller cocks, the best and cheapest, loud free songsters in the world, 5/9, 6/3, 6/9 each; matched pairs, 7/6, 8/6; neat travelling cages, 3d. each extra; no humbug or deception here; every customer guaranteed satisfaction; all Canaries carriage paid on seven days' approval at my sole risk; illustrated price list post free.—Miss E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

AMBLERS

The Yorkshire Specialists.

The most reliable strain of Yorkshires in the fancy. See our winnings for over quarter of a century. If you want winners that can win in the keenest company, or stock birds that will breed winners, place your orders with us. If we cannot supply you with the best Yorkshires it is possible to get, no one in the Fancy can. Our winners are noted for extra length, wonderful type, showing that breed and swagger that always catches the judge's eye, and are teeming with quality. Stock birds: We have some clinkers, long racy birds, 7 inches and over, full of style and quality, that cannot fail to breed winners of the highest class. If you pay us a visit you will see absolutely the choicest stock of Yorkshires in the world; or will send any on approval; satisfaction guaranteed; state wants to Messrs. Amblers (late of Bradford), 133, Westminster-rd., Morecambe.

Winning Yorkshires.

Read this testimonial from—Menai Bridge, Sept. 20th, 1909: The Yorkshire buff cock has won for me two 1st and special Vaynol Park, 1st and two specials at Llandudno, 2nd at Menai Bridge, 2nd at Carnarvon, and two 3rds at Bangor. Thanking you for such a good bird and wishing you every success, Robert W. Roberts, to L. Dykes.

The above and scores similar, all bearing official post mark, are filed for inspection at any time. Those who want to win or stock birds to breed own winners, should send to the old reliable breeder, exhibitor, and judge; inspection invited at any time. Long, slim, typical Yorkshire cocks at 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each, on song and 7 inches long; grand hens, feathered like silk, at 4/-, 5/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6 each. Pairs, properly mated to breed winners, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- per pair; illustrated price list, post free. Exhibition specimens, fit for keenest competition, or for local shows, at most reasonable prices; state wants, and don't forget that during last season I sold over 100 winners, at leading shows; all on 7 days' approval at my risk; travelling cages, with proper food for journey, 3d. extra.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

The Management of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries.

By THOMAS SMITH.

Starting a Birdroom.

The first thing a fancier has to decide is whether to go in for an outdoor or an "indoor" aviary. Either may be chosen, but for the successful breeding of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries the "indoor" aviary is preferable. These high-class birds no doubt would breed if allowed to fly about a room, and were permitted to mate as they pleased. Such an arrangement at first sight seems to be alright, but reduced to practice it would not suit. Judicious pairing to get the best possible strain is imperative, and therefore each pair should be carefully selected, point to suit point being essential in order to produce in the progeny the stamp of bird aimed at.

A large square room with window or windows facing the east or south, to secure sunshine, should be chosen. The eastern is in my opinion preferable to the southern, as the sun pours in earlier, and rouses parents and foster parents to duty. Young birds are ready at an early hour to be fed, and the sooner their wants are supplied the more apt they are to gain strength and to develop.

The cages should be placed on a rack tier upon tier. The supports for the frame should be in the centre, so that mice or other pests cannot manage to mount the shelves. The frame, cages and nest-boxes should be painted white, or a very light colour, to shed as much light all around as possible.

Beginners who do not wish to incur much expense are sometimes tempted to purchase second-hand cages, gathered from all quarters—all sorts and sizes. Needless to say, such a basis is wrong. Different sizes will not admit of a neat arrangement. When commencing, cages of an uniform size and shape should be chosen, and in the end new cages, solid and well put together, will be the cheapest in the end. I should perhaps here point out that in having second-hand cages there is a danger of a foul cage finding its way into the room; the result might be that the entire stock would catch fever, and be cleared out. This may appear to be overdrawn, but it has happened.

Furnishing the Birdroom.

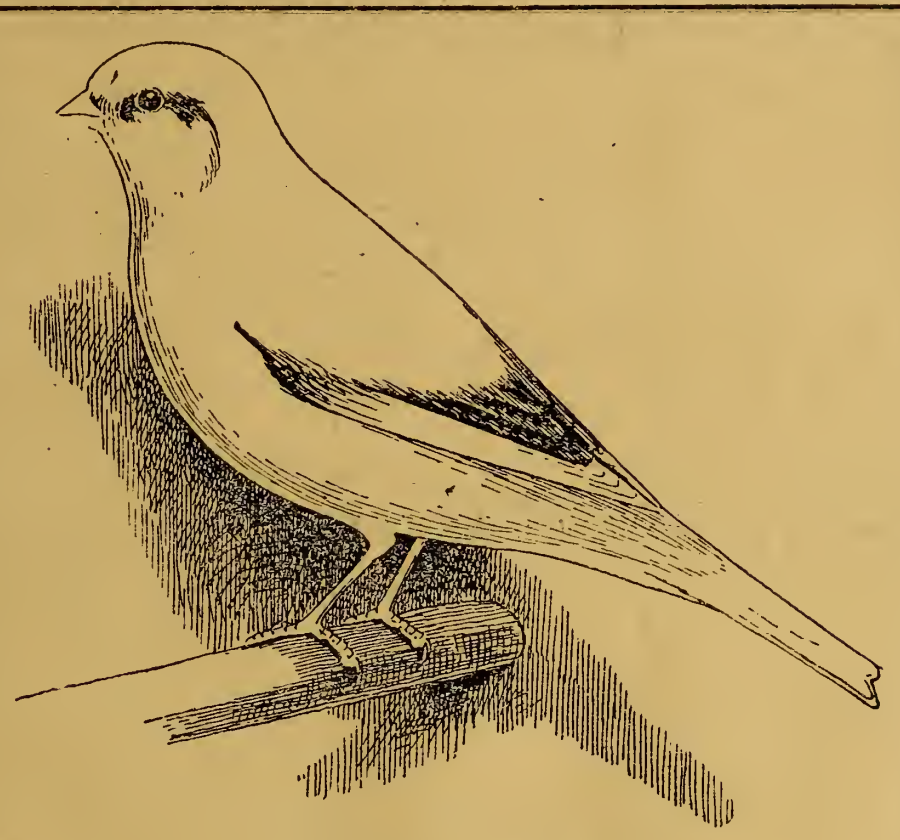
In furnishing a bird-room a good plan is to entrust the furnishing to a man who is an adept at cage-making and kindred work; such men are to be found in almost every town. Fanciers find it to be a benefit to be in touch with a good cage-maker; he can assist in several ways, apart from the making and repairing of cages. There are so many odds and ends required that guidance is needful.

The seed should be kept in tins or vermin-proof boxes or barrels. Some goodly-sized baths should be in every bird-room, which should be at the disposal of the live stock once a week, on a bright morning. Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries are very fond of disporting themselves. An eye should be kept on them, however, to see they do not overdo themselves.

A nest block is most useful in the course of the breeding season. If the nests are of flexible material they get out of shape, but they can be put into shape again by a press in the block. A properly formed nest is an aid to the keeping of young together. A sieve should form a part of the furnishing. The seed in the seed-box should be run through the sieve every morning, so that the birds have it in prime condition. No bird-room should be without a scraper of some kind to remove the droppings, etc. As I have said before, I advocate this being done daily. When birds are sitting or bringing up young, if accustomed to it, they will not be disturbed.

A number of spare cages and nursery cages should be at hand, as a breeder never knows when they may be required. The life of a Scotch Fancy, or the lives of a nest of Scotch Fancies, may be saved by having nursery cages at hand just at the moment when the parent or foster parent begins to clear away the feathers. Young ones have been known to be stripped of every feather in a very short time.

A supply of wire should be available, for the purpose of mending any defect. No room is complete without a pair of pliers or nippers. A bird getting out of a cage and rushing through the apartment sets every hen off her eggs; and every fancier knows what that means if the birds are left unchecked for two or three hours.



Spare Utensils.

Spare utensils of all sorts, including drinking glasses, egg dishes, etc., should be at hand. A spray, which can be purchased for sixpence, is useful to spray birds with that will not wash themselves. Perches should be kept scrupulously clean, and that can easily be done by having a perch scraper with teeth like a saw. Happily Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries do not as a rule get their feet clogged in the same way as other birds do. They evidently take a pride in keeping themselves tidy. Spare nests, nest boards, and perches, should be available where the cages are uniform and of one size.

Spare breeding cages are indispensable in a tidy room. By a change of cage of the same size, etc., the stock is kept clean, and there is no danger of upsetting the hen. Mouse traps should be constantly set, and so placed that in the event of a bird getting out of cage there would be no chance of its getting trapped and ending its career. Trapping mice is a great aid where they are very numerous. They may get on to the shelves in spite of every precaution, and supposing they are not successful in getting up, the presence of mice causes a fusty disagreeable smell, which becomes positively sickening. A good way to have a room clear of mice is to block up the holes with tin filings. A tinsmith will be found only too glad to give a supply; they are not of much use to him, but can be put to excellent use in blocking the ingress of the room. The absence or banishment of vermin contributes in a large measure to the comfort and well-being of the birds.

Where it is possible to have two distinct apartments, it is a very great benefit. In the case of sickness breaking out the sick bird or birds can be isolated, and treated quickly. In the height of the breeding season the breeding pairs can be left free from disturbance, the weaned young being removed and finished off in another compartment. It reduces overcrowding too, which every breeder knows is attended with a numerous train of dangers from a health point of view. An ideal aviary should have two or three separate apartments, if possible adjacent to each other, to render working convenient.

Separating the Show Birds.

When you have got your birds nearly through, sort out the better-looking ones, and cage them separately, or (if this is not possible) in pairs, putting together a cock and hen; these will agree much better, and you run much less risk of plucking than by keeping two cocks together, the latter being very liable to do a little scrapping, and to make the feathers fly when coming into condition.

Having got the show birds, the work of preparing for exhibition commences. In Yorkshires, of course, you must avoid all fattening foods, except, perhaps, when you have one or two that are on the snaky side. Get them hard and dry in feather, and do not wash them too early. It is better to miss one show than to spoil a bird for several by being in too big a hurry at the start. When they are fit and need washing, what you require are three basins (good big ones), a nice badger hair brush, a large bar of mild soap (white Windsor or Castille)—do not forget to secure this many months in advance and place it in a dry position, so that it gets thoroughly hard by the time you require it; you will then get a much finer lather, and run less risk of getting too much soap in the neck, and causing thereby a frill that would do credit to a Dutch Canary.

Washing Birds.

In the first basin you get a good lather with fairly warm water. Try the water for heat with your elbow, just so that you can bear it in the water without discomfort. Catch the bird in the left hand, and commence by washing the flights and tail, at the same time wetting all except the head about the eyes. Then wash between the shoulders and the neck, using plenty of the soapy water. Turn over, and treat likewise the under part, from the neck downwards; then wash the head and the upper part of the neck as quickly as you can, and for the feathers over the beak, which are usually very dirty, rub your fingers on the soap and rub quickly. Turn to No. 2 basin and rinse all the soap well off. Then in No. 3 repeat the process. In this last a small cup is very good, as you can by this method rinse exceptionally well about the neck and the soft feathers round the tail root—two places which a novice usually makes a mess of in the first wash.

When the birds are rinsed thoroughly, wrap them up gently in an old cotton cloth; hold them in the hand a few seconds to let the cotton draw out the water. Do this a second or third time, until the bulk of the water is extracted; then you can either roll them up and place them before the fire for about ten minutes or put them straight into a drying cage. The latter is my method.

When the birds are getting dry about the head move them a little further away, so that they may not dry too quickly, as this is apt to curl the feathers. Keep them downstairs all night, returning them to the bird room early in the morning before the fire is lit. Put them a bath on, and keep it on, say, an hour; this will give them a chance to get all their feathers straight, and in their proper positions.

On Sending Birds to Shows.

For a Friday show I prefer to wash on the Monday previous, and Tuesday for Saturday shows. Many times it takes all my care to keep them clean even this short period. When sending to shows have nice clean cages, and don't be late in sending; better an hour too soon, so as to give them a chance to get something to eat and settle down. Should you be fortunate enough (or should I say have a bird good enough to win a money prize), don't forget to draw the cash; it comes in useful to buy seed with.

Mr. Jackson: Re leadpiping as used round the top of nest pans, is there any danger of poisoning?—No; I have used these for 12 years or more, and never had any trouble on that point.—Mr. Cann: Is there any special way of mixing colour-feed?—No; all I add is a small quantity of linseed meal, then add to egg food not very much egg, say about half strength you would use during breeding, making the food for a start slightly coloured, and gradually increasing amount of colouring matter to make the egg food a very bright red.—Mr. Atkinson: Do Yorkshire fanciers find it absolutely necessary to keep Belgian stock to keep up position, etc.?—Yes, a small quantity of Belgian blood must be kept in the stock, or they will get too thick in body and plain in appearance, and lose that swagger so much admired. Of course, not much is required, or you get the faults attendant with it, viz., thin neck and frilly front.

Nests of birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

The Reminiscences - - - - of an Old Fancier.

By SAMUEL HONEY.

I think I must have been born a bird fancier, as my eldest sister, who had to carry me out when I was a youngster, often tells me how I used to almost jump out of her arms in trying to get a bird that might have been flying along; and now that I am 65 years of age there is nothing that gives me so much pleasure as attending to my birds and watching the wild ones in and around our district.

My First Pet.

My first pet was a Jackdaw (or Chough, as we called it), or rather, I should say, half of this bird was mine, as I caught it with the help of my schoolmate. It had fallen from the nest half-way up a very high rock, and was hopping about on the beach below when we caught it. We fed it on bits of bread; and meat when we could get these. We kept it in a box with wooden bars in front whilst we were at school, but directly we came out we spent all our time with Jacko.

He became very tame and would follow us about. Unfortunately he was very inquisitive. An old maiden lady who lived near us used to wear white stockings and shoes with buckles, and Jacko always "went for" the buckles or stockings, so much so that my father, to whom she was always complaining, got so wild that he put an end to poor Jacko's life, and, although I have lost many a good bird since, I have never felt so bad as I did then.

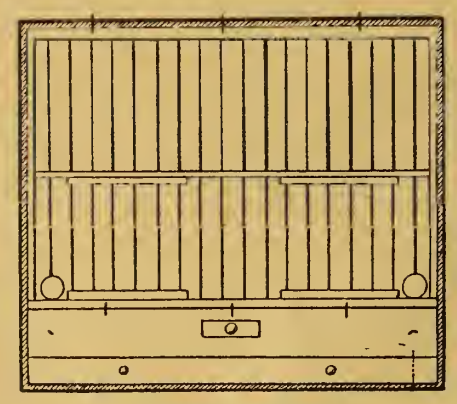
First Attempt at Bird Breeding.

My first attempt at bird breeding was in 1863, when a friend brought me a pair of real Belgian Canaries, as he called them, from Antwerp (they were what we now call Dutch Frills). I was very proud of them. I made a nine-compartment breeding cage to fit the whole of the inside of the kitchen window (as I had no other place suitable), with glass back and wire front. I bought four pairs of Canaries—none of them of any particular breed—from various parties, and I reared from these 28 young birds. But the Belgians did not breed, although the hen laid two nests of eggs.

I was, of course, very proud of my success and, seeing there was to be a bird show some ten miles off, I determined to enter the Belgian cock bird, also two of the young cross cock Canaries. To my great delight I won second with the Belgian, but the young birds were not even noticed, although at the show I thought them much better-looking than the first prize birds; in fact, I said as much to a grey-headed old gentleman who happened to be looking at them, and I well remember his look when he asked me what I called them—Norwich or Yorkshire or what? I told him I did not know. He took me around to the different classes and taught me more about the different breeds in one half-hour than all the bird fanciers I know have taught me since.

From the time of that show I have bred and exhibited pure Norwich (Crests and Plainheads), Belgians, Scotch Fancies, Cinnamons, Lizards, Lancashire Coppy, etc.; in fact, every variety of Canary except the Border Fancy (which I have never kept), and won many prizes with each of them, including silver cup for Belgians. I also pride myself upon the fact that every bird I won with was bred by myself; but, of course, I bought many birds to breed with, and every breeding season since 1863 I have had from five to thirty pairs, except two years when I was away from home.

How I Make my Cages.



My ideas after over 40 years' experience I will now put before my patient reader. As to breeding cages: being a carpenter I make my own. I believe in plenty of room, and so I make them 2ft. 2in. long, 16in. high, 11in. deep, ⅜in. thick, with separate front of wood and wire; wood top rail ¾in. by ⅜in.; middle rail ⅜in. by ⅜in.; bottom rail ¾in. by ⅜in.; stiles ½in. by ⅜in.; the whole of the rails pierced ⅝in. apart for wire, and the whole bradded together for front, a rail 2½in. by ⅜in. being let in fair with edges of cage and ⅜in. up from bottom, a slip ¼in. wide being fixed with pin through at one end for turning out, so as to enable me to scrape out bottom. The front is fixed in with three pieces of wire projecting from bottom rail, so as to go in holes in fixed rail, and three pieces of wire through top of cage in head rail of frame.—Doors—two wooden rails with wires driven ½in. through inside of each.

The sketch will, I think, make it perfectly clear what I mean.

I always keep the bottom of my cages covered with fine sea sand. I paint the inside a light blue, the paint being mixed with nearly all turpentine and driers. The outside is black japanned, thinned with turps.

For the nest I use round zinc with concave perforated bottoms lined with sadler's felt; and I give the hens dried grass and flock to build with. I always well dust the nest with insect powder, and also use a little flowers of sulphur.

I keep a piece of cuttlefish shell between the wires. The perches I put from front to back, with a sharp piece of wire in end of perch projecting about 3-16in., and I cut a V-shaped notch for the wire in the other end, and two or three times during the breeding season I take them out and hold each end over a lighted wax match for a few seconds, so that I am never troubled much with red mite. I keep the hens in a large flight cage during the winter (the cocks in separate cages), and feed all on plain Spanish Canary, with, every other day, first German rape; third day, hemp; fifth day, inga or maw—just a teaspoonful per bird in a separate tin. I hang up a bath twice a week so that the birds can bathe if they wish.

Mr. Honey's Cage-Front.

I never have any fire or lamp in my bird rooms, and I have never lost any bird through the cold weather. I do not believe much in medicines for birds; if a bird is not healthy I get rid of it. In the event of a bird getting egg-bound, I always get a small-mouthed jug and fill it with boiling water; then I take the bird in my hand with the little finger under the tail to lift it. I hold the vent over the hot steam as long as I can bear it to my little finger, and then I drop a little warmed olive oil on the vent and put the bird on the nest. I have always found the egg laid soon after.

The Pairing and Feeding of Birds.

I generally pair my birds the first week in March. I always put the birds together at once, and let them make friends. I have tried other ways, such as putting the hen in a small cage in front, but my experience is that they do better if put together and left to make friends by themselves.

I always take the eggs out each morning until the third is laid, when I return them to the nest. I feed the birds when paired and for a week before with egg and biscuit ground together with a little sugar added. For green food I am a great believer in young dandelion leaves washed clean and given fresh. Of course the cages and water bottles should be kept perfectly clean; no true fancier would leave them dirty.

I always talk to my birds, even when they are breeding, and I try to get them so used to me that I may take the sitting hen off her nest. I know a great many writers say, "do not on any account interfere with the sitting hens, or go near the birds more than you can help," but I have had no trouble; in fact, I always look at the eggs when the hen has been sitting for five days, and I see if they are fertile or "coming down," as we call it, and if they are not, I destroy them and take away the nest. If the eggs are alright I take the hen off on the thirteenth morning to see how the hatching is going on.

I have never had much trouble with sweating hens, as I always try to keep only strong hens. I believe sweating is owing to a weakness in the stock.

There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

The Goldfinch at Large and in Captivity.

By JAMES BEATTIE.

The Goldfinch, the most beautiful of our native songsters, is fast disappearing from among us, owing to the activity with which he is pursued by bird catchers, and trapped before the young are able to feed themselves. He cannot be termed a high-class songster in the true sense of the word, but we are never tired of hearing his merry wild song. The birds are also imported in large numbers from Russia, Spain, France and Germany, the Russian or Siberian Goldfinch being the largest of all.

Where Found and How Distinguished.

The Goldfinch is found in all parts of the British Isles, but the finest specimens are caught among the hills and mountains of Cumberland and Westmoreland, the wilds of Dartmoor, and along the coast line of Sussex and Hampshire. He can be easily distinguished by his red face with its creamy white cheeks, black collar, golden wing bars, and rich russet-brown back and chest.

The nest of this species is usually built in the fork of an orchard tree and in fruit gardens, apple, pear and plum trees being generally selected. April is the usual month in which it commences to build the nest, which is beautifully constructed, the Goldfinch being quite a past-master in the art of nest-building. The same nest is never used for two broods. The materials used are fine roots and stalks interwoven with wool and moss, and lined with down. Lichens are used for covering the exterior, which is ingeniously made to resemble the bark of the tree it rests upon.

The Food of the Species.

In its wild state the Goldfinch feeds on the seeds of groundsel, thistle, poppy, and plaintain—wild seeds of all kinds. When taken as nestlings, Goldies are very tender and delicate, and it requires much care and attention to rear them.

Grind up a little Canary seed and a pinch or two of thistle seed, and mix it with some boiled bread and milk. Feed the young birds with this and a little soaked biscuit every two hours, till they are five weeks old. Slowly wean them from the soft food and get them on to a staple diet of Canary, rape, hemp, teazle, and charlock seeds.

The Goldfinch should be kept well supplied with thistle seed, lettuce, groundsel, stalks of plantain, knotweed and dandelion in seed. To procure a supply of thistle seed, gather a quantity of thistle heads, shake them well in a bag, and the seed will fall out. It may then be put away for winter use. Many young Goldfinches die of indigestion soon after their capture, in consequence of being suddenly transferred to a diet of hard dry seed, but if they are fed with hemp seed slightly cracked for them, and scalded rape seed, they will do better.

This bird is very fond of bathing, and should have a plentiful supply of fresh clean water, say, twice a week in summer and once a fortnight in winter on warm days. The drinking water should, if possible, be soft, but if this is unobtainable, the water given should first be boiled, for hard water is a fertile source of kidney disease, which is seldom recognised until it has proceeded so far as to preclude all hope of recovery.

At the Moulting Time.

At moulting time give them lettuce, and a blade of saffron in their water. If loose, give them a lump of chalk or cuttle-fish to peck at, and always keep the tray of the cage well strewn with fine gravel and coarse grit, of which they partake freely to assist digestion.

You may know a cock from a hen Goldie whatever the age by the superior depth and brilliancy of all its colours, black, yellow and red. In the male the edges of the wings are black up to the shoulder, and it is also black round the base of the bill, the "blaze" being a deep red. The black on the hen is much lighter, and round the bill it is grey.

The Goldfinch is usually caught with limed twigs baited with thistle heads. When first taken it is rather wild, but with kind and careful treatment it soon becomes tame and reconciled.

For Muling Purposes.

It is frequently used for breeding Mules with the Canary, or Hybrids with other birds, and will also produce young with a mate of its own species, both in cage and aviary, though more freely in the latter.

If it be desired to breed Mules, I would strongly recommend two hens for one Finch. All three should be put in a cage, and as soon as you see him taking more notice of (or liking to) one hen than of the other, let him and the one he likes be left alone until she is about to lay. Then take the Goldfinch away and put him in with the other hen, for if left he is almost sure to break the eggs as soon as his "mistress" lays them. He is a very mischievous young gentleman, pulling the nest to pieces and sucking the eggs.

If, however, the Finch does not interfere with the nest, and feeds the hen, I prefer to let him remain with her. One often meets with a cock Goldfinch that is a pattern of propriety, and makes a trustworthy and devoted father, bringing up the brood himself.

In the case of breeding either Canaries or Mules, always take each egg away as it is laid, and place an artificial nest-egg in its place, until your hen has laid her third. By this means the young are all hatched out at the same time, instead of having some a few days older than the others. If it is wished to breed from hen Goldfinches, the best way is to procure a hand-reared one, or one which has been hatched and reared by Canaries; they are more likely to nest in a cage than those which have been captured when full-grown.

The food to give to Goldfinch Mules is the same as for the Goldfinch. Hen Mules make very good foster mothers when well cared for, and anyone wanting a good songster should procure a good cock Goldfinch Mule.

(We print Mr. Beattie's article as written, though we do not agree with the opinion expressed that "the Goldfinch is fast disappearing from among us," nor that the "disappearance" is due to the activity of bird-catchers.—EDITOR.)

The following judges have been appointed for Earlston N.B. Show, to be held December 18th, writes Mr. John Brockie, the secretary: for Border Fancies, Mr. John Tait (Galashiels); for other classes, Mr. Walter Bell (Earlston).

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS respecting a Red-crested Cardinal, writes Mr. T. A. Webster (Aldershot), as the replies were so many I could only answer those who sent stamps.

The membership of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club now totals 100, and judging by the good number of inquiries, re particulars of competitions, etc., there is every probability of a considerable increase. I shall be pleased to forward a copy of our Year Book to all intending members, on receipt of 6d., which will be deducted from their subscriptions.—O. MITCHELL, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford.

Dulwich O.S. Show will be held at the magnificent Municipal Hall, Dulwich, centrally situated, and splendidly lighted, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, the show managers, Exhibitors, we hope, will rally round us (for we are making a special effort for a huge success), and remember that last year the majority of the members waived their claims so that the open exhibitors could all be paid in full. Several prominent gentlemen have come forward with financial help.

In sending us a copy of the National Green-marked Yorkshiro C.C. Handbook, containing the rules and regulations of the club, the list of club shows, competitions, etc., and the members' names and addresses, Mr. F. Armstrong, the hon. secretary, writes: I think you will agree with me on perusal that the latest fledging of 1909 is an exceedingly promising youngster, and bids fair to equal, if not excel, its forefathers. We have struck out on progressive lines as you will note. We have both novice and junior novice competitions. These we are hoping will be good feeders for the premier competition. The competitions are likely to be keen from what I have seen at the different young bird shows this season.

We were pleased to receive a call last week from the well-known Norwich bird specialist, Mr. W. Rudd. Our readers will remember that in the latter part of the summer Mr. Rudd was severely indisposed, as the result of overwork and a too strict application to his business. However, a short holiday in Switzerland seems to have set him up completely; he is quite his old self again, and ready, as he informed the writer, for any amount of business. Mr. Rudd gave us a most interesting account of his experiences. He appeared to have enjoyed especially his trip to the Great St. Bernard; he had never been in such a wild and desolate country before, and the sublimity of the scenery seems to have greatly impressed him. On his homeward journey he seized the opportunity of coming again into personal touch with the leading Continental breeders of Dutch Frills. Mr. Rudd seems to think there is a great future for this variety, and intends paying special attention to it, though, of course, not neglecting in the slightest his reputation as an all-round expert on every kind of cage bird.

London Federation of C.B.S.

There will be a Council meeting of the London Federation of C.B.S. on Friday, October 8th, at 7.45 p.m., at "The Feathers," Westminster, writes Mr. P. Adamthwaite, the secretary. The business is very important, including the consideration of a communication from the Cage Bird Union; also railway and insurance matters, and the question of dealing further with defaulting members.

CANARY QUERIES.

Bare Neck and Enamelled Cage.

M. C.—(1) The probability is this hen is an old one; in that case the trouble will be difficult to get rid of. If there is any likelihood of its cage being infested with mites treat it as advised to "Ripley." Keep it in a rather warm place now the moult has commenced, but see it is quite free from draughts and great fluctuations of heat. Allow it to bathe frequently if it does not show any ill effects afterwards. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts of canary to one part summer rape, and once a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, maw, gold of pleasure, and linseed. Every third day give about half a teaspoonful of egg food, slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with a few grains of maw seed. The egg food you may vary now and again with an equivalent quantity of crushed sponge cake, or bread milk. Continue for six or eight weeks until the bird is getting well through moult. Give a little green food three times a week. You may just moisten the bare skin around neck once a week for a month with a small feather dipped in strong vinegar. (2) No, the white enamel will not be injurious if it is put on tolerably well, and allowed to dry before the bird is returned.

Various Points.

A. M. J. (Cricklewood).—Am glad to hear the hen is so much better. Persevere with the treatment and she will soon come alright. After the course previously advised, if you cannot see any quills starting on the bare places, give twenty-drop doses of Chemical Food in the water every second or third day for three or four weeks. The swelling at side of neck is not unlikely to be nothing worse than the food in the bird's crop. The treatment for egg binding would not cause the loss of feathers, if properly carried out. Examine muslin cover over the cage daily for red mites. Young birds do not lose their tails and flights the first moulting season, so your three-months old male is not likely to lose his flights. He might have met with an accident and loosened tail feathers. All birds are more or less loose and puffy in feather whilst moulting, and many snatch "forty winks" during the day, but as long as they are generally bright, and active most of the time, no harm need be apprehended. I should rather suspect the bird in question was addicted to overfeeding, and would advise you to give him a dose of six drops of syrup of buckthorn and syrup of rhubarb twice a week for a fortnight, and limit his diet in same way as the hen for a week or two. Also see whether it is troubled with sore feet, and if so bathe them in warm water in which a few crystals or permanganate of potash have been dissolved; dry gently and anoint with a little zinc ointment, or cold cream.

Clearing Cages of Redmites.

Ripley.—The details for doing this have appeared in quite a number of replies of late. There is no necessity to put anything on the birds, as red mites live about the cage, and not upon the birds, only visiting them at night to feed. Still, you may hang on a bath in which you have soaked a teaspoonful of quassia chips overnight, In each half of the water, and let the birds bathe in it as freely as they like; a few hours later transfer them to clean temporary cages. Now thoroughly overhaul infested cages, scrape all over the insides, especially in all corners, and rake out with a pin any crack or open joint, or crevice. Burn debris at once. Get, say, a small teacupful of paraffin (methylated spirit is better), and dissolve in it half-ounce of camphor, and by means of a small paint brush, thoroughly wash over the cages inside and out with this mixture, working it as deeply as possible into all cracks and joints. Put cages outdoors, in a sunny spot for preference, to dry. Give the nail or hook on which the cages hang, and the wall, too, a good dose of the fluid. If wall is papered see if paper is torn, and act accordingly. Next day, or on the second or third day, repeat the operation, and again next day stop any cracks or holes with putty and re-paint or distemper the cages inside, re-stain, if necessary, and re-varnish the outsides. When quite dry this time, the birds may be returned. A quassia bath, as above, may be given each day whilst they are in the temporary cage.

In a Bad Way.

E. S. (Ardwick).—It is impossible to say what the substance is without seeing it, but I am inclined to think it is due to an enlargement of the liver, and at the age of this bird, there is little likelihood of its making any material improvement. Try what the following will do for it, and report progress in a month, referring to this reply. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only, and give separately three times a week about half a teaspoonful of scalded rape seed, and on two other days a small piece of bread sopped in milk, and sprinkled with maw seed. Keep cage nicely strewn with clean gritty sand, and give a little green food daily. Keep it in a comfortable place quite out of draughts and fluctuations of heat, and not on the cold side. At the same time do not keep him too warm—try to strike the happy medium, and go for fresh, pure uncontaminated air, and equable temperature, as being of the greatest importance. Let it bathe freely in fine mild weather in tepid water, if it does not appear to suffer from chill afterwards. Examine cage carefully, and if infested with insects follow advice to "Ripley." In the drinking water give six drops each syrup of buckthorn and syrup of rhubarb every second day for a week, and afterwards three drops of diluted sulphuric acid, a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a hemp seed, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give this every second day for a fortnight, then miss a week, and give it again for another fortnight if necessary. Use a glass or china drinking vessel when giving this medicine—by no means a metal one.

Yorkshires Dying.

G. Read.—If any more die I should strongly advise you to send one for post-mortem, and meantime keep your birds in strict isolation and not introduce any fresh bird. Your diet is certainly faulty, and is probably the cause. You should not give boiled rape and hemp daily, and whilst you are colour-feeding there should be no necessity for any other soft food, such as bread and milk. Continue present staple seed diet. Give about a small teaspoonful of the egg-food with colour for each bird daily, and twice a week, not oftener, you may give a few grains per bird of a mixture of hemp, maw, and linseed. Give a little green food daily, but until this illness has passed off use only such things as half-ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's-purse, or seedy sprays of chickweed. Stop the fruit and boiled carrot for the present. See all food and water vessels, and cages and perches, are scrupulously clean. Keep birds in a comfortable temperature, quite out of reach of draughts and chills. See all food and water are clean and free from contamination. In the drinking water give six drops each syrup of rhubarb and syrup of buckthorn each day for three days, and every second day for the remainder of the week, and on the alternate days in the latter period give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid, continuing the latter for a week. If you cannot get these things easily you may substitute for the buckthorn and rhubarb a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of lemon juice, and for the second medicine you may try as a substitute six drops each of malt extract and meat juice and ten drops of port wine. Sorry cannot give addresses. Perhaps the directory in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL would help you.

Crested Hen Unwell, etc.

G.M.D.—It is likely the chief trouble is constipation, though she may also be feeling the strain of moulting. It is unfortunate she does not seem to care about "sop." Try following method of preparing it, if your method does not already coincide with it; prepared in this way, I find the vast majority of Canaries quite partial to it. Put, say, two tablespoonfuls of stale bread crumbs into a cup, add a teaspoonful of soft sugar, or castor sugar (crystallised is not so suitable), and pour over it just enough boiling milk to saturate it. Stir well, allow to stand until cold, then drain off as much of the surplus fluid as possible, by pouring it on a piece of butter muslin loosely suspended over a cup, and allowing it to remain until the moisture has ceased dropping through. Put the sop in another cup, keep in a cool place, and it will be quite fit for use for several days. When giving it, put the required quantity in the egg drawer or a finger drawer, and sprinkle a little maw seed on top of it. Concerning the Crest, continue your present staple of Canary and rape, but drop all other seeds and foods for a week, and give instead a small teaspoonful of milk "sop," as above, every second day, and on the alternate days a little green-food, varying the groundsel heads with watercress, chickweed, and plantain stalks. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and after this give fifteen drops of port wine and six of malt extract daily for a week, or until the symptoms are quite removed. After a week go back to your usual dietary, but only give the seed mixture twice a week, and a little egg or sop—one or the other, but not both—three times a week. Keep her in a bright, well-lit portion of the room, but be careful to avoid draughts, or great fluctuations of temperature.

Brevities.

Hoarseness (Mah.).—This is probably simply the effect of the bird's moulting. See it is not exposed to any draughts, and give a few drops glycerine and Chemical Food, say ten of each, in the water for a few days, and every second day for a week give a small piece of bread scalded in milk, pressed nearly dry, three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. A mealworm a day would be useful, though the above will doubtless be sufficient to set matters right in a few days.

Letter of Thanks (A Novice).—Glad to know advice was appreciated. It is always a pleasure to assist. The extra details you give of the outdoor aviary show a pretty good general management. The only thing you seem to require to complete the efficiency of the ventilation is a few one-inch holes near the highest point of the roof to act as exits for the heated and foul air. These should be covered with a sliding shutter to regulate the size to suit prevailing conditions of weather. The covers you contemplate using (over the wire gauge ventilators, are quite correct, and very useful adjuncts, especially if you make the front portion to work on hinges at bottom edge, so that it can be closed over the gauze opening like a flap, if it is deemed desirable to do so.

Stopped Singing (M. L. Johansen).—It is quite natural for it to stop singing when beginning to moult. This is the usual order of things. All you need do as long as the bird seems tolerably bright and well, is to see it is not exposed to any draughts or chills, and to keep it in a comfortable place; see it is not festered by red mites in its cage, and feed it as frequently advised for song birds. Given these simple precautions the bird will probably get through its moult before the end of October, and may be in full song again soon afterwards. You may give a little egg or biscuit food twice a week; and twenty-drop doses of chemical food in the drinking water three times a week would help it, but is not essential unless the bird seems to get run down. Do not be disappointed if it does not commence to sing right away. Some specimens begin much sooner after the moult than others, and some will not recommence until getting towards spring.

A Brace of Posers (Storm Petrol).—(1) I have no doubt that by running a cock with two hens, and all going well, it is quite "possible" for the cock to put each hen to nest three times in the season. But things that are quite "possible" are not always the most "probable," and this is one of them. If all does go well you should manage it. Only the actual experiment can tell. As regards the cock, which you seem to overlook, I should say it was not at all advisable to take six nests from one, in one season, and should only be attempted with strong, healthy, and vigorous birds. (2) I have never tried to rear the young from the nest upon equal parts of Indian meal and bread crumbs, so cannot speak from practical experience. Theoretically, it should be possible, but the parents would have to be reckoned with first, and the food prepared so that they would take it freely and with relish. Try the Indian maize if you like, but only with one or two pairs the first year.

Growth Near Eye (P.C.).—If the growth is soft and appears to contain fluid or pus, bathe it in fairly warm water for a minute or two, then prick it with a clean needle and gently press out the contents, dry carefully, and anoint place with a little carbolised vaseline each day for a few days afterwards. If the swelling is firm to the touch it is probably a tumour, and I would not advise you to attempt any interference. If the bird is valuable you might ask your medical man or a veterinary surgeon to remove it. Otherwise try painting it once a week for a month with tincture of iodine, using a small feather, such as a bird's wing or tail feather. If that does not cause its absorption you had better leave it alone. See the diet is correct, as frequently advised here, and give a fairly liberal supply of green food, or, failing that, add a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of lemon juice to its drinking water occasionally to keep bowels freely open.

Moulting a Goldfinch.

Chorister.—It is not in any way necessary to moult an exhibition Goldfinch in a dark place; quite the contrary, in fact. A sun bath is valuable at the end of the moult; when the blaze is "coming up" in colour. The cage you mention is too small; he should have room to exercise his wings. As regards the treatment, if you are colour feeding (it is not really necessary) I have dealt very fully with this recently. The sweet (tasteless) pepper should be well mixed amongst their seed, the latter being cracked if necessary; or make a mixture daily of colour food (soft food) and cracked seed, and let him eat this. Let the stock food be good, sound teazle seed three parts, Canary and linseed one part each. In a separate dish give a teaspoonful of good old hemp seed one day, and a dessert-spoonful of cracked sunflower seed the next day, with a good pinch of maw and niger seeds now and again, as a further change. Don't give hemp freely until the moult is drawing to a close. Above all, however, the bird must have a free daily supply of knapweed, thistle heads (especially any with tiny maggots at the centre), milk thistle, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's purse (not the coarse leaves), any cornflower heads which you can get full of seed—all, or any, of these are liked by the Goldie, and help to get him through his moult in exhibition form. Many like a tiny white mealworm (just cast its skin) or two now and again. He should have provision for a bath whenever he feels inclined to take it. That he should bathe freely is important. Failing this he must be sprayed on all suitable days; but spraying is at best but a poor substitute for a bath taken of the bird's own free will.

Nightingale Matters.

Anxious.—The book which deals with the Nightingale is Part II. of the "British Bird Manual" (post free 1/1 from the office of CAGE BIRDS). The cage you have now obtained should be suitable. Special Nightingale cages are sold by many of the cage-makers advertising in our columns. The food also ought to suit the bird. Remember that it is well to offer variety now and again; also that mealworms should mainly be reserved for winter use, when other live foods (such as wasp grub, small well scoured gentles, live ants 'eggs, etc.) are unobtainable. Six mealworms per day are doubtless enough; more must be given if the bird is not freely eating the soft food. You might extract three broken feathers from each side of the tail without harming the bird; handling, however, is not conducive to steadying them. Nightingales will certainly sing during the winter in captivity. You need have no fear of the notes of the Song Thrush "spoiling" those of the 'Gale.

A Lengthy List.

Bermon.—I am not in love with aviaries erected on top of fowl runs. Fowls are very liable to the attentions of parasites, and the latter can hardly be expected to leave the smaller birds alone. I have had several cases brought to my notice of bad plumage and bald patches amongst birds kept in close proximity to fowls. I think the latter supplied the cause. The size of the proposed aviaries is pretty good, and no doubt the birds would winter alright in them if in a sheltered position; (2) As regards Blackbirds and Thrushes agreeing together, see another reply given this week; (3) You would get song from the birds, certainly, but possibly not so much of it as you would were they caged singly; (4) You do not describe these spots well enough to help me. A white spot in the eye itself usually indicates total blindness. Could you not give a rough sketch of the position of the spots, and say whether there is any running or matter? Bathing with a warm weak solution of Condy's Fluid could do no harm, and would be likely to cure any running; (5) To get wasp grub, one has to take a wasps' nest. You can buy "wasp cake" (which contains the grubs) from many advertisers using our Food advertisement columns.

Sex of Young Blackcap Warblers.

Durham.—It certainly seems odd that of the nest of five Blackcaps (hand-reared), all the youngsters should moult out with brown caps. Still, I should venture the opinion that all are hens. The matter of when the young males attain the full black cap is to some extent in dispute. All that I have ever hand-reared, or bad in nestling plumage, have certainly come into their ebony polls at the autumn moult; and I notice that Mr. Teschemaker, who has bred them recently in his aviaries, records the same thing. Dr. Sharpe mentions cases of a "blackish head" (i.e., the black cap obscured by brown margins to the feathers) "worn through the first winter," and the full black cap assumed at the following spring moult (Naumann declares, by a partial change of feathers). Dr. Sharpe adds, however, that this is by no means the invariable method of passing from the young plumage to that of the adult. He instances cases of young birds caught when in full moult (August) which "had nearly assumed the perfect black head of the adult." Probably, therefore, it is variable. So, if the two extra fine youngsters of which you speak (or any of the others) have merely brown-edged caps on inspection, then they will be males. I feel sure that it is not correct to say the Blackcap has all males in one nest, and all females in the other. It will be in isolated instances where such happens, if at all. Birds are odd creatures, and do not act by "rule of three." For example, I have had some nests of Redstarts this season. Certain of the young males have moulted out into the full glory of spring plumage right away; others, under precisely the same conditions, have assumed the more sober usual winter garb of the male.

Brevities.

Bathing (G. P. Morgan).—All my own Mules and Hybrids have free access to the bath (in the early part of the day), whilst being moulted and colour-fed. Glad to bear former answers have proved so useful.

Management of Goldfinch (Trooper).—You cannot do better than follow the advice given "Chorister" this week. After the moult, add two parts of hemp to the stock mixture. The best general cage is that known as the "Finch stock cage" (stocked by all up-to-date cagemakers). It should be not less than 16in. long by about 8 deep by 10 or 11 high.

Names of Berries (Berries).—Some of the things you send are certainly not "berries." No. 1, fruit of the Dog Rose; 2, Privet berries in very unripe state; 3, Hardheads; 4, Elderberries; 5, one of the Plantains; 6, Persicaria. All except No. 1 excellent for Bullfinches, and the seeding kinds good for Goldies. Rowan berries (often called Mountain Asb berries) are fine for Bullies.

A Mixture (Name enclosed).—Such a question as yours is very difficult to answer. A Thrush, a Blackbird, and a Skylark might agree in a cage 5ft. by 2ft. by 2ft.; at the same time, they might not. Or they might agree in the winter and fight in the spring and summer. Much depends on the individual birds. If newly-caught (not house-moulted) and put in at the same time, they might agree very well for a period. My own Thrush (a moulted one) will not tolerate any other bird in the same cage. I certainly think it would be better to cage your birds singly.

An Aviary (W. Smith).—In my opinion a width of 2ft. is not enough for an outdoor aviary to be a success. It affords no privacy and but little shelter. Pity you can't give at least another foot. I should leave out the Siskin, for they are often very mischievous. The others should be all right. A few hen Canaries might succeed in breeding you a few Mules. A good seed mixture would be Canary, teazle, and hemp, three parts each, linseed, charlock, and summer rape, one part each. Give some sunflower now and again with the other seeds (including a wild seed mixture) in general use occasionally, for the sake of variety.

Goldie-Bullie "Gaping" (Cornwall).—I have found my own Bullie Hybrids apt to develop, during the moulting season, attacks of the "silent gaping" of which you speak. It cannot possibly be a cold, and I put it down to a "touch of the liver" brought on by the soft food (or egg food) on which they largely subsist whilst being colour-fed. "A congested state of the liver will cause panting," writes the late Dr. Greene, in one of his books; and this lamented fancier often told me the same thing. A dose or two of fluid magnesia (a small teaspoonful in a fluid ounce of water) has always put my birds to rights. A day's interval should be allowed between each dose. I give at the same time a good feed of lettuce (white) seed and maw seed.

Identity of Bird (A.B.).—Your description reads like that of a ben Redstart. If so, the bird will have a big bold eye and a habit of "flirting" its tail.

Weeds (New Readers).—You should get CAGE BIRDS book on "Seeds and Wild Plants" (post free 1/2), which gives full descriptions of them all, and is well illustrated. Or get a sample lot of these wild foods from one of the advertisers offering such in our columns (food advertisements). Hardheads look like tiny thistles, but the leaves and stem are not prickly; the bloom is purplish in colour. Knot grass is a weed (troublesome to farmers), which grows along the ground, and is very full of seed. It is a fine incentive to fluent language when one's fishing line gets on it. Shepherd's purse has heart-shaped seed-pods running up the stem, and clusters of very tiny white flowers at the top.

A Damaged Wing (J.H.B.).—If the wing was damaged by the hen, no treatment will prevent the drooping. If it is merely sore (as may be the case) then it will come right in due course. Should there be any broken quills, these must be carefully extracted. Any palpably sore-looking places must be gently anointed three or four times with a little carbolic ointment. Probably the hen wanted to go to nest again, in which case you should have provided a fresh nestpan and plenty of nesting material. If the youngster was out of the nest, it should have been separated from its mother by a wired slide (or put in a nursery cage) if she persisted in the plucking. Some hens are very cruel that way. Dark green is the best colour for the wires and inside of show cage for yellow variegated Mules.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Too Old to Talk?

Silver Grey.—No, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, and whenever you go near its cage repeat some short sentence or word; fondle it at the same time, and it certainly should begin to talk before six months are over. The female has usually a dark eye, the male a light one. Young birds are of much darker plumage than the adult, being mostly blackish grey, and the eye of the young male is dark like that of its female parent. Add a little wheat, oats, and canary seed to the sunflower and hemp, and it will ultimately take to same, and it will be the better for the variety; also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit and cuttlefish; cover the sand tray with gritty sand, and if it does not overdrink leave the drinking water continually in the cage, otherwise you must let it satisfy its thirst two or three times daily.

Wintering Finches Outdoors.

Beginner.—The term "acclimatised" is used in a loose manner, and often birds which have only been in this country two or three weeks are so described; and "acclimatised" hardly applies here. It is not sufficient for a bird to have been in this country even for a considerable time; if it has been kept indoors it cannot be put out at the end of the summer and left through the winter. Birds to winter outdoors must have been outside for the greater part of the summer, and unless yours have come from some outdoor aviary, where they were for the greater part of this year, it will not be safe to put them out now. All you name, if turned out in spring, can be safely left outdoors the year round. The provision for perching is ample, but put in also two or three husks and nest boxes as shelter; the nest boxes are best in the form of a small cube with a hole about 1¼in. dia. for entrance. If your county is a northern one, it will be better to have a glazed shutter to fit over wire netting during cold nights.

Breeding Green Singing Finches.

Torquay.—Though Green Singing Finches are quite ready to nest, the young are not often reared; for one reason and another, eggs get broken and also mysteriously disappear (eaten in most cases). It is late in the year now for nesting, but these birds should bring you off a brood or two next season. I have found this species very fond of the small twig travelling cages Hartz Canaries come over in as nest receptacles. Hang up two or three of these under the shelter. You must remove the fittings and cut away one or two of the twigs to make an entrance hole. Supply hay and long grass as nesting material. Your diet is satisfactory, but if young are hatched out I should supply a little soft food daily while they are rearing them, also any blighty foliage you can procure. I find my Finches all appreciate ripe fruit, apple, pear, banana, etc., and it is very wholesome for them. It will do no harm to let them make the attempt to nest.

Foreign Bird Queriists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free, a mine of information of use and interest.

Brevities.

Fire Finches and Cordon Bleus (M.G.L.).—Once acclimatised, these can be kept outdoors providing there is a good shelter. These have bred this year in the Isle of Wight, and the young have survived the inclement season in larger numbers than those of reputed hardy species. I always make a practice of keeping small Finches under observation during the winter, and if I notice one apparently ailing and feeling the cold, I at once remove it indoors and do not turn it out again till the spring. To be quite clear, providing your aviary enables them to take flying exercise and the shelter shed is weather-proof, they will do well and should breed next season.

Breeding Budgerigars in Winter (Keeper Hill).—Leave the birds to take their own course, unless the winter should be a very mild one. It is seldom they attempt much breeding during the winter, though I have had young leave the nest in the depth of winter and all have survived. For your cage try a pair of Long-tailed Grass Finches; these are handsome and interesting birds, live on a seed diet, but, like most Finches, are the better for a little soft food when feeding young. Fresh green food should be regularly supplied, particularly seeding (grass in flower) grass. A Hartz travelling cage makes a good nesting receptacle with the fittings removed, and a couple of the bars cut away to form an entrance.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (J. Rodger).—Chronic liver disease, acute inflammation arising therefrom, in which the lungs became involved.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Cutting (J. L.).—Many thanks. We already have a report of the case in type.

A Suggestion (Jacko).—We thank you for the trouble taken, and will give the matter consideration. Maybe we can manage it.

A Contribution (Miss Palmer).—We are much obliged to you, and will find a corner for your contribution in an early issue.

Suggested Article (A. Chillcott).—The matter shall certainly have our consideration. The trouble is to find the person who will write such an article.

A Charge (Puzzled).—Yours is not an easy question to answer, for much depends upon the circumstances, but we should think 2/6 per week a reasonable enough charge for keeping the two Canaries over a holiday period.

Touting for Advertisements (T. A. Webster). We are content to leave it at what you think. Results appeal to advertisers more forcibly than words; our pages are proof of that, were any needed. Glad to know you were so successful.

A Photograph (Wilson Bros.).—Many thanks; we will try to find a corner for it in the near future.

Yorkshire Show Cage (W.Murdoch).—We should think the Yorkshire show cage is about 9in. long, 6in. wide, and 13½in. high. It is all wire at top, fixed on a wood frame about 3in. high. The woodwork inside and out must be black; the wires also.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held September 25th, when some very good classical singing was heard before a crowded house, 17 birds singing. Mr. Soloman's bird, "the Derby winner," as it is called, was beaten by Mr. S. Hardcastle's "Chivey." Judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. 1, Hardcastle; 2, Soloman; 3, Stead. Also on September 26th, when 19 birds sang. 1, Johnson; 2, 3, Hardcastle. Judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week-end contest held at Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane, and resulted in a win for Mr. Wigfield's birds, Mr. C. Lorriman 2nd, and Mr. Martin 3rd. There was a good entry, and some good quality singing was heard. We had a debate re North v. South, and it was proposed to have a meeting on October 3rd at 8 p.m. on the subject. Will be pleased to see fanciers. Judges, Messrs. J. Clark and A. Lorriman.—J. HARGREAVES, Hon. Sec.

Kindly notify secretaries of my change of address from Lumsden Street, to 21, York Street, Thornaby-on-Tees, writes Mr. E. Freeman.

Owing to delay at the printer's we are unable to send out Hanley Show schedules until this week-end, writes Mr. Peake, the secretary.

All schedules have been sent out, writes Mr. E Cowling, hon. sec. of the Morpeth Show. Anyone overlooked should apply for one at once.

The Blackburn Quality Linnet Club has commenced, write Messrs. T. Slater and G. Rostron, secretaries, and we shall welcome old and new members.

Will exhibitors kindly note, writes Mr. W. Howe, hon. secretary of the Wellingboro' C.B.S., that through our not being able to arrange with the C.B.U. for a suitable date, the society have had to abandon their open show. We hope, however, to meet all old friends and make new ones next season.

We have been favoured by Mr. W. Rudd (Norwich) with a perusal of the remarkable testimonial (in the original envelope) to the efficacy of his "Asthmarine," which was sent him by Miss K. Downes (of Bath), and which is printed in Mr. Rudd's advertisement this week.

Owing to business engagements Mr. W. Sowden has been compelled to resign the post of assistant secretary to our society, writes Mr. H. Martin, hon. secretary of the Shipley O.S., but I am glad to say that we have been most fortunate in securing the services in his place of Mr. J. Robinson, who is a real worker. This friend will manage our winter members' shows and without doubt he will make them a success.

Correspondence.

The Larne & District Cage Bird Association.

SIR,—Many thanks for the report you published of the preliminary meeting of this new society. We had a committee meeting on Thursday, September 23, when it was arranged to have a two-days' show on January 20 and 21. We have made eleven new members. We hope to decide on our judge next week.

WM. GEDDIS, Hon. Sec.

The Giant Whydah.

SIR,—In Mr. Finn's article on the Giant Whydah, he says that observers agree that the said bird is easily captured in wet weather. Now, from personal observation I noticed that the Giant Whydah cast its long tail during the rainy season, August to October. I have seen the Kaffir boys catch them with the limed strings. They call it the king bird, as it is followed about by two small birds constantly. I wish success to "C.B." W. S. ROY.

The Dreaded Septic Fever.

SIR,—I was very interested in the letter signed "Not Disheartened" under the heading "The Dreaded Septic Fever." Cannot something be done by your readers to help your correspondent to start afresh next season? He is evidently a good tryer, and should be encouraged by other fanciers. I am willing to send him one bird (an early hatched 1909 Norwich hen), and if a few more fanciers will do similarly, it will show him that Canary breeders are practical as well as sorry. G. F. NEVE.

The Crystal Palace Annual Show.

Tong and District C.B.S. Start a "Visitors' Club."

SIR,—At our last meeting a motion was brought forward with reference to the Crystal Palace Show in February. It was unanimously decided to form a money club for all members and friends, each to pay 6d. per week until the end of January to enable us to visit the show. Eleven have joined up to now, and we are looking forward to many more when the idea becomes more widely known. I shall be pleased to receive the names of anyone wishing to join, and I invite all interested to come and join us and let us have a good number to make the journey up to the Crystal Palace for the great show.

J. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

An Eleven-year-old Greenfinch that Sings.

SIR,—Reading in a recent issue of CAGE BIRDS of a correspondent keeping a Greenfinch for nine years, I thought your readers might be interested to hear about my old Greenfinch, "Pippin." I bought him (quite a wild bird) of a dealer in November of 1898, judging him by his appearance to have been hatched in the Spring preceding; so that would make him eleven years old this past summer, and he is now as well as ever, and sings and warbles nicely, despite the oft repeated assertion (which in his case is quite incorrect), that Greenfinches cannot sing. He has been kept in a large cage in a light, airy kitchen. All his summer days, from June to October, he spends out of doors, coming in again at night. His staple food all these years has been German rape only. Canary he cares little for. For extras he has plenty of sunflower, bread (of which he is very fond), apple (especially the pips, which gained him his name), hard crusts (to nibble), and occasionally plaintain, dandelion, flowering grass, etc., and a little mould from the garden to pick over now and again (which amuses him); also when my foreigners have discarded their millet sprays, he has them to finish off, and sometimes he gets a little piece of mutton fat. In conclusion, I must add that he is now a fine, noble-looking fellow, tame enough to eat from the hand, and unless some unforeseen accident occurs appears likely to live for a long time yet.

A Goldfinch Mule's Daily Holiday.

SIR,—I thought I would let you know the following. Whilst in the garden of a friend of mine at Hockley, Essex, on a recent Sunday, I noticed that his young son had a small cage hanging up with the door of it open, and there was no sign of any bird. On coming back after tea I called the youngster's attention to the empty cage, and I was surprised to hear that the bird (a hen Goldfinch mule), belonging to the cage, was out in the woods somewhere, but would come back shortly. And it seems he has been in the habit of letting the bird out for a fly daily for some weeks past. Shortly after, and while we were in the garden, I saw the bird come back; it flew straight into the cage, and commenced feeding as if nothing had happened, and it took no notice of us.

Making Moveable Wire Fronts.

SIR,—To make a cage front, 18 ins. by 12 ins., take a piece of wood (See A) and saw three slots in it (See D). The outside slots should be 12 ins. apart. Thread a long piece of cage-wire (C) in the third hole of each crossbar (B), put the bars in the slots cut in the wood, and push the wire straight to wood. Thread the first wire in (having previously cut it to the correct size), and solder it. Now move the long wire and the wood to about the sixth hole in the crossbars, and so on until the job is finished, not forgetting to make drinking and seed holes. J. SMITH.

My Baby Hawfinch.

Notes on the Management of Hawfinches

SIR,—One of the most interesting pets one can have in the way of British Hardbills is a hand-reared Hawfinch. If not quite the equal of the Bullfinch (another tame pet), he runs that bird a good second for tameness, quaintness and interest. Now, my young Hawfinch, although only a nestling this year, has already moulted out into splendid condition. He will let me stroke him, take hold of him, feed him from my fingers and does not mind taking hold of one of my fingers and trying the strength of his powerful bill on it. I have kept Hawfinches on and off since I was a schoolboy, and the second bird I ever had was a beautiful hand-reared cock Hawfinch. He still lives in my mind, and I never saw another like him until the Crystal Palace Show of 1907, where in the Hawfinch class standing fourth was a bird like the one I kept when a "nipper." The owner of it was Mr A. Howe. The only other Hawfinch I have seen since, that looked like my old bird, was one belonging to Mr. George Potter, of Broseley, Shropshire. This bird the owner most kindly let me have, and it has already this year won me five first prizes and three seconds, and I have never heard a Hawfinch sing like this one does, although my young one has commenced to sing very well. A good number of people who are acquainted with birds, and seem to know a lot in their way, are very ignorant as regards the Hawfinch, and you hear such remarks as "gone in flights," "damaged tail," etc. Now, no other British bird, and only one foreign bird has wings like a Hawfinch's. The feathers in the wings, except the four end ones, are just as if someone had clipped them short. A habit peculiar to the Hawfinch when it is at rest during the day, is to sit with its wings drooping, just as other birds do; when ill, its tail also appears to be really too short for the size of its body; this, no doubt, is the cause of the curious flight that it makes when flying. For a number of years I have had the chance of studying the Hawfinch in its native haunts in the counties of Nottinghamshire, Staffordshire, and Shropshire. Every Hawfinch's nest I have yet known was within the vicinity of water, and this year I have caught Hawfinches in spring net and wire cage traps that were set on mud near a small pool of water. The young of this species when in nest plumage have not the bib and the eye marks of the adult bird, and their breasts are speckled. The length of the bill of the adult bird is seven-eighths of an inch and one inch and a-half round, while in the young bird the bill measures six-eighths of an inch. The cock bird is much richer in colour than the hen, although I have seen him so poor in colour that he might have been taken for a hen. The largest number of Hawfinches I have seen flying together has been eleven, but mostly they are seen in twos and threes, and singly. I have never seen more than four young in a nest, and a nest of youngsters reared this summer by a friend of mine, Mr. H. Salter, contained three. To see the male Hawfinch making love to his lady is a sight not to be forgotten, and one that is not equalled by the love-making of many of our foreign birds. Hybrids will be bred by this most beautiful bird, I believe, in time. My father, Mr. W. Bell, of Edwinstowe, Newark, Notts, managed one summer to get a fertile egg from a hand-reared male Hawfinch and a hen Bullfinch. I do not know, however, whether the Bullfinch was hand-reared or wild-caught. Mr. Cutmore, in the most interesting article he gave in CAGE BIRDS some time ago [This article appeared in our issue of October 31, 1908, and November 14, 1908.—EDITOR] on the Hawfinch as a cage pet, stated that he had never had a Hawfinch that would crack a cherry stone. Now, my old bird will soon perform that operation if given the chance. And the Hawfinch in its wild state feeds a lot on the kernels found inside wild cherry stones. The most natural picture of a Hawfinch I have ever seen in any paper or book was that beautiful plate given in CAGE BIRDS a few months ago.

How to Use Long Clap Nets.

SIR,—I am very sorry that "Querist," in your issue of September 18, could not understand the working of the bridle gear on the sketch I sent. G staff is a plain piece of hard wood two inches round and twelve inches long with a small hole through one and a-half inches from the top. Drive this into the ground level with the pole, and then open the net. Get a good strong cord and fasten it to the pole top; pass the cord through the hole and make it fast (not to slide). Then fasten the other end of the pole top and fasten your pull line arms in the centre of the cord between G Staff and pole top; make them tight so they will not slip.

MEMBER OF THE MIDDLESBRO' C.B.S.

Robbie Burns Not Guilty!

SIR,—Mr. Hawes is to be congratulated on his recent performance at the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. His lecture is really very instructive and interesting, and his style racy. He may be all very well on "Dickies," however, but when he meddles with Burns he burns his fingers. There is no need for him to follow the other singer (not Burns either) in saying: "Far awa' to Bonnie Scotland, has my fancy ta'en its flight." Mr. Hawes may be an adept at stopping the soaring of a Sparrow Hawk, but when he attempts to soar into the realms of poetry, he should be careful, as he will soon "come a cropper" like other aviators. It may interest him and others to know that the Poet Cowper wrote in the middle of the century before last, "England, with all thy faults I love thee still, my country." I hope everyone, whether socialist or tariff reformer, can still re-echo these sentiments. SCOT.

"That Delightful Pet, the Skylark."

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Tailby's very courteous reply to my letter on "A Skylark that sings every day" (which you kindly published in the September 18th issue of "The Fanciers' Encyclopædia," I mean CAGE BIRDS), I am pleased to say it will give me the greatest pleasure to illustrate my favourite pattern of Lark cage for the benefit of Mr. Tailby and the Lark fancy in general. I will also go so far as to have a photograph of my bird and cage taken at an early date. I will also go more into the feeding subject, and should be highly pleased if you could spare a corner in your valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS, for same. I am not a cage manufacturer, and would beg of you to make it quite clear that I do not make cages for sale May CAGE BIRDS continue long to prosper, as I find it a splendid medium to enable fanciers to get into touch with each other. Having the Fancy at heart, anything I can do to make the Skylark's lot a happy one will be done by me, and that right manfully. E. N. SMITH.

[We shall be pleased to reproduce a sketch or photograph of Mr. Smith's Lark cage, and to publish particulars, as he suggests, of his method of feeding Skylarks.—EDITOR "C.B."]

Moorhens Feast on Plums.

SIR,—A most unusual sight of Moorhens feeding on ripe plums was to be witnessed on the canal here (Stratford-on-Avon) during the week ended September 25. The tree is growing in a garden belonging to an old lady who lives in the cottage on the bank of the canal, the cottage being situated in a very quiet corner just before the canal empties itself into the Avon. The Moorhens are not satisfied with the lower branches, but get right on to the top of the tree on the outside branches, and peck away at the ripe plums. I made a visit to the place one morning just after six o'clock. There were then four Moorhens in the tree "stocking" away, and four more swimming in the water. There was also a Swan. They all appear very tame. The old lady, I suppose, feeds them every day. The place is one where barge boats used years ago to be built, and is never without its Moorhens. I noticed they were not very good perchers, for they appeared to slip down the

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—If Mr. Barnard's Linnets have "the best song it is possible to get," he must have the best Linnets in the world. The Northern style (so says Mr. Barnard) is no good, and the birds are "only used for catching in the South." And he has said he could write down any Linnet song. Perhaps he would write down the following notes, viz.: Whinny titter, jingle titter, running chatter, rolling chatter, chattering ree, whistling pee, poing pee, filly whinny, huffing whinny, laughing whinny, Woodlark woodle, and Cuckoo pether. If he does not recognise them by those names, will he please give the song of "those they only use for catching in the South." Then Northern fanciers will know if there is any truth in this assertion. Mr. Rostron did not name all the Northern quality song, by any means. Mr. Barnard has sneered long enough at the Northern song; we will soon see if he knows anything about it. I am sure all Northern fanciers will be delighted to hear the song of "those they only use for catching in the South." F. G. M.

The Feeding and Management of a Stock of Canaries.

SIR,—It is four years since I first started breeding Canaries, and I thank CAGE BIRDS for the success I have had. I first bought two pairs, and kept them in breeding cages in our kitchen. From these I bred eleven young ones. Having what I thought good results, and liking the hobby very much, I thought I would go in for breeding on a larger scale. So I visited a fancier I knew, and had an idea of building a bird house. Seeing his, I took a pattern from it and built one like it. The material I used was inch match boarding for the outside. The house was lined with ¼in. match-boarding on the inside, and had a galvanised iron roof, this being boarded first. But I was like a good many beginners—too anxious, and taking my birds out of their warm room, I put them into my outdoor aviary too soon, with the result that they all went into the moult. From the four pairs I only got five young ones. Last year (my third) I had one cock bird and three hens in my flight. I ran one cock with two hens in cages. From these I bred 52 young ones, and succeeded in rearing them all. This season I paired up the same number of birds, and I have 31 young ones. Although this is not so many as I had last year, I have only lost four, and those through their falling out of their nests. In regard to feeding; I give my birds mixed seeds in the winter—three parts Spanish Canary seed, one part hemp, and one part rape. If the weather is very cold I give them more hemp (I never used any heat whatever). About a fortnight before I pair my birds up I give them egg food every other day, and some dandelion leaves every day. After the hens have gone to nest, and are sitting, I give only plain Canary seed. I have never been troubled with cases of egg-binding. When I think my hens are about to lay, I put a few drops of glycerine in their drinking water, and give them a little inga seed, and a liberal supply of green food. When young ones come I give egg and bread four times a day—5 o'clock a.m., 8.30 a.m., 1.30 p.m., and at 6.30 p.m.—still keeping plain Canary seed as the staple diet. I give them as much hemp as they will eat. For green food, I use nothing but young lettuce plants, for which I always sow seeds at the back of my bird shed. When taking my young ones away from their parents, in order that they may do for themselves, I always feed them on egg food and crushed hemp, gradually reducing the quantity of egg food, so that by the time they are six weeks old, they are well on to hard seed. But I still give them about a teaspoonful each of egg food, and the same quantity of crushed hemp until they are through their moult. I never use colour food, because I prefer to see them in their natural colour. I do not remember ever losing a bird during the moult; in fact, it is very rarely I have one die at all.

The Future of the Crested Canary.

The C.C.C. New Scheme of Guarantee and Classification.

SIR,—Our late hon. sec., Mr. Tyson, issued an invitation to the committee and members to try and formulate some scheme for the benefit of the C.C.C. Being a member of committee, I thought it my duty to help with my humble efforts to that purpose, with no private aims, as "Bird of Freedom" so kindly suggests. Being an exhibitor, I had noticed the Crest and Crest-bred Canaries becoming more and more unpopular, to my mind not through lack of breeders and exhibitors, but lack of classes to show the different varieties in. I was receiving schedules of coming shows, and ten schedules out of twelve only offered two classes for the Crested variety, viz., Any variety of Crest, and A.V. of Crest-bred. Now, there are many reasons why these two classes are not strong in entries, consequently giving committees little encouragement to extend the classification. One reason is that exhibitors with first-class exhibits will not send their best specimens into a mixed competition; another reason: an exhibitor might have two birds which could win in these two classes, but an exhibitor who makes a regular practice of sending to shows does not, as a rule, provide himself with a travelling box to hold two cages only, but four, six, or eight. Here is another very important reason: the first prize, if he wins it, would not cover entry fees and travelling expenses for any travelling case which keeps birds secure from knocking about, consequently he will not give a schedule a second look with only one or two classes. It is not worth the bother. I could give other reasons, but think two enough. Now, to induce committees who have had poor results with two classes to increase the classification to eight sounds almost impossible, let alone the full classification of 15. They would say at once they could not afford to risk it—they would sooner cut the variety out of their schedules—and this is what many have already done. To solve this difficult problem was my object. Knowing there are more winning birds kept at home than are shown (for want of classes), consequently feeling sure that given proper classification the classes would fill, I took the catalogues of five shows giving the largest open classification and worked out the profit and loss on the Crest and Crest-Bred sections, taking into consideration half prize money for under eight entries, with the following results for 1908 shows: Cheltenham, 10 classes (half prize money in three), loss 14s. 6d., average loss per class, 1s. 5½d. Nottingham, 13 classes (half money in one), loss 28s. 3d., average 2s. 1½d. Norwich, 9 classes (half money in one), loss 51s. 4½d., average 5s. 8½d. L.C.B.A., 11 classes (half money in four) loss 12s., average 1s. 1d. Gateshead, 11 open classes, taking entry fee all round at 1s. 6d., loss 17s.; average loss per class, 1s. 7d. (no half prize money). Total, 54 classes, combined loss 123s.; average loss per class, 2s. 3½d. Now, as you will see, the guarantee scheme is worked out from the above particulars, bearing in mind that all breeders have in their rooms to breed from both Crested and Crest-bred, Yellows and Buffs, cocks and hens. If a good, or as some would call it, a sporting fancier, and believing in his own judgment, he naturally thinks his birds would stand a chance, in other words, win, if shown in their own class. There are hundreds of breeders in the country who have the birds at hand ready to show (given the classes); but how many have a clear body Crest bred with a dark cap good enough for exhibition? I question if there are enough to fill a class in the whole of Britain, and I think it is these side lights, or oddments, which kill classification and competition, consequently the giving of a good plain classification for birds which all breeders must possess before they can breed this variety for exhibition is the way to fill classes. So I submitted the following classification and scheme of guarantees, which was unanimously adopted at the last annual meeting of the Crested Canary Club:—

To induce show committees to give the classification of the Crested C.C., the C.C.C. are open to guarantee the section against loss upon payment of the fee not later than one week before the issue of schedules to the Fancy. The classification adopted by the C.C.C. is 15 classes (which is not necessarily the maximum). The minimum is 8 classes, and the C.C.C. will not give support or recognise points won at any show giving less than the said minimum of 8 classes, as drawn up by the club. The charge for guarantee will be 21/- for 8 classes, rising 2/6 per class up to 15 classes. No show taking the guarantee could be allowed to reserve any one class to themselves in the said classification. All classes having under 8 entries to be paid half prize money, example as follows:—Blankton Show. Number of Crest and Crestbred classes 10. Entry fee, 1/6. 1st prize, 10/-; 2nd, 6/-; 3rd. 4/-; 4th, 2/-. Class 1, 8 entries, 12/-, loss 10/-, full prize money. Class 2, 7 entries, 10/6, loss 6d., half money; Class 3, 18 entries, 27/-, gain 5/-, full money; Class 4, 12 entries, 18/-, loss 4s., half money; Class 5, 20 entries, 30/-, gain 8/-, full money; Class 6, 2 entries, 3/-, loss 8/-, half money; Class 7, 4 entries, 6/-, loss 5/-, half money; Class 8, 1 entry, 1/6, loss 6/6, half money; Class 9, 5 entries, 7/6, loss 3/6, half money; Class 10, 3 entries, 4/6, loss 6/6, half money. Total loss, 47/-; gain, 13/-; nett loss and liability of C.C.C., 34/-. Now, the classification is as follows (as adopted at the C.C.C. 1908 annual meeting): Buff Section, Class 1, A.V. buff, dark crest, cock. 2, ditto hen. 3, A.V. buff, clear or grizzle crest. 4, buff, clear body, dark crest. 5, A.V. buff Crestbred cock. 6, ditto, hen. Yellow Section: Class 7, A.V. yellow, dark crest cock. 8, ditto hen. 9, A.V. yell., clear or grizzle crest. 10, A.V. yell. Crestbred cock. 11, ditto hen. Young Bird Section: Class 12, A.V. buff crest. 13, ditto Crestbred. 14, A.V. yell. crest. 15, ditto Crestbred. The minimum to be not less than 8 classes. Minimum classification: Class 1, A.V. buff Crest cock. 2, ditto hen. 3, A.V. buff Crestbred cock. 4, ditto hen. 5, A.V. yell. Crest. 6, A.V. yell. Crestbred. 7, A.V. Crest, young birds. 8, A.V. Crestbred, young birds.

The Shows.

NEWMILNS.

The Newmilns O.S. held their Annual Open Show on September 25th, in the Morton Hall, which is all that one could wish for a bird show, being roomy and free from draughts. Too much credit cannot be given to the management for the way they carried the event through, and Mr. Nisbet (President) and Mr. Mair (the secretary) had everything well in hand; and we must add our congratulations to others. The entries of Scotch Fancies were not up to the usual, but the quality was good. Borders were out in strong numbers, and the type and quality were all there, the judge having some difficulty in separating the winners. Norwich were not so strong, but good. Britishers were present in excellent numbers. The judges were Messrs. J. Hannay, J. Kennedy and J. B. Y. Murdoch, whose decisions met with approval, no grumbling being heard. There was a large turn-out of visitors in the afternoon, many well-known faces at the shows being seen.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Second annual exhibition and competition held in the Drill Hall, Grindlay-street, Edinburgh, 25th September. It will be in the recollection of the Fancy that the Association was reconstructed over a year ago, when the rules, etc., were altered; the movement resulted in a large increase to the membership, which this year shows a very satisfactory advance. The total is 185. The entries numbered 319, slightly lower than last year's, due, no doubt, in some measure to the early date of show. The Hon. Secretary and Treasurer is Mr. J. R. Meikle, to whom the proceedings were a great credit. The committee were: Messrs. J. Dalgleish, J. McLennan, and A. Paterson. Auditors, Messrs. M. Petrie, J. Sinclair, and W. Whitefield. The Scots Fancy judges were Messrs. M. D. Brown (Edinburgh), G. Fulton (Partick), A. Hamilton (Caldercruix), and P. McDougall (Edinburgh). The Belgian judge was Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). President Drysdale and the acting committee, besides the Secretary, are to be congratulated upon the ample arrangements made. Visitors turned out in large numbers. The exhibits were arranged to perfection, and many well-known faces in the Fancy world were to be seen; amongst others, Messrs. James Thomson, J. Hogg (Oakley), James Ronaldson (Belfast), F. Strathearn (Alloa), and J. Greig (Aberdeen). With a feeling of regret one well-known figure was missed—the late Harry McDougall, who did so much in his day for the Fancy; he was one whose memory still holds a hallowed place in the hearts of fanciers who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. As was expected, there were one or two surprises. When the judging was over, and that in good time, it was found a new record had been created. Mr. D. Black's (Govan) buff pied hen again won the Blue Ribbon, thus creating the record of winning three Derbys in succession, and in each case, cup and gold medal. Needless to say, Mr. Black's record success was most popular, and was received with every satisfaction. Mr. McLennan was again runner-up, and was winner of silver medal in the Belgian classes. The Belgians were a disappointing collection. Mr. Fairley (Coatbridge), a well-known breeder of Belgians, was well to the front. The first Belgian hen was a typical bird, and when finished in the moult will be sure to be heard of again. Several promising birds belonging to this same breeder were back in the moult. The cup in the Belgian class was won by Mr. J. Greig (Aberdeen) with a fine cock bird of good size. The quality all through was excellent, some typical birds being staged. The prize cards were of a new design in leather, and were most artistic. One feature worthy of mention was the erection of a board giving in detail a list of the winners for the benefit of the visitors, who appreciated the idea very much.

SCOTS YELL. CK., CL, ETC. (26): 1, J. D. Maxwell, foul cock, excellent merit, fine style, good reach and wings; 2, W. McClure, good head and drive, barely finished in moult; 3, J. A Simple Detachable Cage-Front.

Sent by Mr. P. Suter, Headley, near Liphook, Hants.

Enclosed is what I consider a simply made and detachable cage-front. Having made a front I cut two small holes on either side (as shown in A. A.) large enough for a ½-in. staple to pass through. Then, placing the front in position on the cage I drive in the staples leaving enough of them projecting to permit of a small wire nail being passed through to hold the front in place. If one or two small nails are driven into the cage with heads projecting ½in., they prevent the front fitting close to the cage, and so save a lot of trouble with red mite.—P. SUTER.

A Safety Door Catch.

The sketch below shows a method for preventing the loss of a bird. It has saved me more than one, and I thought it would be useful to other readers. It consists of a piece of wire soldered on to the wire above the door so that the bent end rests on the top of the door. It prevents a bird from getting out should the cage fall upside down, and at the same time the door can be opened in the usual way. The bent piece of wire is depicted at the bottom of the sketch which shows it in position, and needing to be pressed down in order to allow the door to open.—A. A. CAUSE.

Heavy Haul by Burglars.

A Caution and a Reward.

On Monday night, September 27th, between 8 and 10.30 o'clock, as Mr. M. Dawson, an old fancier, and member of the Crook Original Cage Bird F. and F. Society, was attending a meeting, some person or persons broke into his bird-house, containing nearly 100 fine specimens, and got clear away with about 20 of the best birds in the collection, including Crests, Crestbreds, Yorkshires, Norwich, a Bullie, and a Bramblefinch. The matter was at once placed in the hands of the police, and fanciers are warned against purchasing birds from this district. The above society, writes Mr. A. Bowes, 15, Wilson Street, Crook, Durham, offer £1 reward for any information leading up to the recovery of the missing birds or the arrest of the thieves.

CELEBRATING A JUBILEE.

THE FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY OF... PLYMOUTH SHOW.

An Interesting Story of the Long and Honourable Career of the Western Counties O.S.

On October 19 and 20 next, the "Jubilee" Plymouth Show will be held by the Western Counties O.S., who this year are straining every nerve to achieve a success befitting the occasion and their long and honourable record. To mark this interesting event—in some of its circumstances unique—the present able and popular secretary, Mr. Thos. Pope, has very kindly compiled a record of the "olden times" of the W.C.O.S., which we have pleasure in putting before our readers. We would, in conclusion, ask them to accord a generous measure of support to this fiftieth venture, and so embark the Plymouth fanciers upon a bright future which may, we trust, hold for them a brilliant centenary.—EDITOR.

The cage bird fanciers of Plymouth are proud of their society, for this year is its Jubilee, and what is more, the Western Counties O.S. is the first society to celebrate such an event. True, the Crystal Palace held its fiftieth show last February, but the Palace shows have not all been held under the auspices of the same society, whilst the Plymouth show has always been run by the W.C.O.S.

A Secretary in 1872.

Fifty years ago can hardly be said to be prehistoric times, but it is a far cry in the cage bird Fancy. Fifty years ago there were few railway facilities, and no Press confined to the Fancy, these making it an utter impossibility to get exhibits from any distance; but there is no doubt that fifty years ago the W.C.O.S. did hold a show of cage birds, and has continued to do so up to this present time. Although no actual records exist of these early shows, there is living in Plymouth now a gentleman (Mr. W. H. Harper), who was Secretary to the society in 1872, and who remembers the earlier shows before he took office. These shows were local, of course, and the varieties exhibited were but few, mainly consisting of Mules, British, and what were described as common Canaries; and the great endeavour of the members was to produce the elusive clear Goldfinch-Mule by the method of in-breeding for sib hens.

When having a chat a few weeks ago for the purposes of this article with Mr. Harper, I was very interested to hear from him that his opinion was then, and is now, that the Clear Mule is a freak of nature, and that all sib breeding is waste of time—an opinion, I believe, held by others in the Fancy at the present time.

If the Jubilee of the W.C.O.S. had arrived a few years sooner it would have been possible to have had information first-hand from one who probably was the leading spirit in the starting of the society, viz., Mr. James Doel, one of the best-known men in the West of England, and one who was nearly 100 years old when he died. "Jimmie" Doel, as he was familiarly called, was a keen bird fancier, and it was at his house, the "Prince George Hotel," that the society's meetings were always held. If there was a good bird to be had anywhere in the district "Jimmie" would always be after it. In this respect a story is told by Mr. Harper of how the other members tried to get the better of him (Mr. Doel) and failed. It appears that a real tip-top Mule was for sale, and a few of the members decided to purchase the bird "on the quiet," and allow one of them to show it as a surprise packet. The show day arrived, and the bird was exhibited, but in Mr. James Doel's name.

Only Three Survivors.

In 1872 Mr. W. Radmore, well known as a Crest breeder and judge, joined the society, and it is to him I am indebted for the following account of the doings of the W.C.O.S. at that period. Mr. Radmore said that when he joined the society in 1872 the membership was fifteen, and of these there are but three alive at the present time. Mr. James Doel was the largest exhibitor, taking all the first and second prizes, and leaving the thirds to be fought for amongst the rest of the members. There were always three judges, who collectively judged all classes. For many years in succession the judges were—Messrs. John Edwards, Richard May, and Philip Hancock, all of whom are now dead.

The method of entrance was very primitive; no entry forms were issued, nor were entrance fees paid; neither were the cages numbered. Exhibitors would stage their own birds, having previously written their names on the inside of an envelope, which was sealed and tied to the cage. If the bird got a prize the judge would open the envelope, and if not approved of the class was rejudged. At the close of the show exhibitors would gather up their own cages. At this early date we used to have exhibited by Mr. Doel all his Crystal Palace winners—Belgians, Norwich, and Mules. Yorkshires, Lizards, Cinnamons and Crests were never exhibited or kept in this district.

A Hot Time.

In 1874 Mr. Radmore purchased and exhibited in Plymouth the first Crested Norwich that was shown in the district; this bird was the foundation of his stud of Crests, and to that variety he is staunch even to the present day. Mr. Halse, who for many years later was the secretary (for twelve years), and mainstay of the W.C.O.S., joined the society in 1874, as also did Mr. Steer, who is still a member. From 1876 the shows began to grow in importance, and were held in the Assembly Rooms of the Royal Hotel; and at one of these particular exhibitions a Crest was shown by Mr. Radmore which created a mild sensation. The bird in question was a Dark-crested Yellow, cayenne fed, and up to that time the hottest-coloured specimen ever seen in Plymouth. It took premier honours in its class, much to Mr. Doel's chagrin. Allegations of staining were advanced, and Mr. Doel tested the bird with a liquid before the committee, but he failed to remove any colouring matter. On the next day the bird was taken to a prominent chemist in the town, who certified that whatever caused the colour of the plumage was administered through the blood. Up to this time cayenne feeding had been little known in the society.

During the next two or three years, through jealousy amongst the members, the society suffered somewhat of an eclipse, and only by the tenacity of Mr. Radmore, who was then chairman, was the old ship kept afloat. At times the monthly meetings were reduced, only the Chairman being present, and at the best six or seven members constituted the meetings; and the shows, too, dropped back to purely society exhibitions. But with Mr. Thos. Bryant as secretary things began to look up, and in 1880 an open show was held at the Plymouth Guildhall in connection with the Chrysanthemum Society's show.

The Revival.

Two years later, during the secretaryship of Mr. Martin, the members were very anxious to get the late Mr. W. A. Blakston to judge, and funds being low, a few of the committee subscribed five guineas to pay his expenses from Sunderland, the show at that time being held at the Royal Hotel Assembly Rooms. This was the first time the show was adjudicated upon by a judge from an entirely different district. One of those who took a leading part in this innovation was Mr. R. B. Tope, the well-known Crest breeder and judge, who was then a novice, and had just commenced his membership of the society, which has continued to the present day.

There have been many members of the W.C.O.S. in the later eighties, and early nineties, who have won great honours on the show bench, prominent among them being Messrs. Kent and Langman, whose Norwich Plainheads were at that time practically unbeatable. The two Yellows shown at the L. and P. O.S. show will long be remembered by those fortunate enough to see them; and their "Fiery Snowball" hen was in her day about the best Buff Norwich existent. Messrs. Findlay and Holman staged some Crests which were second to none, and the "Prince of Wales," shown by the latter gentlemen, is spoken of at the present time as a bird hardly ever surpassed.

Mr. Radmore's Crests were known throughout the length and breadth of the land, many enthusiasts paying a visit to Plymouth immediately before the show season started each year, to secure the probable winners. The late Mr. W. H. Halse (who joined the society, as stated above, in 1874) was a well-known all round judge, and relinquished the office of secretary to the society in 1896 through illness.

Bullie "Takes the Biscuit."

We have a Bullfinch which is very tame. One day my brother gave it a piece of hard biscuit, and Bullie tried hard to eat it, but found it too much for him. What do you think he did? He went up to the drinker which is outside the cage, and dipped the biscuit in the water for half a minute until it was soft enough to eat, and then he opened his mouth for more. Don't you think that this bird really does "take the biscuit?"—Sent by Ada Coleman (age 11), 27, Railway Street, Hertford.

*A Couple of Parrots.

A tradesman who kept a shop in Old Bailey, just opposite to Newgate prison, London, possessed two Parrots, one Grey and the other Green. When a knock was heard the Green Parrot would speak, but when the bell was rung the Grey answered. One day the Parrots were hung outside the first floor window, hidden from anyone approaching the door. A person knocked at the street door. "Who's there?" said the Green Parrot. The man replied, "The man with the leather." The Parrot answered, "O! O!" After some time the man again knocked. "Who's there?" "Who's there?" cried the man; "why don't you come and open the door?" "O! O!" repeated the Parrot. The man then rang the bell. "Go to the gate," said the Grey Parrot. "What gate?' cried the man, not seeing anyone. "Newgate!" cried the Grey Parrot.—Taken from "Stories of Animals" R. Reader (age 13), 70, Bournemouth Road, Merton Park, S.W.

*A True Story of a Sparrow.

A young Sparrow happening to see a window open flew into the house quite unaware of what it was doing. The woman in the house put the bird into a cage and hung it inside the window. The mother bird hearing the young one chirping flew round about the window for nearly two hours. At last the woman took out the cage and put it on the ground. She opened the door, and the old bird went into it, and afterwards flew away quite happy with the young one.—George Davie, 4, Station Street, Renton, Dumbartonshire.

Some time ago, writes Mr. W. S. Negus, I wrote announcing that owing to my having to take up residence at Abergavenny, I was obliged to resign the office of secretary to the Cardiff and Dis. C.B.S., but that I intended taking my stock of Yorkshires with me. This I have managed to do successfully. My new address is 4, Monmouth Road, Abergavenny. Will fanciers who have purchased a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL please make this correction?

Will secretaries of shows kindly send me schedules, writes Mr. F. Marsh, 1, Nicholson Street, Deeplish, Rochdale.

Mr. W. H. Vale has kindly offered a box of cigars to the member of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A. gaining most points at Dulwich O.S. show, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers.

Your paper, CAGE BIRDS, is always a source of pleasure to me, but when I got my copy this week and saw you had honoured my birds by a place for their picture on the frontispiece, I felt more pleased than ever. I had only been in the Cinnamon Fancy one year, when I bred the birds that did so well for me. The unflighted cock was out five times and stood 1st Gt. Harwood, 3rd Accrington, and 5th at the Palace in the Champion Class, and it now looks better than ever. The buff hen I had only out twice, 2nd Manchester. My yellow stood 1st and 2nd at Sunderland. I have some very promising young from her this time. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—W. T. HILL (Levenshulme).

Edinbro' "Metropolitan" Echoes

That the show was a grand success; that the exhibits were a grand lot; that the Derby hen has made a record, winning three Derbys in succession and three cups and gold medals; that she is expected to add Paisley and Glasgow to the list; bravo, Davie, and what about the other "Guid Yui" at hame?; that the Derby winner is the most popular man in the Fancy; that his friends are jubilant at his success; that it is doubtful if they all are; that president Dalgleish was in good form; that his heart is in the hobby; that secretary J. R. Meikle was happy; that his board was a good idea; that all said so, and appreciated his forethought; that the judges got through in good time; that the awards met with general satisfaction; that the Belgian Fancy are becoming a rarity; that the Glasgow Southern Cup may go to Patrick, some say to Dennistoun, others Corkerhill, and what about Belgrove?—"SCOTCH FANCY."

Fanciers' Autumn Ramble.

The London and Counties O.S. autumn ramble takes place on Sunday next, October 3rd, writes Mr. R. J. Pretty, who has charge of the arrangements. Train leaves Marylebone (Great Central) at 9.30 a.m. for Aylesbury, each member taking his own ticket (cheap return 3s. 3d.). Hot lunch will be supplied at "The White Hart," in that old-fashioned village of Quainton, Bucks, at noon. We then proceed across the Quainton Hills, on the top of which we can overlook the whole of Aylesbury Vale; also get a view of Oxford and the surrounding country. Proceeding down the other side, we get to Hogshaw, where there is an abundance of teazle growing (bring big bags this time). We then proceed across country, arriving at Botolph Claydon for tea. Returning from Grandboro' Road by the 6.20 train, we arrive at Baker Street at 8.10. Friends are invited. Will any who would like to accompany the party communicate with me at 6, Old Burlington Street, W.

Club Reports.

KILSYTH F.A.

At the meeting on September 23rd, the president, Mr. Hardie, in the chair, it was reported that Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch) would judge the Canary classes, and Mr. J. R. Burnett (Govan) the British bird classes, at our show on December 18th. The classification was revised, and 17 classes allocated to Norwich and B.F. Canaries, and 11 for British and Foreign birds.—A. D. DUNCAN, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting held September 25th, at Swan Hotel, Fountain-street, Manchester. Mr. James Lyons presided, and a good muster of members from nearly all parts of Lancashire attended. After the general business a discussion on judges and their methods of judging took place. A novice judging competition was arranged to take place at our next (October) meeting. A very enjoyable evening was spent, which passed away all too quickly.—ANDREW PERCIVAL, Hon. Sec.

RUTHERGLEN AND DIS. O.A.

Monthly meeting held September 20th, Mr. Robert Livingstone presiding. Mr. Lappin reported re catalogues, and it was agreed that we issue them for the show. The following members were appointed as committee to look after advertisements: Messrs. McAnlay, Hutchison, Bennett and McNair. It was agreed that the show be kept open till 7 p.m., so that there will be no disappointment to intending visitors.—FRANK WILSON, Sec.

GREENWICH & DEPTFORD C.B.S.

At the extraordinary meeting held on September 23rd, the schedule for the seventh Annual Show was adopted. Twenty-eight classes have been given to the Open Section, and the prize money is guaranteed. Amersham Hall, New Cross, has been engaged for November 18th and 19th, and being free from draughts and well lighted, is admirably adapted for bird shows, and we are looking forward to a bumping entry. Will members and friends do their utmost to secure entries, and so make it a great success?—F. W. HAMER, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held September 22nd at headquarters, the chairman (Mr. Almond) presiding. Correspondence was read by the secretary from several specialist clubs regarding patronage, etc., for our forthcoming show. The following additional clubs are giving us their patronage: The N.P.C., B.F.C.C., E. and W.B.F.C.C., C.C.C., F.B.C., and the U.K.B.C.A., making a total of twelve clubs' support. The drawing up of the schedule: It was decided to give 82 open classes this year, so that fanciers will see we are again catering for another "Palace of the North." It will be interesting for some of our friends to know that we are giving four classes to the "King of the Fancy," and trust the Belgian exhibitors will send a good entry. Will those members who have not yet paid their subscriptions kindly do so as soon as possible, as it will save a lot of unnecessary expense and trouble?—G. BUCK, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held on September 23rd, Mr. Fry in the chair. Present: Messrs. Rooney, Sheridan, Huggard, Dowling, McDonnell, Callaghan, Holly, Stewart, Gillen, Birse, Lea and Turley. With regard to the report in your last issue, the words "on behalf of the committee" should read after Mr. Birse's name as presenting cup. The society has now four cups for competition at the forthcoming show, viz.: 10-guinea challenge cup, a clocering cup, novice's cup, and a British bird cup. The first business was the election of judge, Mr. Mundell being unanimously elected. The society is now in full working order, the committee being well satisfied with the results up to the present. Five new members were proposed and elected, their names being: Messrs. R. Phillips, Stitt, Geo. Graham, Collins, and Winkup (Cork), this bringing the total number of members to 39. Our schedule will be published shortly, composed of 63 classes. One of our vice-presidents (Mr. Hawkins, of Cork) has presented the society with a donation of two guineas, to be used as the committee think fit.—D. CARROLL, Hon. Sec.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The members had a bowling match and social evening on September 18th. During the afternoon matches were played on the Wibsey Park bowling green, and at 5.30 the members were joined by the ladies for tea at headquarters, where a splendid "knife and fork" tea was partaken of. The company then sat down for an evening's music. Several members of the West Bowling Glee Union were in attendance. The Glee party sang several glees during the evening, under the conductorship of Mr. J. Parker, and songs were sung by Messrs. J. Brown, H. Barker, J. Seed, A. Atkinson, and A. Hiley. Messrs. Brown and Barker, with their humorous songs, were great favourites with the ladies, and the glees were very well rendered and received their share of applause. The time passed very quickly. Mr. J. Crowther proposed a vote of thanks to the members of the Glee party, and this was seconded by Mr. D. Thornton. Mr. A. Hiley replied on behalf of the singers, and said it gave them much pleasure to come amongst the bird men and sing, and he hoped it would not be the last time. Before parting, the Glee party sang "The Gipsies" outside the headquarters, and everybody went home thoroughly pleased.—E. W. JOHNSON, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF AND DISTRICT O.B.S.

Monthly meeting held September 16th, at Victoria Restaurant, Queen-street (which will be our meeting place until further notice, in consequence of the destruction by fire of our previous headquarters). Mr. Jones, the Chairman, in opening the meeting, referred to the removal of the Secretary (Mr. Negus) to Abergavenny, and read the formal letter of resignation, in which he intimated that he would still retain his membership. The Chairman spoke in terms of regret of the loss the Society had sustained, but was assured that Mr. Negus had the very best wishes of the members for his success in his new sphere of labour. He proposed that congratulations he conveyed to him on his promotion, which was carried unanimously. Some difficulty then arose in appointing a successor, as no member at the present time was in a position to undertake the duties. Under these circumstances, the Show Secretary, Mr. W. Sampson, agreed to resume the general work of the Society. Messrs. Hopkins and Allsopp were enrolled members, the addition of whom made up for the loss of Mr. Negus. Mr. Allsopp, of Norwich fame (late of Swindon) we are pleased to say has recently become a resident in the city. Arrangements were made for the 13th annual show at the Cory Hall. It was resolved to adhere to our policy of payment of full prize money in all classes, with no cancelling nor amalgamation. It was also decided to extend the classification in the Norwich and Yorkshire sections, the other sections, with a slight alteration, remaining as last year. Provision for novices was briefly considered, but the evening was too far spent for full discussion, and it was deferred until next meeting, when it is anticipated that novice classes will be provided.—W. SAMPSON, Sec.

Interesting Limelight Pictures.

This society, always to the fore with novelties to interest its members, had a most successful gathering at headquarters, The Sessions House Hotel, E.C., on September 20th, when a remarkably fine series of lantern slides were thrown on a screen. The lantern was manipulated by the smiling and affable Mr. R. J. Pretty. The chair was occupied by Mr. F. W. Sharpe, who, in opening the proceedings with a neat speech, put all visitors at ease by the welcome he offered them. As picture after picture was thrown upon the screen, the audience were almost spellbound, and not a sound could be heard, but the hissing of the lime light apparatus. Ably assisted by Mr. G. A. Morrison, Mr. Pretty acted in an admirable manner in the dual capacity of lecturer and operator. The pictures were such as would be of most interest to members of Ornithological Societies, and were a monumental testimony to the skill and patience of the photographer. It is impossible to enumerate them all here, but mention must be made of the Sparrow's Nest, in the nostril of one of the "Embankment lions," another in the pocket of the coat of a scarecrow, another in an old teapot, and a Robin's nest in an old, overturned flower pot. At the conclusion of this series, a surprise awaited the members, for, keeping his chef d'œuvre until the last, Mr. Pretty threw upon the sheet a photograph of the group who attended the last country ramble, and great was the pleasure of the members. The lights were now turned up, and the pianist being in readiness very soon songs were sung by Mrs. Wood, little Miss Whitehouse, and others. But when the Hon. Secretary, Mr. W. Gilbert sang "For me, for me," and "Comrades," enthusiasm reached the limit. A hearty vote of thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who had contributed, proposed by the chairman and seconded by Mr. Tringham, was accorded. He referred to the pleasure it gave him to see Mr. E. Pretty once again amongst them. Mr. E. Pretty, in reply, said how pleased he was to see the old faces, and to note that the L.C.O.S. was making headway. This brought a pleasant evening to a close.
